BOWDOIN
ALUMNUS OCTOBER 1957

Scholarships 1957-58

More than $150,000 in scholarship aid for the academic year 1957-58 has been granted to 222 Bowdoin undergraduates. Included among the recipients are 155 upperclassmen, 55 members of the Class of 1961, and 12 Bowdoin Plan students from foreign countries.

In all, better than 28% of the total student body of approximately 775 is receiving scholarship aid. The average upperclass award is $609, and the average freshman grant $829. Bowdoin's tuition is at present $800.

The College will also provide for its student body more than $50,000 in the form of undergraduate employment on the campus during the coming year, as well as another $50,000 in loans.

Of the total of 222 students receiving scholarship aid, 89 are from Maine and 62 from Massachusetts. Other states represented are New York, 12; New Hampshire and Rhode Island, 9 each; Connecticut and Pennsylvania, 5 each; Virginia, 4; Florida, 3; Delaware,

New Jersey, Ohio, and the District of Columbia, 2 each; California, Indiana, and* Vermont, 1 each.

A total of thirteen foreign students will receive scholarship aid, including three from Korea and two each from Holland and Hungary. Other countries represented are Brazil, Canada, Chile, France, Germany, and Sweden. Twelve of the thirteen will be studying under the Bowdoin Plan.

A freshman holding a prematriculation scholarship in the amount of full tuition or more will continue to receive a grant equal at least to tuition during his upperclass years, provided that he maintains an average grade of C plus or better in his freshman year and an average grade of B minus or better each year thereafter. Continuing financial need must also be demonstrated.

No deserving boy need be denied a Bowdoin education for financial reasons. If he has both the ability and the desire, nothing can keep him back.

Front and Center

On the front cover of this issue will be found a graphic portrayal of the progress which Bowdoin men have made in recent years toward assuming responsibility for the welfare of their college.

Administrators of independent colleges of liberal arts face conditions which have undergone radical changes since World War II. Dollars aren't worth what they once were; they are more difficult to come by; they don't command the wages of yore. Endowments, once considered ample, are far from being as productive as formerly. Even the doubling of student tuition has not been sufficient in the struggle to meet steadily rising costs. Bowdoin administrators, unwilling to compromise on standards, to dilute the quality of student training, could look to but one group — Bowdoin alumni. They did not look in vain.

Succeeding groups of Alumni Fund Chairmen, Directors, and Agents accepted the challenge. Through their yearly Alumni Fund, a voluntary appeal, organized and administered by and among alumni, they have vigorously set themselves to the task of keeping Bowdoin on an even keel. How well they are doing is clearly portrayed on the front cover!

The center pages of this issue report in detail what the 1956-57 Alumni Fund accomplished and who had a part in the record-breaking gift. Under the dynamic leadership of Chairman Louis B. McCarthy '19, members of the team amassed a total dollar gift of more than $155,000 from 3922 contributors. More than one half of Bowdoin alumni accepted their obligations in support of American education by participating in this gift to Bowdoin — a gift which represents the income on more than $3,000,000 of capital funds which the College does not have.

Bowdoin men are determined that the College, which did so much for them, shall not be without the wherewithal to offer like training to young men of the oncoming generations. They are confident that, in 1957-58 and in succeeding years, more and more Bowdoin alumni will place their names in these center pages.

THE COVER

The cover of this issue of the ALUMNUS pictures graphically the growth of the annual Alumni Fund since the year 1940. All Bowdoin men who have shared in this undertaking should also share in the pride and happiness which all at the College feel concerning the achievements of the Fund. As President James S. Coles phrased it in his opening chapel address on September 18, "All of us — students and faculty alike — are indebted to the alumni for their magnanimous support. No small part of Bowdoin's income growth in 1956-57 is the result of the overwhelming success of the Alumni Fund in establishing a new record of gifts, in excess of $155,000."

The ivy-covered wall used as the background on the cover was photographed by Steve Merrill '35. The picture is further proof of his artistry with a camera.

Coleman Hall

Mrs. Jane Coleman Pickard of Greenville, Del., is giving Bowdoin $450,000 with which to construct and equip its new dormitory for seventy-six students, President James S. Coles announced at the opening chapel service of the College's 156th academic year. The dormitory, which will be completed by next September, will be named Coleman Hall, in recognition of Mrs. Pickard's family, long prominent in Maine.

The Pickard family has been associated with Bowdoin for more than a century. Mrs. Pickard's husband, the late Frederick W. Pickard '94, is the greatest single benefactor in the history of the College. His gifts provided the Pickard Field, used for athletics, the Pickard Theater in Memorial Hall, the Charles Weston Pickard Professorships of Chemistry, and the Pickard Book Fund for the Library. He also supported a program of teaching fellowships in modern languages and contributed generously to the Sesquicentennial Fund.

With Mrs. Pickard, he gave the Pickard Field House. Mrs. Pickard was a generous contributor to the fund for the Arena and through the Society of Bowdoin Women recently gave Bowdoin a complete silver service embossed with the College Seal. Their son, John C. Pickard '22, has also supported the College with generosity and enthusiasm. His recent gifts have included funds for the Geology Department, a whirlpool bath for the Infirmary, and additions to the Margaret M. Pickard Scholarship Fund.

In announcing the gift, President Coles said, "It is my privilege to express the gratitude and appreciation of all Bowdoin men for this magnificent contribution. . . . It is both interesting and significant that not only did Mrs. Pickard's husband serve on the Governing Boards of the College with distinction for nearly thirty years, but also their son, John, is at present a member of the Board of Overseers. In addition, Frederick Pickard's father and grandfather both served as Overseers.

"This gift provides an auspicious start for the new Capital Funds Program of the College. Fifteen million dollars in the next decade is a large sum, and yet it is a reasonable sum."

At the groundbreaking ceremony for Coleman Hall, held on Monday afternoon, August 12, Professor Emeritus Wilmot B. Mitchell '90 turned the first spadeful of earth. The ceremony was held in honor of his 90th birthday, which took place on August 24.

Professor Mitchell is shown in this picture speaking to the audience on some of the changes which have taken place at Bowdoin since he entered as a freshman more than seventy years ago.

Bowdoin's 156th Gets Under Way

On Monday morning, September 16, a week earlier than originally planned, 192 freshmen, members of the Class of 1961, started registering as Bowdoin began its 156th academic year with an enrollment of about 775 students. Dormitory rooms were ready for occupancy on the Saturday before, when anxious parents accompanied excited freshman sons to Brunswick. They all met President and Mrs. Coles, as well as other members of the Faculty, and attended a Parents' Forum, designed to answer many of the questions that always come up.

Massachusetts with 69 students and Maine with 54 have the most men in the Class of 1961, with eighteen other states and two foreign countries also represented. Connecticut has 16 men in the class, New York 15, Pennsylvania 9, Rhode Island 4, and New Hampshire, New Jersey, and Vermont, 3 each. There are two freshmen each from California, Florida, Maryland, and Ohio, and one man each from Arkansas, Colorado, Delaware, Iowa, Kentucky, Michigan, Virginia, Canada, and Spain. There are twenty-five sons of alumni in the class.

In addition to the 192 freshmen, twelve foreign students are in residence under the Bowdoin Plan, by which their expenses are shared by the College and the undergraduate fraternity chapters. Three of these men are from Korea and two each from Hungary and Holland. The other five come from Brazil, Chile, France, Germany, and Sweden.

Since the inauguration of the Bowdoin Plan in the spring of 1947, nearly one hundred different foreign students have benefited from its provisions, some for one year, some for as many as four.

Each year brings its changes — changes both among the faculty and among the buildings. This fall, for example, six men returned from leave of absence. They included Dean Nathaniel Kendrick and Professors Philip Brown, Edward Hammond, Ernst Helmreich, Myron Jeppesen, and George Quinby.

Professor Quinby, who had spent a year as Visiting Professor of American Drama at the University of Teherán in Iran, had a busy few weeks even before college opened. On September 5 and 6 he and 88-year-old Dr. Charles Lincoln '91 of Brunswick attended the national convention of Psi Upsilon fraternity, held at Hamilton College in New York. Professor Quinby continued on to Washington for two days of conferences with officials of the Department of State. On August 30, September 6, and September 13, Bowdoin men and their families who were tuned in to the Carl de Suze show (and many were) heard Professor Quinby in a tape recording made at the Educational Theatre Association conference in Boston the last week in August.

There were nine new faculty members and their wives in the receiving line at 85 Federal Street with President and Mrs. Coles on the evening of September 19 for the traditional President's Reception.

Gerard J. Brault of Chicopee Falls, Mass., has been appointed Instructor in French. He is a graduate of Assumption College in Worcester and holds a master of arts degree from Laval University in Quebec. During the past year he studied at Strasbourg University in France under a Fulbright fellowship.

Robert E. Dysinger '44 is the new Assistant Librarian, replacing John McKenna, who went to Colby as head librarian. It was a real Bowdoin-Colby switch, since Dysinger was Reference Librarian at Colby! He holds a master of arts degree from Michigan and a master of science degree in library science from the Library School of New York State College for Teachers.

John E. Frey of Chicago is serving as Instructor in Chemistry. He is a 1952 graduate of Northwestern, received a master of arts degree at the University of Illinois the following year, and in 1956 was granted the doctor of philosophy degree by the University of Chicago.

Dr. George M. Haddad of Damascus, Syria, is Visiting Professor of Near East History and Culture on the Tallman Foundation during the fall semester. Since 1953 he has been Professor of History and Chairman of the History Department at the Syrian University in Damascus.

1st Lt. Harvey B. Johns jr. is Assistant Professor of Military Science and Tactics with the Reserve Officers Training Corps unit, as is Captain Wallace J. Leahey of Lewiston. Johns is a graduate of the University of Oklahoma, and Leahey a graduate of Bates. Many Bowdoin football stalwarts of the 1946-50 era will remember "contacting" Captain Leahey when he was playing tackle for the excellent post-war Bates elevens.

Norman T. London of New York City is serving as Instructor in Speech in the Department of English. He is a 1955 graduate of New York University, from which he also received a master of arts degree earlier this year. During 1956-1957 he was an instructor in speech at N.Y.U. and also served as a student teacher in speech at DeWitt Clinton High School.

John T. Robinson is Instructor in Mathematics. A native of Baltimore, Md., he is a graduate of Johns Hopkins and also holds a master of arts degree from that institution. He has taught at Johns Hopkins, Canisius College, and the University of New Hampshire.

William D. Shipman, who is serving as Instructor in Economics, is a graduate of the University of Washington and holds a master of arts degree from the University of California in Berkeley.

Also in the line at the President's Reception were two Administrative Assistants and an Assistant Director of Admissions. Robert H. Glover '56 joined the Admissions Office staff last spring, replacing Paul V. Hazelton '42, who became Assistant Professor of Education.

The Administrative Assistants are C. Cabot Easton '48, who has been working in the office of Vice President Bela W. Norton '18 since last December 10, and Peter C. Barnard '50, who joined the Alumni Office staff on August 1. Barnard has done graduate work at Western Reserve University, Harvard, and the Bread Loaf School of English at Middlebury, from which he holds a master of arts degree. He had been a member of the faculty at the University School for Boys in Shaker Heights, Ohio, since 1951.

There are also two new Teaching Fellows in Biology, A. Allen Alexander and Daniel L. McKinley, and five new Fellows in Foreign Languages. They are Americo Guana Araya of Santiago, Chile, Mohammed Djoudi of Marrakech, Algeria, Claude Christian Miquel of Lunéville, France, Uwe Christian Kiecksee of Hamburg, Germany, and Klaus Juergen Koehler, also of Hamburg.

The Fellows in Foreign Languages program, instituted a year ago, makes possible the addition each week of two hours of aural and oral drill to the three-hour elementary courses in modern languages. Attendance is obligatory, with no required preparation. One hour of such drill is added each week to the intermediate courses.

Despite the New England-wide dry summer, the campus remains a beautiful green — this part of Maine received more rain than Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, and southern Maine. Alumni and friends of the College are always welcome. They are particularly welcome this fall to see some of the changes being made on the campus. The new dormitory south of Hyde Hall is coming along fast. The cornerstone laying ceremony will be held on Alumni Day, November 2, the day of the football game with Bates. An addition to the basement and first floor is being constructed at the Infirmary. New lighting has been installed in parts of the Library, including the main lobby, and the card catalogues have new locations.

We'll see you all on Alumni Day!

Beneath The Pines

John T. Gould, Jr. '60

If I should come out with the statement — "Secondary schools should be forbidden to teach foreign languages unless licensed to do so by the language department of a liberal arts college" — I am sure that the vast group of educators across our country would personally invite me to drop dead. And yet I think that my statement has merit. It's not that secondary schools are not teaching foreign languages the same way as Bowdoin. It's not that they are teaching them in an incorrect manner. I believe that secondary schools are making foreign languages uninviting to students.

For my freshman year at Bowdoin I registered for a French course. Someday I would like to visit France and I want to be able to order my meals in the native tongue. "You have used French as part of your entrance requirement so you must go into French 3-4," I was told. My high school offered only two years of French and I took the language my last two years so it would be fresh in my mind for college. My instructor was the U.S. History teacher, who had not taught French for twenty years. She told the principal that she did not feel qualified to teach the subject, but there were only four students in the class, so no change was made.

The class made slow progress. Two years later, all four students were graduated with a definite dislike for the French language. No feeling for languages or any reason for studying them had been conveyed to us. We knew very little French.

As I wandered into Hubbard Hall last year, my knowledge of French was nil. Needless to say, I did not know what Professor Ivy was talking about in English, let alone French, as I attended French 3-4. In this case the secondary school not only failed to instruct, but it also created a barrier between the student and the subject.

* * * * *

The old joke — "Am I glad summer vacation is over and school has started. Now I will be able to catch up on my sleep." — is not as far fetched as it might seem. To many a Bowdoin student the only time he has to apply his accumulated knowledge or to work in his chosen profession is during the summer. Everything from selling ice cream on beaches to editing a newspaper can be found on the Bowdoin summer roster.

My own summer was spent in Sherbrooke, Quebec, Canada, working for CKTS-Radio and CHLT-TV. Not only did I have a chance to study communications, but I had a chance to study the Frenchmen. One day I was stopped on the street by a five-year-old boy who asked me for directions in French. I told him in my broken French that I did not speak French easily, but that if he would repeat his question slowly, I would try to answer him. My humiliation came when he looked up at me and said, "It's okay, Mister. I speak English also. Where is the bus stop?"

A bi-lingual city contains many people who never really determine between their two languages. One of the producers at CHLT-TV told me several times that he spoke no English. One day he gave the following directions to his crew: "Trente seconds . . . dix seconds . . . cinq seconds . . . finis . . . finis . . . damn it, sign off."

One thing I noticed about Canada is that the majority of people have a great deal more respect for college and university students than is found in the United States. A person who enrolls in higher education is the hero of the neighborhood. To have an American university student (to Canadians, any school after high school is university) in their midst was a rare treat. La Tribune, Sherbrooke's French language daily, covered my arrival by saying, "John Gould vient de Portland, Me., E.U., ou il est etudiant a l'université."

* * * * *

Remember that Homecoming is on November 2. The football gents take on Bates — varsity, that is. As usual, the undergraduates are looking forward to meeting the alumni. Be sure to tell Bill Morgan about tickets.

On The Campus

It promises to be another busy year musically at the College. The Glee Club has sixteen concerts scheduled, beginning with two appearances in Massachusetts, the first on November 22 at Milton High School and the second on November 23 at Beverly High School.

Handel's "Messiah" will be presented again this year at the First Parish Church, following a year's absence. Joining with the Glee Club and Professor Frederic Tillotson at that time will be Westbrook Junior, Wheelock, and Pembroke Colleges as well as the Brunswick Choral Society.

Mrs. Manja Mourier, Danish soprano, will present the first concert of the fall season on October 14. The Bowdoin Music Club, under the direction of Professor Robert Beckwith, will present a chamber music concert on November 20, a madrigal concert on February 19, and the premiere of a new opera by Fred Wilkins '56 next May.

The Chapel Choir will present a joint concert of a major musical work in March. It has also been invited to sing in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul in Boston on November 24 and in the Church of the Advent in Boston on March 2.

The Brunswick Choral Society, also under Professor Beckwith's direction, will sing the Schubert Mass in G Major for a Sunday vesper service on October 20.

Football 1957

Fifty-six varsity football candidates were invited back for early practice by Coach Adam Walsh. About forty-five men reported during the week beginning with Labor Day.

Included in this year's squad are eighteen lettermen, six of them backs. It is expected that there will be a good deal of shifting of men among positions because there is little depth, particularly in the line.

Five sophomore backs are counted upon for help as Bowdoin returns to the T-formation used by Adam Walsh almost exclusively since he came to the lair of the Polar Bear more than twenty years ago. Last season, because of the lack of speed in the backfield, he shifted the team to a single-wing formation.

The sophomore backs are John Condon of Brockton, Mass., George Entin of New York City, Bob Hawkes of Danvers, Mass., Bob Kennedy of Reading, Mass., and Terry Sheehan of Gardiner. Entin, Hawkes, and Sheehan, incidentally, came to Bowdoin as Alumni Fund Scholars a year ago.

The 1958 schedule includes seven games, none of which will be easy. The team should be better than last year's, however; after only one victory in twenty-one games over the past three seasons, the only way is up!

The Polar Bears open against Tufts in Medford on September 28. Then on successive Saturdays they face Trinity, Amherst, Williams, Colby, Bates, and Maine. The Trinity, Colby, and Bates games will be in Brunswick, and the other four away. The Bates game on November 2 will be Alumni Day, when the cornerstone for the new dormitory will be laid.

Hupper Gift

Roscoe H. Hupper '07 of New York City and Tenants Harbor has given the College a valuable letter written by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow on August 1, 1834, to a friend in Malaga, Spain. A member of the Board of Overseers since 1938, Mr. Hupper has long been a collector of Longfellow items, and this latest gift is one of many he has made to the Longfellow collection at Bowdoin.

Longfellow's letter, written while he was Professor of Modern Languages and Librarian at Bowdoin, makes amusing comments about the Maine weather, referring to a temperature of 98 degrees one day and "shivering over a fire" the next.

ROTC Summer Camp

The annual ROTC summer camp at Fort Devens, Mass., was quite an occasion for Bowdoin this year. Assistant to the President Philip S. Wilder '23 represented the College in July and commented upon his return, "For General Willard G. Wyman's visit every Bowdoin cadet wore a white band on his helmet liner and the General found time to speak to a great many of them. Had a big Bowdoin party at the Officers Club on Wednesday evening. Lt. Richard Gibson '54 was with the Transportation Corps 'Circus' at camp. Captain Bob Rudy '46 was at camp and at the party. He is working for his master's degree at the University of Rhode Island."

Bowdoin's ROTC unit is becoming well acquainted with General Wyman, a member of the Class of 1920. At Commencement he delivered the main address at the ROTC commissioning ceremony for sixty-four seniors. A four-star general, he is currently Commanding General of the Continental Army Command, with headquarters at Fort Monroe, Va.

Alumni Clubs

BRUNSWICK

The Bowdoin Club of Brunswick held a seashore outing on August 7 at Estes Beach in South Harpswell. Fifty-five alumni, faculty members, wives, and assorted children and friends were counted by Alumni Secretary Seward Marsh '12, but this tally is not certified as being one hundred per cent correct because many members of the group were busily in motion, moving to and from the steaming pile of freshly cooked lobsters! In view of the fact that this shore get-together was the first such Brunswick meeting in many years and that this was a between-seasons date which found many people out of town, the club officers were very pleased to have the large and contented showing that appeared!

CENTRAL NEW YORK

A new Bowdoin club is off to a roaring start! Enthusiastic club Secretary and Council Member Tom Chapman '50 attended the June meeting of the Alumni Council and won official recognition for the new group, which is located in central New York State. To show how well-planned and well-organized the initial actions of this group are, we are happy to quote the major portion of Secretary Chapman's August 28th letter to his "constituents".

"On June 24 Club President Bob Bryant '47 and Secretary Tom Chapman '50 met with Hubert Shaw, Director of Admissions, at the home of Charles Sawyer '28 in Oneida.

Peter C. Barnard '50, Administrative Assistant in the Alumni Office. Since his arrival on the scene on August 1, he has taken over from the Managing Editor the writing of both the Class Notes and the Alumni Clubs sections of the ALUMNUS. Effective with this issue, he is responsible for those two important segments of the magazine.

For the benefit of alumni who may not know the inner workings of Getchell House, Administrative Assistant Robert M. Cross '45 has duties with both Alumni Secretary Seward J. Marsh and Vice-President Bela W. Norton. He has been at Bowdoin in one capacity or another since 1950. Administrative Assistant C. Cabot Easton '48 has been a member of the staff of the Vice President's office since last December. Mr. Barnard's duties are entirely with the Alumni Office.

Also present was Jack O'Donnell '37 of Oneida.

"First order of business was the naming of temporary officers as recommended by the Alumni Secretary. The President and the Secretary had been selected at the May 4 meeting, and it was decided to nominate Richard Herrick '50 as Vice President and Jack O'Donnell as Treasurer. This slate of officers will be presented at the next meeting of the club for its approval."

(The announcement goes on to tell of plans to hold the September 28th meeting at Martin's, a restaurant centrally located between Cicero and Syracuse which offers the club economical plates at two dollars apiece. The Secretary continues by saying that Professor Herbert Ross Brown and Admissions Director Shaw have been scheduled as the featured guests and speakers from the College.)

"Mr. Shaw suggested that secondary school principals and guidance counselors be invited to the club meeting. He explained that we can develop a good working relationship with these people so that the cream of the secondary school boys will at least have some contact with Bowdoin through them. This system has worked very well in the Cleveland and Pittsburgh areas."

(Refreshments were scheduled from 6:30 until the dinner hour, 8:15, and Secretary Chapman closed by hoping that as many of the area's alumni would attend as possible.)

NEW YORK

Club Secretary George Griggs '44 was in the Alumni Office in late August to visit and to give a verbal report of the New York club's recent activities and plans. At the time he seemed anxious to secure big turn-outs from the greater New York area for both the Amherst game (Oct. 12 at Amherst) and the Williams game (Oct. 19 at Williamstown).

Plans for a possible fall meeting in the New York area were still hanging fire, but Secretary Griggs wanted to make certain that all Bowdoin men who will be in the area then remember to keep the last Friday in January open for the big annual dinner. (The hour, the place, and the program will be announced later.)

OREGON

The Alumni Office received a note from Convener Dan McDade '09 in September. Although the Oregon group has not met recently, Convener Dan had high hopes for an October get-together. (The editorial mouths were set a-watering by one prognostication: "Might get Frank Plaisted to kill a beef from his herd and have Norm Workman as chef — he's mighty good on figures." When does the next plane leave for Oregon?)

PHILADELPHIA

Eb Ellis '44, club vice president, wrote at the end of August, "We had, in addition to our annual meeting here in Philadelphia, a very successful one in June. It was a stag affair and was kept at a low cost. We had about 25 there to enjoy it. Thus, we are having another one on Thursday night, October 17, and we will try to establish it as an annual occurrence to have stag dinners in June and October in addition to the regular January meeting with men and women attending."

RHODE ISLAND

Just as we were getting material ready to go to press, we were happy to receive a good, long report from Secretary Walt Donahue '44. The Rhode Island group appears to be quite active, and by way of proof, we offer a substantial part of Walt's report.

"Plans have not been completed yet, but I believe we will continue to hold our monthly luncheon get-togethers on the second Wednesday of every month at the University Club in Providence." (The last time the editors knew about this, Rhode Island Bowdoinites were flying a large, handsome Bowdoin flag from the University Club flagpole. When you're in Providence, look for it, but if you don't see it flying, go in anyway and ask about that Bowdoin luncheon!)

"The picnic of August 24 took place at Marshall Swan's house in Barrington. Marshall's place is located right on the bay, and it was a perfect spot for such an event. Counting various Bowdoin men, their wives, and their children, the total attendance must have been somewhere around 40.

"Everyone chipped in $1.00, which paid for the food, including hot dogs, rolls, salad, potato chips, doughnuts, soft drinks, and another type of beverage that came in a can and foamed when it was poured. All in all, everyone had a very good time, and Marshall Swan was most certainly a very excellent host."

Necrology

1883 GEORGE BENJAMIN SWAN died on February 8, 1946, in Whittier, Calif., according to word recently received in the Alumni Office. Born on March 1, 1862, in Richmond, he was for many years following his graduation from the College a school teacher in Montana. He later went into business in that state and lived in the towns of Armington and Spion Kop. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Delta Kappa Epsilon.

1895 THOMAS VINCENT DOHERTY, Class Secretary for 1895 and a lawyer in Houlton for more than fifty years, died there on August 28, 1957, at the age of 87. Born on April 5, 1870, in Woodstock, New Brunswick, he prepared for Bowdoin at Ricker Classical Institute and following his graduation studied law with the firm of Williamson & Burleigh in Augusta. From 1897 until 1900 he conducted a law practice in Caribou, then moved to Butte, Mont., where he remained until 1903, when he returned to Houlton. He lived in Houlton for the rest of his life, retiring from active practice in 1949.

Mr. Doherty served as a trustee of the University of Maine, as a director and vice president of the First National Bank of Houlton, and as president of the Aroostook Bar Association. He was a member of the Bowdoin Alumni Council from 1925 to 1928 and at one time was Judge of Probate for Aroostook County. On April 22, 1903, he was married to Lucy F. Tenney, who died before him. Surviving are a nephew, Louis W. Doherty '19 of Longmeadow, Mass., and a grandniece, Mrs. Anna Rush of Houlton. He was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon.

1897 CHARLES SUMMERS SEWALL, retired educator, died in his sleep at his home in Wiscasset on September 8, 1957, at the age of 82. Born on May 1, 1875, in Wiscasset, he prepared at the local high school and following his graduation from Bowdoin became principal of Wiscasset Academy. In 1905 he became superintendent of schools in Eastport and Lubec and in 1907 in Oakland and Fairfield. In 1908 he returned to Wiscasset, where he became Assistant General Manager of the Wiscasset, Waterville, and Farmington Railway. In 1918 he again accepted the principalship of Wiscasset Academy and served in that position until his retirement in 1944.

Founder and a past president of the Wiscasset Academy Association, Mr. Sewall was for many years Wiscasset correspondent for the Portland papers. He was a botanist and made two expeditions to the Arctic with Donald B. MacMillan '98. He was elected to the vestry of St. Philip's Episcopal Church in Wiscasset in 1905, was named junior warden in 1924 and senior warden in 1934, and retired in 1955 after a half century of service. He also served his town as town clerk and tax collector for many years and was clerk of the Wiscasset Water Company. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Grace York Sewall, whom he married on May 27, 1930, in Bath; two daughters, Mrs. Kenneth Burnham of Elmhurst, N. Y., and Mrs. Boylston Hutchins of Wiscasset; two sons, Rufus of Beaufort, N. C., and Egbert of Auburn; twelve grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. His fraternity was Delta Kappa Epsilon.

1905 COLONEL ARTHUR OSMON DAVIS, a retired Army physician, died on September 7, 1957, at Letterman General Hospital in San Francisco, Calif. Born on July 20, 1880, in Peabody, Mass., he prepared at Bridgton High School and attended Bowdoin as a special student before entering the Maine Medical School, from which he received his M.D. degree in 1906. He practiced for two years in Bridgton before entering the Army as a first lieutenant in the Medical Corps. During World War I he served in Germany and following the war was medical officer at Fort Ethan Allen in Vermont. In 1926 he was transferred to the West Coast to serve as medical officer for Alcatraz, when it was a military prison. He was later stationed at Fitzsimmons General Hospital in Denver, Colo., where he was executive officer at the time of his retirement in 1936. He had made his home in Palo Alto, Calif., since that time.

Colonel Davis is survived by his wife, Alice; three sons, Everett of Palo Alto, Paul and Arthur jr., both of Del Norte, Colo.; and a daughter, Mrs. Kermit H. Gates of Coral Gables, Fla.; a brother, Theodore of Raymond; a sister, Miss Frances Davis of Boston; and ten grandchildren. He was a member of Theta Delta Chi.

Word has also been received of the death of the following Alumni. Appropriate notice will appear in the December Alumnus.

James G. Finn '05

1911 HAROLD VINCENT BICKMORE, M.D., a physician in Portland for nearly forty-five years, died suddenly at his home in Cape Elizabeth on September 9, 1957. Born on February 24, 1889, in South Thomaston, he prepared at Cony High School in Augusta and following his graduation from the College entered the Maine Medical School, from which he received his M.D. degree in 1914. He interned at the former Maine Eye and Ear Infirmary in Portland before setting up his practice in that city.

A member of the staff of the Maine Medical Center, Dr. Bickmore was also Medical Director of the Associated Hospital Service of Maine, a former member of the Portland School Committee, former city physician, and at the time of his death, county physician. During World War I he served as a captain in the Army Medical Corps and then for three years was a member of the faculty of the Maine Medical School. He was a Fellow of the American College of Physicians and a Diplomate of the American Board of Internal Medicine. Widely known in Masonic circles, he was a member of the Supreme Council, 33rd Degree Masons, and past Grand Commander of the Grand Commandery of Maine. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Doris Griffin Bickmore, whom he married in 1955; a son, Harold V. Bickmore jr. of South Portland; and a daughter, Mrs. Joseph J. Flaherty of Kittery. His fraternity was Beta Theta Pi.

1912 JOHN WARREN HAMILTON died on March 21, 1957, in Brattleboro, Vt., where he had made his home for many years. Born on January 16, 1892, in Middlebury, Vt., he prepared for college at Williston Seminary in Wilbraham, Mass., and attended Middlebury College for two years before transferring to Bowdoin. During World War I he served in the Merchant Marine. He then settled down in Brattleboro, where he was engaged in farming. On December 22, 1931, he was married to Ruth Farnham Tarr. His fraternity was Delta Kappa Epsilon.

1916 ELIOT BLANCHARD SHEPARD died at his home in Weston, Mass., on September 3, 1957. He was Vice President and a Director of Shepard and Morse Lumber Co. and Vice President and Assistant Treasurer of Shepard Steamship Co. Born on April 27, 1891, in Brookline, Mass., he prepared at the Stone School in Boston and attended Bowdoin for one semester before transferring to Tufts, where he was a member of Theta Delta Chi fraternity. From 1918 until 1928 he was an electrical contractor, then went into the wholesale lumber business. He was a Mason and a member of the Beverly Yacht Club and the Weston Golf Club. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Esther Lemeris Shepard, whom he married in New York in 1916, and a daughter, Judith.

1923 CHARLES STUART LITTLE, a retired minister, died on August 8, 1957, in Monson, Mass., after a long illness. Born on February 23, 1901, in Boston, he prepared at Lincoln Academy in Newcastle. He attended Bowdoin for a year and later was a student at Bangor Theological Seminary. He served as a Congregational minister in Bristol and Newcastle for some years, until his retirement in 1943. Surviving are his sister, Mrs. George Marsh of Springfield, Mass.; and two brothers.

1953 ROBERT LANG HAPP, a member of the English Department at Culver Military Academy since 1955, died in South Bend, Ind., on August 5, 1957, after an illness of about two months. Born on December 19, 1930, in South Bend, he prepared at the South Bend Central High School. At Bowdoin he was Editor of the Quill and Associate Editor of the Orient and as a sophomore won the Hawthorne Prize for the best short story. A year later he was awarded both the Hawthorne Prize and the Bertram Louis Smith jr. Prize for excellence in English literature. He also received the Masque and Gown One-Act Play Prize for Acting. Following his graduation cum laude he studied for a year at the Harvard Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, then during 1954-55 was associated with his father in the real estate business in South Bend. He did further graduate work at Harvard in the summer of 1955 before joining the faculty at Culver.

Peter DeTroy '51, also a member of the Culver faculty, wrote last August, "At Culver Bob was known to his colleagues and students as a good English teacher with a consuming interest in modern literature and a decided penchant for F. Scott Fitzgerald. He will be missed by both students and faculty, for his influence and personality were such that wherever he was, or whatever he was doing, he reflected the Scott Fitzgerald ideal of an 'old sport' in the finest sense of the phrase."

Surviving are Bob's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Happ of South Bend; his wife, Mrs. Alice Russell Happ, whom he married in March of 1956; and a brother, William '46. He was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon.

News of the Classes

1890 Secretary, Wilmot B. Mitchell
6 College Street
Brunswick

Wilmot Mitchell was honored by being asked to address the audience and to turn the first spade of earth at the groundbreaking ceremony for Bowdoin's new dormitory. Held on Monday afternoon, August 12, just south of Hyde Hall, the exercises were well attended, and following the opening remarks and introduction by President Coles, Professor-Emeritus Mitchell delighted his audience with a talk that was both serious and humorous and that was well-laced with charming reminiscences of dormitory life in the 1880's.

1891 Secretary, Dr. Charles S. F. Lincoln
38 College Street
Brunswick

Charles Lincoln and Professor "Pat" Quinby '23 attended the national convention of Psi Upsilon Fraternity, held at Hamilton College September 5 and 6.

1895 Classmates and friends will be saddened to hear that Tom Doherty died on August 28 at Houlton. Writing of this, Sam Fraser '16 said, "He was 87 years old and a grand Bowdoin man. We are going to miss him very much."

1896 Secretary, Francis S. Dane
Lexington 73, Mass.

Francis Dane is serving as Class Secretary for 1896 until such time as the class meets to hold a regular election or to confirm him in that office.

1897 Secretary, George E. Carmichael
Wolfeboro, N. H.

Classmates and friends will grieve to hear of the death of Charles Sewall on September 8 at Wiscasset.

1899 Secretary, Edward R. Godfrey
172 Kenduskeag Avenue
Bangor

Secretary Ed Godfrey submitted the following report on the "doings" of his classmates just as the October Alumnus was going to press:

"Tom Merrill and his wife took a trip for the day, September 1, from their home in Sidney, Montana, to celebrate their 52nd wedding anniversary.

"Ned Nelson has been making Philadelphia his winter home lately, and he is presently returning there from Boothbay Harbor, where he spent the summer.

"Win Smith and his wife have completed their stay for this summer at beautiful Hebron, N. H., where they have been every summer for 41 years."

1903 Secretary, Clement F. Robinson
P. O. Box 438

Phil Clifford represented Bowdoin at the inauguration of Val H. Wilson as President of Skidmore College on October 11. Phil's daughter, Margaret Ellen, is a member of the Skidmore faculty.

Clement and Mrs. Robinson went to England last summer, for Clem was one of 500 American lawyers who attended meetings in London as official guests of the British barristers. One of the highlights of their trip was the Queen's garden party, given at Buckingham Palace in honor of the visiting American lawyers and their ladies.

In writing to the Brunswick Record in mid-summer, Clem said, "Of the hundreds of public events, it is hard to choose the most noteworthy. The Queen had a party, the Royal Ballet performed specially, the judges in their robes greeted us in Westminster Hall, the Lord Chancellor, the Prime Minister, and others spoke, and we all made countless friends. Perhaps the high spot was the formal banquet in Guildhall, with Chief Justice Warren, the Lord Chancellor, and Winston Churchill as speakers."

The Robinsons concluded their English tour by visiting in Dorset.

A Gorham High School scholarship in memory of Charles Shaw, principal of that school for 34 years, has been set up by the will of Nellie P. Nason of Gorham.

1904 Secretary, Wallace M. Powers
37-28 80th Street
Jackson Heights
New York, N. Y.

Harry Palmer has resigned as an active member of the Bowdoin College Board of Overseers and has been elected Overseer Emeritus.

1905 Secretary, Stanley Williams
2220 Waverley Street
Palo Alto, Calif.

Cope Philoon sent in the following report: "The 1905 get-together was held on the campus on August 21. Cushing, Donnell, Emery, Lewis, Philoon, White, and Woodruff, with Helen Chase, wives, and guests totaling seventeen attended. New Meadows Inn provided a private room for luncheon. Afterwards return was made to the campus for further get-together, Professor Tillotson's recital, and President and Mrs. Coles' reception. It was a perfect day and everyone seemed to enjoy the occasion.

"Leonard Pierce at the last moment reported that his legs were still a bit wobbly following his operation but that he was coming along all right."

A group of Ken Damren's friends dedicated a bronze plaque at Camp Allen in Bedford, N. H., as a memorial to him on August 4. The plaque was placed beneath his photograph at the camp. The inscription reads, "In remembrance of Kenneth H. Damren, 1882-1957, for twelve years president and beloved leader of Camp Allen — faithful and devoted friend of the blind — tireless in his efforts to make this place a haven of happiness and inspiration — his friends dedicate this memorial."

Everett Hamilton has recently bought a home at 6 Beachwood Drive, Ormond Beach, Fla.

Arch Shorey said recently, in a letter to John Frost '04, "This summer I put in five days a week at a day camp on the old Slingerland farm. . . . I sleep out tomorrow night with eight boys. Come on up." Included with Arch's letter was a clipping from an issue of the Albany Knickerbocker News which is running a series of his articles on the footpaths and hiking trails in the Albany area.

1906 Secretary, Fred E. Smith
9 Oak Avenue
Norway

Fred and Mrs. Packard vacationed during the summer in Maine, visiting Oxford, Farmington, and the coastal region.

1907 Secretary, John W. Leydon
3120 West Penn Street
Philadelphia, Penna.

The Class of 1907 continues to enjoy a grand and glorious fiftieth year! In late August John Halford sent in the following account: "Lovell, Aug. 24 — Nearly half the surviving members of a class that was graduated from college fifty years ago met today and talked about the future.

"Seventeen of the 36 living members of the Class of 1907 attended the summer reunion class picnic. It was held at Hatch's Hill, the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. John Halford.

"William Linnell, class president, welcomed the members and their families and friends. He said that the class has met 'at least 35 out of the last 50 years, and one of the members is expected to be host for the group in 1958.'

"Wilbert Snow, class poet and former governor of Connecticut, told the group, 'Pray do not sell age short.' He said that Ben Franklin, 'bowed with gout and length of days,' helped found the Republic. Grandma Moses 'started on her quest for art when seventy years were gone,' he said.

"The Class of 1907 has given $30,000 to the College in support of the Longfellow Professorship of Romance Languages to help insure future Bowdoin students of continued high quality of education.

"Roscoe Hupper, speaking for the class, presented to John Halford a hand-colored print showing the Bowdoin campus as it was in 1907.

"Mr. Hupper also gave each class member a printed copy of the proceedings of the class reunion held June 14 in Brunswick.

"Osgood Pike, William Linnell, and John Leydon of the 1907 glee club quartet, and Thomas Winchell of the glee club, sang Bowdoin songs.

"A buffet luncheon of lobster, turkey, ham, salad, vegetables, pie, a 50th reunion cake, and coffee was served in the barn, which was decorated in red and white — the 1907 class colors.

"The house at Hatch's Hill was built in 1811 by Valentine Little, first missionary in the Lovells and an ancestor of Bowdoin physicist Noel Little '17.

"Bowdoin men attending the meeting in addition to the Class of 1907 were Herbert Brown, head of the English department; Seward Marsh '12, Alumni Secretary; Philip Wilder '23, Assistant to the President; Bela Norton '18, Vice President; and Fred Tillotson, head of the music department.

"Mrs. Kenneth C. M. Sills H'52, wife of the late President Sills '01, and Mrs. Charles T. Burnett, wife of the late Professor Burnett, were also among the guests.

"The total attendance, including families and friends of the class, was 90."

Frank Gannett is back in business again. After five years of retirement, following an 18-year stint as manager of the Fyr Fyter Products Company, Frank has bought the dies and the manufacturing rights for a very ingenious, handy home gadget. Frank's "new baby" is shaped something like a rolling pin, but it's a device with many sharp teeth that's meant to be rolled over tough meat to break down the fibres and tenderize it. (One food editor points out that the Gannett gadget can be used to crumb crackers and to work designs in pastry, as well.)

1909 Secretary, Irving L. Rich
Portland 4

Dan McDade reports that his wife is back home, still recovering from her mild stroke. He writes, "I'm chief cook and bottle washer — which I'd rather do than endure day and night nurses which we had for a month."

"Had a very successful Boys' State and under separate cover am mailing copies of the Legionnaire. I got out the July issue, pinch-hitting for the ed."

"Right now am getting ready to work with county clerk in compiling jury panel for '58. Will have housekeeper while I'm at the court house — takes about three weeks."

"Daughter and four kids all OK in New Orleans with another expected in near future."

Dan continues to be very active in the American Legion. The June issue of The Oregon Legionnaire carried a long article praising him for his many years of devoted work and service in behalf of the Legion.

1910 Secretary, E. Curtis Matthews
Piscataqua Savings Bank
Portsmouth, N. H.

Bob Hale, Republican Congressman from Maine, continues to "carry the torch" on several important issues. Editorials in the Portland Press Herald plus columns by Washington correspondent May Craig tell of his great concern over the assassinations and Communist plots in Latin America, and Bob is certainly going all-out to secure effective laws to control billboards on the federal interstate highway system. (Didn't the late Kenneth Roberts H'38, a fellow State-of-Mainer, write a scathing blast on billboards in his book, Trending into Maine?) All those who love the Maine scenery will appreciate anything Bob can do!

Bob is also sponsoring another bill in Congress, one that will pass title of old Fort Preble from the Federal Government to the State of Maine. Such enactment would, among other things, provide a permanent home for the State Vocational School.

1911 Secretary, Ernest G. Fifield
30 East 42nd Street
New York, N. Y.

Classmates and friends will grieve to hear of the death of Harold Bickmore on September 9 at Cape Elizabeth.

Hugh Hastings has been confirmed in his appointment as judge of the Fryeburg municipal court.

114 Atlantic Avenue
Boothbay Harbor

Jim Crane is not dead, as reported in the June Alumnus. His sister writes that he is "permanently in a hospital."

1913 Secretary, Luther G. Whittier
R.F.D. 2
Farmington

Chester Abbott, President of The First Portland National Bank, officiated at the ribbon-cutting ceremony inaugurating the bank's handsome, modern new quarters in the new Union Mutual Life Insurance Company building. The ceremony was held August 26. Chester, who has been president of the bank since 1950, directed the bank's new building program.

Leon Dodge was elected President of the Lincoln County Historical and Cultural Association on August 31.

The New York Times for July 31 carried a feature story on Paul Douglas. Entitled "Knight of Civil Rights," it concludes, "On one wall of his office Douglas has hung the portraits of the public figures who represent his ideals of public service — Abraham Lincoln; Senators George W. Norris of Nebraska and Old Bob La Follette of Wisconsin; John Peter Altgeld, a liberal Governor of Illinois; Jane Addams of Hull House; and Clarence Darrow, the trial lawyer."

Earl Gardner has retired from the Riverdale Country School in New York City. His temporary address is 3618 Ross Avenue, Dallas 4, Texas.

1914 Secretary, Alfred E. Gray
Franeestown, N. H.

Percy and Eleanor Mitchell have recently acquired an attractive country house in Jaffrey, New Hampshire. Located on the Marlboro road, it has a splendid view of Mt. Monadnock and the more distant mountains to the south.

Earle Thompson was one of four native sons and ex-residents of Bath who returned to their home town to sell tickets for the tour of homes that was part of Bath's month-long celebration of the 350th anniversary of the birth of American shipbuilding.

1916 Secretary, Dwight Sayward
415 Congress Street
Portland

Ora Evans participated in the arrangements for the annual convention of the Maine Press Association, held at Rockland in September. He helped arrange for the workshops and for the speakers, one of whom was John Gould '31.

A collection of 5,500,000 gall wasps, built up by the late Dr. Alfred Kinsey, has been donated to the American Museum of Natural History. The contribution was made by Al's wife, Clara, and the museum also received several hundred volumes used by him in his research at the University of Indiana.

1917 Secretary, Noel C. Little
8 College Street
Brunswick

A political article in the Bangor News for August 24 stated that there was a strong likelihood that Clarence Crosby of Dexter, veteran attorney and a prominent Republican of Penobscot County, would seek the seat on the Maine Governor's Executive Council which is being vacated by Dr. Roswell Bates '33 in January.

Professor Noel Little '17 and his son, Cliff '46, who is an instructor at The Hill School, worked together during the summer for the Physical Science Study Committee. They attended meetings two days each week at M.I.T., and the rest of the time they worked together in Brunswick. The purpose of the project is to modernize and streamline the teaching of the physical sciences in high schools and preparatory schools in order to bring it closer to the rapid advances, improvements, and new techniques that are being used at the college level.

1918 Secretary, Lloyd O. Coulter
Nottingham Square Road
Epping, N. H.

Shirley Gray, Executive Vice President of the Insulation Manufacturers Corporation, has promoted an impressive publication, IMC Electrical Insulation Manual, a large book of over 300 pages. The book has been very well received by the electrical industry in general, and many technical schools and departments are eagerly adding it to their specialized libraries. A subsequent pamphlet, "The IMC Manual Story," has just been published; it tells the manner and method in which the larger book was brought out.

1919 Secretary, Donald S. Higgins
78 Royal Road
Bangor

Norris Buncamper has a new address: Pastor N. A. Buncamper, Hotel Worthy, Springfield, Mass.

The Milton McGorrills were guests of honor at a farewell reception at Orono on July 21.

Hugh Mitchell has been appointed general manager of McCann-Erickson's Boston office. After the war he was in the London office for six years, as European director of the agency's accounts. For the past five years he has served as a vice president and account group head in the New York office.

1920 Secretary, Sanford B. Cousins
200 East 66th Street
New York 21, N.Y.

The John Lappins' daughter, Geraldine, was married on July 20 to 1st Lt. Richard Gibson '54 of Newton, Mass. Geraldine is a graduate of the Waynflete School and attended Manhattanville College in New York and Boston University.

Alan McKinley is now at the Church of the Holy Spirit in Safety Harbor, Fla.

General Willard Wyman visited Lincoln Academy in Newcastle last August while he was in Maine as the guest of his sister, Dr. Mary Wyman of Damariscotta. Bill prepared for Bowdoin at the Academy.

1921 Secretary, Norman W. Haines
Savings Bank Building
Reading, Mass.

The Hatch Preparatory School has purchased "Stoneacre", the former W. Goadby Loew estate at Newport, R. I. Pop Hatch says that the new property will be used for school purposes in a manner yet to be decided. "Stoneacre" will be the fourth school in the Newport area operated by the Hatch School. Its largest is at "Seaview Terrace". "Vernon Court", which is used a middler school, and "Honeysuckle Lodge", a junior school, were opened as schools for the first time this fall.

Pop also reports that he has purchased "Fairlawn", the former I. Townsend Burden estate.

Ducky Holmes' son, David, is the new manager of the Radio Research Laboratory of RCA Laboratories in Princeton, N. J. David has received two RCA Laboratories achievement awards, in 1952 for work on a transistorized automobile radio, and in 1955 as a member of a team cited for work on circuit applications of transistors.

Stuart Laughlin jr., son of Curtis S. Laughlin, is teaching special classes at the Nellie S. Ricker School in Brunswick.

1922 Secretary, Albert R. Thayer
40 Longfellow Avenue
Brunswick

Ed Ham, formerly at the University of Michigan, is now in the Department of French, University of California, Berkeley 4, Calif.

Dr. Leo King received an honorary doctor of humane letters degree from Merrimack College in North Andover, Mass., on June 6.

1923 Secretary, Richard Small
59 Orland Street
Portland

Gunnar Bergenstrahle visited the campus on July 27.

October 1, 1957

These pages contain the detailed final report of the record-making 1956-57 Alumni Fund. Our yearly gift, with a total of $155,246.23 from 3922 contributors, set new highs. A particularly encouraging feature of this year's gift is that once again more than one-half of Bowdoin alumni shared in the giving.

Noteworthy performances by the Old Guard, 1910, and the reunion classes of 1907, 1917, 1922 and 1932 highlighted the amassing of a gift which is the equivalent of the income on more than three millions of capital money which the College does not possess. Deserving special mention also is the steadily mounting participation of our younger classes.

To have served as Chairman of the 1956-57 Alumni Fund has been a rewarding experience. But the efforts of one man could never have accomplished the gratifying results of the past year and I hasten to express for myself and for all Bowdoin men thanks and grateful appreciation for the labors of the entire Alumni Fund team, Directors and Agents who gave so generously of their time and effort.

To Chairman Jotham D. Pierce '39, his associate Directors, and Agents go my sincere wishes that they may produce a 1957-58 Alumni Fund which will surpass the records of this year. To all Bowdoin men my thanks for their participation of the past and my earnest appeal for their continued sharing in this, the most important Bowdoin support they can render. Let us not forget that the annual Alumni Fund is not the appeal of the College. It is the voluntary undertaking of the Alumni to assemble a gift to meet the more pressing current needs of our College. The appeal is organized and administered by Alumni among themselves.

My future labors for Bowdoin will be as a member of the Board of Overseers, but I shall not cease to give my active and interested support to the Alumni Fund.

How Our 1956-57 Alumni Fund Gift Was Used

|--|-----------------|
| To the Alumni Fund Scholarship Reserve | $ 20,900 |
| 27 Students received awards. | |
| For Tuition and Fees for Bowdoin Plan Students | 10,134 |
| This allocation provided a welcome release of college funds for general purposes | |
| For Staff Travel to Schools and Alumni Clubs | 1,255 |
| We were able to bring to more alumni more personal messages from the campus | |
| For Subscriptions to the ALUMNUS | 12,170 |
| The Directors of the Alumni Fund purchased a subscription for every Bowdoin man of good address | |
| Contributions for Designated Purposes | 73,820 |
| Largely contributions to growing 25th and 50th Reunion Gifts | |
| Our Wholly Unrestricted Gift to Bowdoin | 36,967 |
| | <hr/> $155,246 |

It should be remembered that, because of the annual income from the Principal Fund of the Alumni Fund, every contribution to the Alumni Fund is a net gift to Bowdoin, without any deduction for expense.

How Your Gift To Bowdoin May Double!

Matching-gift programs have now been established by many corporations as a further development of the concern of business and industry in the support of higher education. This Corporate Alumnus concept, as it is called, was first begun by the General Electric Company in November of 1954.

Similar programs have now been adopted by the companies listed below. If you are an employee of one of them, you may obtain its corporate alumnus form to learn the details of the program. If your company is not listed below, perhaps you are in a position to present your views on the need for such a program.

Your gift to Bowdoin will be doubled, for these companies will match your contributions, dollar for dollar. In most cases, the programs apply not only to graduates but also to former students who have attended Bowdoin for a minimum of one academic year. In fact, ten of these companies make non-alumni eligible to participate in gift-matching to institutions of their choice.

These corporation programs encourage alumni to contribute to the financial support of Bowdoin by offering the incentive of matching each gift. Each program is predicated on three assumptions:

that the employee benefits continuously by a college experience paid for only in part by him. The company recognizes this fact and wants to help make these same educational advantages available to others; that the company also benefits continuously by the quality of experience of its college-graduate employees and wants to share in making this experience available to others; that Bowdoin and other similar institutions must continue — in the face of new and increasing demands — to offer the college experience, and must have the support of both types of beneficiaries to do so.

Matching programs such as these can be powerful factors in the support of American colleges and universities. Yet such programs can be successful only if every alumnus recognizes his growing obligations and acts in accordance with them.

Of the 7415 solicited alumni in the competing groups, 3773 (50.8%) contributed $147,348.23, an average alumni gift of $39.05.

Contributions from others numbered 149. There were 154 gifts in memoriam.

†Voluntary, non-competitive participation.

‡Includes $490.50 from Educational Funds of General Electric Company, Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corp., Draper Corp. and Young & Rubicam Foundation, matching contributions of Bowdoin men in their employ.

In 1907 an enterprising gentleman named H. D. Nichols made an engraving of the Bowdoin campus from an architectural projection. The campus appears to be seen from a high vantage point. Prints appear to be aerial views. Picturing the Bowdoin campus as students from 1903 to 1912 knew it, the prints make a fine addition to those of 1821 and 1860.

The Alumni Office has acquired hand colored copies of these engravings, about 27 by 17 inches on large white vellum sheets. Ready for framing, the prints are priced at $20.00 (plus 2% sales tax to Maine residents).

THE ALUMNI OFFICE BOWDOIN COLLEGE

visited the campus on July 29. Jack wishes Bowdoin would send him some good law students.

Maurice Morin is teaching Spanish, French, and Latin in Hopedale, Mass.

Roger Strout visited the campus on July 18.

Don and Billie Lancaster are the very proud grandparents of Barbara Joan Bouchard, born on July 14. Parents of the new arrival are Henry and Joan Lancaster Bouchard, both of whom are attending the University of Maine this year.

As president of the laymen's group, Don presided at the Episcopal Churchmen's fall conference, held at Colby on September 7 and 8.

Bob Michie has been named a director of Shenandoah Life Insurance Company in Roanoke, Va. He is Financial Vice President of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Companies.

1928 Secretary, William D. Alexander
Middlesex School
Concord, Mass.

Ben Butler, state senator from Farmington, came to the rescue of the centennial ceremonies at the Nordica Memorial Homestead recently! Rain threatened to break up the exercises, but the senator quickly took charge of a lady's bright tartan umbrella and held this over the heads of the various speakers, Mr. Ben Stinchfield and Dr. Warren Hill, State Commissioner of Education. Senator Ben was master of ceremonies and almost everyone agreed that he performed his duties in superb fashion. One onlooker, however, suspected of being a Democrat, is reported to have accused the senator of being interested in the welfare of the microphone, not the speakers!

Ben addressed the annual meeting of the Maine State Bar Association during the August meetings in Rockland.

Dick Chapman has accepted an appointment as Chairman of the Cumberland County Republican Finance Committee.

Dick Davis has been named co-manager of Hayden, Stone and Company's Portland office.

The Ed Densmores announce the engagement of their daughter, Caroline, a senior at Smith, to Mr. Ridgway Macy Banks of Cambridge, Mass., a senior at Williams.

Dick and Julia Lamport's son, Skip, has completed a successful and happy first year at Kenyon. A Beta father and a Deke son ought to be able to work up some stimulating conversation!

1933 Secretary, Richard E. Boyd
16 East Elm Street
Yarmouth

Dr. Roswell Bates, former state legislator and Speaker of the Maine House of Representatives, has announced his intention to retire as a member of the Governor's Executive Council next January. In a newspaper interview near the end of August he suggested the possibilities for his future: (1) to become a candidate for Congressman from the Third District; (2) to run in 1958 for one of Penobscot County's three state senate seats; (3) to retire completely from public service. There is a strong likelihood, according to Bangor columnist Lorin Arnold, that Clarence Crosby '17 may seek the council seat which Roswell is vacating.

Hal Foster has been chosen Secretary-Treasurer of The Bowdoin Club of Cleveland.

Bill Perry has been appointed Dean of Students at the Franklin Technical Institute in Boston. He has been a member of the Franklin faculty since 1947 and until recently headed the English Department.

1937 Secretary, William S. Burton
1144 Union Commerce Building
Cleveland 14, Ohio

Bill and Nancy Burton have returned from the 80th annual meeting of the American Bar Association which was held in London last summer. The Burtons and some of their legal friends and colleagues were featured in an article (sent from London) in the August 18 issue of the Cleveland Plain Dealer Pictorial Magazine.

Paul Gilpatrick reports, "Helen, Beth, Robert, and I have a new residential address at 1 Everett Avenue, Winchester, Mass. This after 16 years at 176 Mystic Street Extension in West Medford."

Ed Hudon, Assistant Librarian of the Library of the Supreme Court, is the author of "Two Maine Statutes Affecting Insurance Agents." This reprint brochure originally appeared in the May 1957 issue of the Insurance Law Journal.

1938 Secretary, Andrew H. Cox
50 Federal Street
Boston, Mass.

Phil Chapman addressed the Maine Federation of Women's Republican Clubs in August.

Ben Cushing, who is at the U. S. Embassy in Vienna, Austria, wrote during the summer, "Had lunch with Professor and Mrs. Helmreich when they went through Vienna in May."

Carl de Suze conducted a tape recorded interview of Professor "Pat" Quinby '23 which he broadcast on his WBZ radio program on August 30 and September 6 and 13.

Ted Newhall is Public Relations Director for Sunshine Springs Water Circus in Sarasota, Fla. His address is 2315 Floyd Street, Sarasota.

Leonard Pierce has been promoted to Vice President in Charge of Operations for the Penobscot Chemical Fibre Co.

Stu and Mary Small's son, David, spent a large part of his summer vacation on the Connecticut shore, visiting his grandmother and his uncle, John '50. One report has it that a healthy dose of New England salt air made young David reluctant to return to the "wooly wilds" of Midwest Chicago!

Carroll Terrell has been promoted to the rank of Associate Professor of English at the University of Maine. He will be coming to Brunswick regularly during the fall to conduct one of Maine's extension courses. Carroll's course, entitled "Twentieth Century British Prose," is one of twelve courses which will be given in various Maine communities. Although these courses are designed primarily for teachers and school administrators, others may enroll also.

The Reverend Ralph Winn had a review of Maurice Samuel's book, The Professor and the Fossil, published in the July issue of the Bangor Theological Seminary Alumni Bulletin.

The Reverend Sam Young served as chaplain at Bangor Theological Seminary during the week of April 22.

Dan and Mrs. Hanley and their four children returned to their home on Federal Street in Brunswick following a month at their camp at Lake Winnepesaukee in New Hampshire.

Seth Larrabee, WLOB disk jockey, was featured prominently in a large ad that ran in the August 11 Portland Sunday Telegram. It seems that Seth was out to break two records: to bring the National Continuous Broadcasting Disk Jockey Title to Maine, and to sell more G. E. Automatic Washers than have ever before been sold in Maine! The ad gave the following "prospectus": "Seth will broadcast continuously from our Portland Store (Hodges Appliances, Inc.) — 121 High Street — starting Monday (tomorrow) at 10 a.m. The National Disk Jockey Record is 168 hours of continuous broadcasting. Seth will eat, shave, and work continuously at our Portland Store until he breaks the national record or falls asleep. Come in and see Seth — help him break two records!" (The follow-up for this might well have been a sleepathon, backed by some mattress manufacturer!)

1940 Secretary, Neal W. Allen jr.
Department of History
Union College
Schenectady, N. Y.

The Class Secretary addressed the annual meeting of the Maine Historical Society in Portland on June 12, reporting on the progress of the Society's forthcoming volume of early Maine court records which he is editing. In September he assumed the post of Director of the Evening Division at Union College, while continuing as an associate professor in the Department of History.

Dave Brown of Hope reports on activities: manager of the Cooperative Purchasing Association of the Camden Farmers' Union and a major in the active reserve. He says that in his "old age" he is "getting smart" and staying home with his family evenings. In addition to his good wife and four children the family consists of two riding horses and two (?) white rabbits. Dave reports he would gladly swap the last for a good outboard motor.

Dr. and Mrs. Payson Jacobson report the arrival of a son, Paul David, on April 15. He is their fourth child and follows three girls. Payson also reports that he has moved into a new home at 295 Brighton Avenue in Portland.

Class Prexy John Marble writes, "Am still unmarried. Am I the last?" Not quite, John. Amos Shepard, who recently returned from a European trip, is in the ranks of the eligible bachelors.

John Nettleton attended the Graduate School of Banking at Rutgers this year. He is with the Bass River Savings Bank, Bass River, Mass.

Harold Oshry made a good report in answer to the Secretary's last class letter. He is busy with Universal Car Sales & Service Corp., the principal Ford agency on Long Island. Harold describes the business as an "automobile department store." Children include Meryl Jane, 9; Susan, 5; and a new arrival since the last class statistical survey, Michael, born May 5, 1956. Of the baby, Harold writes, "I had promised Adam Walsh a son who would really be able to get off his knees, but it seems this kid will wind up being another 'watch charm' guard. Another red head. It seems the class of '78 will have at least one good lineman — if I can get him admitted scholastically." Harold is active in the Shriners, and is joining the Shriner band, "for which I was well trained while managing the Polar Bears. The only problem is how do I look in the balloon pants with the red sash and the pot belly?"

Classmates and friends extend their sympathy to Ed Palmer, whose mother, Mrs. Ada C. Palmer, died on August 14 following a long illness.

Ed Platz reports election as a Diplomate of the American Board of Anesthesiology in 1955 and qualification as a Fellow of the International College of Surgeons in 1956. Ed and his wife have five children, the youngest, Nancy, born in July of 1955.

Damon Scales is the new Alumni Council Member for the Androscoggin Bowdoin Club.

Dick Sullivan is with New England Tel. and Tel. at 185 Franklin Street, Boston. "Work consists mainly of preparing myself and others for appearances before regulating agencies in the five New England states (except Connecticut) in connection with rate increases, and in supervising studies of the company's financial situation." Dick, his wife Alice, and two daughters live at 17 Manning Street, Needham Heights 94, Mass.

Bob Woods reports as occupation, "Corporation President — ha!" then adds, "Corporation President means I'm running my own tire and retreading business after twelve years with U. S. Rubber. As President I trim and paint tires, sell them, try to collect for them, and run an organization of six people. Have been in business for almost two years and hope to take three whole days off next week (this was written last spring) for my first vacation in that period. Extra-curricular activities are Cub Scouting, bowling and golf." The family consists of wife, Mary Lou, and Robert jr., Riki, and Mike.

The notes for the June issue of the Alumnus should be corrected as follows: Arthur Wang's associate in the publishing firm of Hill and Wang is not Laurence Hill '36 but Lawrence Hill, Yale '36. And the successful paper-back series which Hill and Wang publishes is Dramabooks, not Drawabooks. While on the subject of corrections, the Secretary would like to know how good 1940 man Herb Tonry was demoted to '41.

1941 Secretary, Henry A. Shorey
Bridgton

Chandler Stetson has been promoted from associate professor to professor in the Department of Pathology of New York University College of Medicine. The Ken Bakers report the arrival of their third child, Nicole Anita, born on May 26 in Le Chambon-sur-Lignon, France.

Norm Barr, who has been with the Keasbey and Mattison Company, Ambler, Pa., for the past nine years, was chosen by his company to attend a graduate session of Sales Management and Marketing held at Rutgers University in August. Norm is general sales manager of the Asbestos Cement Pipe Division of Keasbey and Mattison. The program he attended at Rutgers was designed to refresh and improve the performance of the executive on his current assignment, and also to prepare him for advancement to more important responsibilities. He will also attend the second phase of the program, which will be given in August of 1958.

Bob Coffin, who has just completed ten years as a teacher at St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., is leaving his classroom teaching of Latin and English to take over the duties of his new position, Director of Admissions. Bob and June, who have two boys and two girls and who expect their fifth child shortly, have moved into a lovely large house on the St. Paul's campus, but they still manage to get back to the Brunswick area occasionally.

During the 1955-1956 academic year the Coffins were in England, while Bob was studying at Oxford. Next summer Bob hopes to return to Middlebury College's Bread Loaf School of English, where he was in the summer of 1954, to continue work on his M.A.

Bob Cross has been closely watched during various afternoons and early evenings of late summer and early autumn by his Brunswick neighbors. Playing the part of the "human fly," Bob has inched his way valiantly around the exterior of his home, paint brush in one hand, paint can in the other. Suction cup sneakers are reputed to be the secret of his success, but Jeannette is still keeping one hand on the crash net!

Harry and Helen Eddy have a new daughter, Janet, who was born on August 4.

Dr. Bill Emerson's address is now 1016 East 10th Street, Vancouver, Wash.

John Pidgeon received a glowing tribute in the July 1957 issue of the Deerfield Alumni Journal on the occasion of his leaving Deerfield to become Headmaster of Kiskiminetas Springs School in Saltsburg, Pa. The article read, in part, "During his Deerfield career Mr. Pidgeon has made a notable contribution to every aspect of the life of the school, and, while we are happy to find ability recognized, nevertheless, the school will miss Mr. and Mrs. Pidgeon very much. In the classroom, teaching Latin, he has been a strong personality, insisting on high standards and constantly seeking the development of his students. On the athletic field he has been one of the finest as well as one of the most successful coaches we have ever known." (The article goes on to praise John's coaching work, especially in swimming, where he seems to have brought great interest and achievement out of previously dormant interest.) In conclusion the writer says, "Mr. and Mrs. Pidgeon have been respected and popular members of the Deerfield community, and it is with a very real sense of loss that, on behalf of the school, the Journal extends to them our best wishes for happiness and success."

Classmates and friends will grieve to learn of the death of Jim Murray. Word of this reached the Alumni Office in a letter written by Ted Howe. After telling about Jim's illness while he was in college, Ted continued, "On the 26th of June Jim phoned me from Gary and told me that although he was just released from the hospital he would stand up with me at my wedding on the 29th. I later learned that he made the trip with the aid of a blood transfusion. His doctor gave him little time to live, but felt it best to allow him to come East rather than upset him by forbidding the strenuous trip. All he spoke about was being my best man; needless to say, I am deeply moved by his tribute."

"Jim enjoyed seeing Morty Price '56 and 'T' McKinney '54, who were ushers, and Bill Markell '54 and Lew Kaskel '56, who came with their lovely wives. He told his dad that he was cheered by seeing them all, especially Dave Wies. Dave, Jim, and I had a long chat before the ceremonies began, and both Dave and Jim signed and witnessed my license."

"Jim died at 3 a.m., July 10, at Billings Hospital in Chicago. He slipped into a coma and fell fast asleep. He suffered much from his condition, but experienced little pain. Throughout, he remained confident that he would recover. He was always cheerful, mainly not to worry his parents. As a tribute to his dad, he finished his first year at Howard University Law School, in spite of the fact that his brain was receiving but half the red blood corpuscles it needed."

"I went to Gary to be one of my friend's pallbearers, but I wish that I could have stood up with him instead."

Dave Roundy and Charles Morrill '54 have completed a study of Brunswick's experience after its principal industry closed down. (The Verney Corporation and its predecessors, including Cabot Mills, had operated a textile mill in Brunswick from 1809 until 1955.) Charles and Dave discovered that despite the loss of a $3,000,000 payroll to about 1,000 people in the region, there has not been a great economic depression in the region. The expansion of the Brunswick Naval Air Station and the new SAGE project in Topsham have been largely responsible for this. They have provided a combined annual payroll of about $2,000,000, and only the older, less adaptable mill workers have found it difficult to move away or to stay and adjust to the new conditions.

Professor Herbert Brown, Chairman of the Department of English, has edited a centennial edition of Holmes's The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table, to be issued as a paper-back this autumn by the Sagamore Press of New York.

Again this summer Professor and Mrs. Brown were at Middlebury College's Bread Loaf School of English. Dr. Brown taught courses in American literature and the American novel.

Professor Brown was elected Historian at the national convention of Zeta Psi Fraternity. In this position he automatically becomes a member of the Executive Committee of the fraternity. One of his chief tasks will be to gather material for an up-to-date history of Zeta Psi.

President James Coles spoke to the Kiwanis Club of Rockland on August 21. He took as his topic the problem of the colleges and universities providing for the increasing number of students who wish to attend institutions of higher learning. President Coles dealt mainly with the two big problems which confront today's colleges: caring for students who desire to study in the next ten years (from the standpoint of the limitations of physical plant), and obtaining sufficient funds with which to expand to provide the facilities needed before enrollment can be increased.

President Coles has accepted an invitation to become a director of the Brunswick Regional Memorial Hospital.

Miss Ann Coles, daughter of President and Mrs. Coles, was one of five girls from Camp Natarwsi to pass the Junior Maine Guide test last summer.

Professor Athern Daggett '25, public information officer for Brunswick, attended the 13th regional conference of public information officers for Civilian Defense and Public Safety, held in Augusta on August 30 and 31. Col. Walter H. Kennett H'53, Maine Director, spoke at the meetings on behalf of the state organization.

Miss Ellen Daggett, daughter of Professor and Mrs. Daggett, is a member of the freshman class at Randolph-Macon Woman's College in Lynchburg, Va. Her brother, Bill Daggett, is now in his junior year at Wesleyan.

Professor and Mrs. Athern Daggett were guests of Professor and Mrs. Burton Taylor on their ketch, Dovekie, during the month of August. The Taylors and the Daggetts cruised down to St. Andrews, N. B., on Passamaquoddy Bay, and then back to the Brunswick area.

Issue number 2, Volume VIII, of The Newsletter of the American Council of Learned Societies carries the announcement that Professor Nathan Dane II '37 has been appointed Regional Associate for Maine.

Professor and Mrs. Dane have bought a house on the Mere Point Road. One observer noted that it was of proper "classical" proportions.

Professor Jean Darbelnet taught a course in Twentieth Century French Literature at the summer session of the University of British Columbia. On July 22, under the auspices of the University Extension Department, Professor Darbelnet delivered a public lecture, "Reflections on Bilingualism." The Darbelnets completed an interesting summer by taking an extended motor and sightseeing trip back to Maine by way of Billings, Montana; Duluth, Minn.; Sault Sainte Marie, Ont; and the southern part of central and eastern Canada.

Professor William Geoghegan recently wrote, "The studious quiet of my summer retreat was pleasantly interrupted by a visit by two alumni of the Class of 1957 — John Dow and John Howland — who were counselors at nearby Camp DeWitt on Lake Winnepesaukee. The retrospective charms of Bowdoin constituted the major theme of discussion during our informal lake shore seminar on 'The Continuing Values of Reciprocal Alumni-Faculty Education.' Refreshments were served before adjournment."

A three-dimensional diorama showing birds in their native haunts along a rugged strip of Maine coast was unveiled last summer in the Museum of Science in Boston. The exhibit was designed by Dr. Alfred Gross, and it was donated by Mrs. William T. Gardiner in memory of her late husband, a former governor of Maine. The diorama, which is 18 feet long and 13 feet high, is currently on exhibit in the Museum's East Wing.

Dr. and Mrs. Alfred Gross are making their second trip around the world. They are due to leave New York City in November, and they plan to return to Brunswick about May 1, 1958.

Alumni and friends will be happy to learn that Professor Hammond, who suffered severe injuries in an auto accident in mid-June, has made a good recovery. Mrs. Hammond reported to the Alumni Office in early September that Dr. Hammond was off his crutches and back in the East, ready to resume his classroom teaching when the fall semester began. The accident, from which Mrs. Hammond escaped with relatively minor injuries, occurred in Michigan while the Hammonds were on their way to visit a daughter in Madison, Wisc.

Dr. Dan Hanley '39, Bowdoin's own college physician and executive director of the Maine Medical Association, was honored by being invited (as one of a group of 56) to make a series of visits to military bases on the East Coast and to observe at first hand the many types of air operations there. After assembling at the Pentagon in Washington, where they were briefed by the Joint Chiefs of Staff and by the Secretaries of the Navy and the Air Force, the group proceeded to Quantico, Va., Mayport, Fla., and Eglin Field in Florida. In telling the Brunswick Rotarians about his experiences, Dr. Hanley said that, in his opinion, the true "secret weapon" of the military forces of the United States is the personnel in the several branches of the service. He was particularly impressed by the clear thinking, able judgment, and intense loyalty of the officers and men with whom he came in contact.

Professor Cecil Holmes, on sabbatical leave for the fall semester, is temporarily living at 2121 Williams Street, Palo Alto, Calif.

Miss Janet Holmes, daughter of Professor and Mrs. Holmes, graduated from Oberlin College in June. She then accompanied her parents to Stanford University, where Professor Holmes attended the Summer Institute of Social Science for College Teachers of Mathematics. Miss Holmes sailed for France on September 5 to begin her work as teaching assistant in English at the Ecole Normal d'Institutrices, Chateauroux.

Mrs. Charles Huntington, a 1956 graduate of Radcliffe and wife of Assistant Professor of Biology Charles Huntington, is teaching biology this year at Brunswick High School in the absence of Claude Bonang '52, who is spending the year studying at Stanford University.

Miss Martha Jeppesen, daughter of Professor and Mrs. Myron Jeppesen, is a freshman at Smith College this year.

Lt. and Mrs. Harvey Johns announce the arrival of their first child, Richard Bradley Johns, on August 5.

Professor Samuel Kamerling attended the National Organic Symposium at the University of Rochester in June. He also participated in the Summer Conference of the New England Association of Chemistry Teachers at Colby in August.

Dean Nathaniel Kendrick returned to his duties the first week of August following a sabbatical leave which he and Mrs. Kendrick spent in travelling through Mexico and the western areas of the United States. After their long motor tour the Kendricks went to their cottage in central Ontario, north of Toronto, where they spent the early part of the summer.

Professor Edward Kirkland was one of a group of distinguished historians which recently called the attention of their colleagues to the "regrettable neglect" of the part which our educational system has played in American history. The committee plans a subsequent detailed announcement of a program to correct this neglect of the role of education in American history. The study has been sponsored by The Fund for the Advancement of Education, a philanthropic organization established in 1951 by The Ford Foundation.

Professor and Mrs. Fritz Koelln have announced the engagement of their daughter, Johanna Maria, to Mr. Franz Schwanauer of Stuttgart, Germany. Miss Koelln was graduated from Wellesley College in June, and Mr. Schwanauer is presently studying at the Institute of Technology in Stuttgart. A fall wedding is planned.

Professor Elroy LaCasce jr. '44 participated in the conferences of the Committee on Advanced Standing at Williams last June. The work of the committee is designed to provide advanced standing for various gifted and energetic students who have taken extra preparatory school work in preparation for such recognition at the college level. A number of preparatory schools and public high schools have joined certain colleges in implementing this program, which allows an ambitious and talented student wider scope and an opportunity to get more out of subjects in which he has special aptitudes and interests.

In June Stephen Minot, Assistant Professor of English, addressed the Second Haverford Conference on English Composition and Literature. His paper was entitled "Teaching the Essay: Bacon, Lamb, and Hazlitt." He also conducted an informal seminar on the subject afterward. This is the third year Professor Minot has represented Bowdoin at these Advanced Placement Conferences, which are under the auspices of the College Entrance Examination Board.

Professor-Emeritus Wilmoit Brookings Mitchell '90 was honored by the College on Monday, August 12, at the groundbreaking ceremonies for the new dormitory. President Coles gave the opening remarks and the introduction, and then Mr. Mitchell made the main address. His speech was both serious and humorous, and his audience was especially delighted by the reminiscences of dormitory life in the late 1880's as presented by this revered alumnus and faculty member emeritus only a few days before his ninetieth birthday! The ceremony was concluded by Professor Mitchell's adroit handling of the spade as he turned over the first three pieces of sod. Following the exercises the shovel was permanently plated and presented to Professor Mitchell as a lasting memento of the day, the ceremony, and the honor that had been paid him.

Professor James Moulton of the Department of Biology published an article in the April, 1957, issue of the Maine Field Naturalist entitled "A Nighthawk Nesting on South Bimini, Bahama Islands." On July 8 Dr. Moulton lectured at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution; his topic was "Biological Acoustics in the Bimini Area."

Vice President and Mrs. Bela Norton '18 spent their August vacation at the camp of the Dan Hanleys '39 on the shores of Lake Winnepesaukee. According to the Vice President, a lovely beach and excellent swimming conditions made for a fine and restful aquatic holiday!

Professor and Mrs. George Quinby '23 have returned to Brunswick after having spent a year at Teheran, Iran, where Professor Quinby taught American drama at the University of Teheran, under the sponsorship of the United States Information Service. On their way back to this country the Quinbys visited Lebanon, Greece, Holland, and the Scandinavian countries.

Professor Quinby had a very busy few weeks immediately following his return to this country. On August 31 and September 6 and 13 a three-part recorded interview made while Professor Quinby was attending the Educational Theatre Association Conference in Boston, was presented over Radio Station WBZ by Carl de Suze '38. On September 5 and 6, Professor Quinby and Dr. Charles S. F. Lincoln '91 attended the national convention of Psi Upsilon Fraternity at Hamilton College. Professor Quinby spent several days of the second week in September conferring with officials of the United States Department of State in Washington, D. C.

In May David Russell, Assistant Professor of Psychology and Director of Student Counseling, was appointed by Governor Muskie to a three-year term on the State Board of Examiners of Psychologists. Dr. Russell is presently serving as Secretary-Treasurer of the Board. During the last week of August Professor Russell attended the annual meetings of the American Psychological Association which were held in New York.

Professors Burton Taylor and Leighton van Nort attended the annual meeting of the American Sociological Society in Washington, D. C., August 27-29.

Burton Taylor jr., son of Professor and Mrs. Taylor, is a freshman at Wesleyan University this year.

Professor Albert Thayer '22 has completed and released a 23-page summary of the status of speech in 148 of the 303 four-year colleges in the country which have an enrollment of 500 to 1,000 students.

At the national convention of the American Speech Association in Boston, August 26-29, Professor Thayer gave a talk on the aforementioned study before the Interest Group on Speech Education. At the same convention he also delivered a paper before another section on Speech Education within the Framework of English Departments. Professor Thayer was elected to the Legislative Assembly, the governing body of the association. The meetings in Boston were also attended by Professor George Quinby '23 and Mr. Norman London, new Instructor in Speech.

Professor Thayer attended the October Conference for the Exchange of Educational Opinion at Crawford Notch, N. H.

Professor Frederic Tillotson spent the summer completing a comprehensive text, the culmination of a long, eleven-year effort. It is entitled The Common Practice of Materials and Forms: A College

Introductory Course in Music. The book is presently in mimeographed form, but Professor Tillotson hopes to see it in print before long.

Coach Adam Walsh was a member of a six-man panel that appeared before the American College Public Relations Association in Chicago, August 8 and 9. Adam continues to be active in the Football Coaches Association, of which he is a trustee.

Former Faculty

Dominique Auzenat, former Fellow in French, wrote President Coles in August that he and Dietmar Klein '57, former Fellow in German, were completing a wonderful, extensive trip through the United States that took them from Maine to California and back, by way of Texas and Louisiana. M. Auzenat sailed for Europe August 16 on the S.S. Statendam. He expressed warm thanks and appreciation for his profitable and enjoyable year spent at Bowdoin.

Dr. Laurence Barrett has been named Dean of the Faculty at Kalamazoo College, where he has been serving as Dean of the Curriculum and Professor of English.

Mrs. Helen Reed Kane, formerly secretary to President Coles, was married on August 21 to 1st Lt. Harlan William Long of Watseka, Illinois. The couple will reside at Odenton, Md., where Lt. Long is attached to Fort George G. Meade.

Dr. Richard Schoenwald, formerly Instructor in History at Bowdoin, is engaged to Miss Audrey Stearns of Boston, a graduate of Wellesley College and now a graduate student at the Smith College School of Social Work. Dr. Schoenwald is an instructor in humanities at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Lt. Col. Gates Stern and his family have moved from their Potter Street address in Brunswick to 1330 Market Street, Parkersburg, West Virginia. Col. Stern, who has been professor of military science and tactics at Bowdoin, has resigned his commission, following 20 years of Army Reserve Service, and is resuming his family business.

Honorary

1938 The late Kenneth Roberts, famous historical novelist, has been honored by the Old Fort No. 4 Associates, on whose honorary committee he had served, at their annual meeting in Charlestown, N. H. The resolution cited Roberts for making the colonial fort known to millions of modern Americans by way of his books, Northwest Passage and Rabble in Arms. The resolution expressed to Mrs. Roberts the group's "grateful appreciation in her late husband's efforts in our behalf."

A vote by the citizens of North Kennebunkport, in a Maine September election, proved once again the great power of the printed word. The late author, Kenneth Roberts, would have been pleased to know that his neighbors voted to change the name of their small but ancient community to its older, original form — a name that Mr. Roberts had popularized in several of his historical novels. A decisive vote changed the name of the town to Arundel.

1946 Dr. Alaric Haskell, a practicing dentist in Brunswick for 67 years until his retirement in 1955, celebrated his 91st birthday on August 26.

1953 Colonel Walter Kennett addressed the meetings of the 13th regional conference of public information officers for Civilian Defense and Public Safety, held at Augusta on August 30 and 31.

1955 William Gibbs, famous naval architect, again spent his summer vacation in Maine, at York Harbor. Reportedly Mr. Gibbs goes to the Maine coast every year for a stay because he loves the sea.

JANE COLEMAN PICKARD

THESE words of Mrs. Frederick W. Pickard are inscribed on the little piece of ceramic tile which was placed in the cornerstone of Coleman Hall on a drizzly but inspiring Saturday morning, Alumni Day, November 2.

That gracious lady applied the mortar to the cornerstone herself, as can be observed on the cover of this issue of the Alumnus. In order that alumni and friends of Bowdoin may know her better, we present here a brief history of the Coleman family, for which the new dormitory has been named.

Jane Alice Coleman Pickard was born in Cleveland, Ohio, on September 28, 1873, the daughter of John Barnes Coleman and Alice Morris Coleman. Her father was born in Kemptville, Ontario, in 1842, of a family originally living near Grantham, in the English county of Lincoln. Members of the family, however, early came to the American Colonies.

During the American Revolution the Colemans remained loyal to England. Like many Loyalists, they crossed the St. Lawrence and settled on land granted them by the British Crown.

Richard Thomas Coleman was the first member of the family to move from Canada to the United States. John Barnes Coleman, after clerking in his father's general store, soon followed his older brother to Cleveland. There he married Alice Morris, and there his three children, John, Jane, and Grace, were born. He became an American citizen in 1876.

Mr. Coleman engaged in various business enterprises, eventually joining his brother in the explosives industry. After a short residence in Wilmington, Delaware, he moved to Portland, where he was Treasurer and General Manager, later President, of the Oriental Powder Company. He retired in 1906 and lived in Falmouth Foreside until his death in 1932.

His son, John W. Coleman, was associated with his father in the Oriental Powder Company, but later joined with Portland associates to form the Portland-Monson Slate Company, with quarries in Monson and mill and offices in Portland. This company he operated until his death in 1940. His widow, the former Ida Jackson of Portland, and his sister Grace continue as controlling officers.

The other daughter of John Barnes Coleman, Jane Alice, married Frederick William Pickard '94 of Portland on October 4, 1899. Their son, John Coleman Pickard '22, is a member of the Board of Overseers.

The boys who live in Coleman Hall in the years to come will ever be grateful to their gracious and generous friend, Jane Coleman Pickard, who, at the age of 83, remains young in spirit and outlook because of her generosity toward others.

And those fortunate enough to know Mrs. Pickard will have "a happy memory" of her all of their lives.

The 1957 Football Season

By Richard E. Doyle '40

BOWDOIN football rooters have rivaled Job in the patience league, although a break in the dreary string of defeats popped in the second start. Trouble was, it couldn't be sustained.

The material problem, which promised partial solution this fall, apparently is still with us. So are the opponents who continue to gather big and fast operatives, many of whom would grace a big-time squad.

The grid Joneses take a lot of keeping up with. Bowdoin is travelling the same circuit but on considerably less horsepower.

It's a well worn record, however, no matter what speed you play it, so we'll leave the vital matter of logistics to whomever it may concern.

September practice opened in a reasonably hopeful atmosphere. A better grade of football was in the works. Won-lost improvement hinged on whether the opposition picked up correspondingly.

With the exception of Trinity, though, everyone turned out as good as or better than in 1956, when the slate swept Bowdoin.

Eighteen lettermen reported, a few non-letter returnees showed progress, a half-dozen or so sophomores looked ready to supply immediate help, while other newcomers had the potential.

Adam termed it a better looking group than he'd had recently and the boys bore him out when they were all available. But this blessed state didn't materialize after the scrimmaging. An unofficial and unpublished decision over Bates in a scrimmage was a fair indication of the full strength capacity.

At any rate, the backfield added some heft and speed, and several converted Polar Bears came along well in the line.

Bob Hawkes and Bob Kennedy, good-sized sophs, bolstered the ball-packing corps substantially. Hawkes lived up to advance notices as a back whose various talents resembled a composite of former Bowdoin stars.

Experience and depth in the line left much to be desired, and graduation will make next year's line an even sketchier proposition.

Attrition of flu and injuries accentuated the '57 plight. Flu and wholesale hurts — to say nothing of powerhouses Tufts, Amherst and Maine — wore Bowdoin down. Cancellation of the Williams game staved off a certain disaster, as the Ephs, it seemed, were even stronger than mighty Amherst.

Withal, spirit never flagged and the Polar Bears flashed good football in spurts. But the injured-ill list generally contained several of the most experienced campaigners and it was hard to keep up the good work.

Hammer champ Bill McWilliams, a longtime absentee from football, came around to help in the emergency, reinforcing the backfield during the State Series.

Tufts 40, Bowdoin 6 — A Polar Cub against a Jumbo. That Bowdoin ran for nearly 200 yards, passed for another 109 but lost by five touchdowns showed both White potential and the toughness of its interstate schedule. Tufts' large package of speed and power scored thrice in the first quarter and repeated in the third period on assorted runs by such souped-up tanks as Paul Abrahamian and Juris Berzins. Bowdoin came through belatedly on a 59-yard drive. Dave Gosse hit two yards off right tackle for the score mounted by sub quarterback George Entin's 22-yard pass to Gene Waters. Walt Durham and Hawkes showed impressive power, but the latter was injured late in the first quarter. Waters and Gosse also ran well, and Bowdoin's outweighed line had its moments.

Bowdoin 13, Trinity 6 — End of a nine-game victory drought sent the 4,500 crowd into an Indian Summer frenzy. Michelson covered a Bantam fumble on the Bowdoin 6-yard line to check an early threat while Bowdoin foundered successively on the Trinity 8 and 6. Then, late in the half, Bowdoin killed a Trinity fourth down gamble at midfield and quickly cashed in. Hawkes went 2, Durham 16, and Hawkes took Brud Stover's 25-yard pass to score. McWilliams' placement was wide. Trinity tied on Dick Noble's 40-yard jaunt in the third period — placement missed. Bowdoin halted Trinity on the 17 when Stover intercepted in his own end zone deep in the fourth period for a touchback that set up the winning 80-yard drive. Hawkes teamed with Durham on two lateral-extended gains, husky Bob powered to the doorstep, and Walt plunged over. Gosse got a penalty reprieve and made his second placement try good. Dick Michelson recovered a late Trinity fumble to seat it. Waters, Gosse, Stover ably backed the scorers. Capt. Ernie Belforti, Ted Gibbons, Bob Sargent, Matt Levine, and Michelson were line strongpoints.

Amherst 58, Bowdoin 14 — Amherst dynasty's been founded on several good freshman teams in succession, delving deeply into sturdy mill stock from the Connecticut Valley, often shoring up in prep school. Only Jeff talent problem is one of elimination. Such 1956 executioners on Whittier Field as Tibbetts and Krumsiek were minor figures in the massacre on Pratt Field. Jeffs rolled up 34 first downs — possibly a record — helped by interceptions and Bowdoin fumbles. Kennedy swept end 45 yards in the second period, Stover passed 11 yards to Phil Very in the fourth for consolation. White predicament aggravated by limited service of several sub-par regulars.

Colby 16, Bowdoin 13 — Bowdoin played its best football of the season, only to lose out on that rarity, a late field goal, plus a bad break earlier. Colby's huge Bob Sargent turned the tables on Niles Perkins' 18-year-old double-trey. The 23 yard approach to Niles' lesser boot nullified a fine Bowdoin stand that threw Colby back three yards in three tries from the White 11. Kingpins Hawkes and Stover were hurt shortly thereafter to kill Bowdoin's salvage chances in the last four minutes. White missed first period shot on a fourth down miss by a yard at the Colby 21. Then a lateral-pass-lateral by Colby covered 59 yards to the Bowdoin 17, Belforti overtaking Bob Auriemma. Colby recovered a fumble for first down on the 6 and Mark Brown passed to Bob Bruce for the TD. Sargent's placement was wide. Mules were set up on the Bowdoin 7 six minutes later by a freak Entin punt that got nowhere when pressured by the Colby line. Auriemma scored on the second play and Brown's kick was good.

Bowdoin just beat the halftime clock in a counter off a Stover interception and fine 18-yard runback to the Colby 37. John Papacosma, off the injured list, and Waters helped set up Stover's pass to Hawkes, caught nicely in the deep corner of the end zone. McWilliams' kick was wide. Stover's 42-yard interception runback in the third period led to the tying score. Gibbons' fumble recovery on the 3 kept it going and Hawkes just made it on fourth down. McWilliams' kick knotted the figures at 13. Belforti, Michelson, Gibbons, Joe Carven and Pete Dionne were line stars. McWilliams joined the backfield leaders, playing his first football in five years.

Bates 6, Bowdoin 0 — A harsh break dealt Bowdoin its second State Series loss of the year. Sixth straight in the carry-over. Truth to tell, however, best the White could have hoped for was a tie on a miserably stormy day. Bobcats marched over Whittier's slick surface all afternoon but couldn't break the barrier. Then it happened, ten plays into the fourth period. After a Bates punt to Guard and Captain Ernie Belforti, quarterback Brud Stover, and center Dick Michelson, all seniors, were named to the Portland Sunday Telegram All-Maine team in November.

Belforti, Michelson, and sophomore halfback Bob Hawkes were also picked by Colby's football squad for its all-opponent team.

the Bowdoin 1, Waters couldn't get running room and McWilliams fumbled in a second bid to leave the hole. Bates back Bob Muello made the tackle and covered in the White end zone. Bowdoin couldn't pass its 37 in the remaining time. Its only penetration of the day reached the Bates 35 from the Bowdoin 46, mostly on lugs by Ken Judson. Stover's fine punting under the terrible conditions helped stave off the 'Cats — 11 kicks for a 33.8 average. Stover, Waters, Belforti, Michelson, Bob Kingsbury, and Al Merritt were stout, busy defenders.

Maine 40, Bowdoin 0 — Polar Bears crushed by Maine for fifth straight year. Maine ran up a 34-0 halftime lead and coasted, all the more disappointing in that Bowdoin figured it could at least make matters closer this year. Apparently, the law of diminishing returns applies to the Series. Like last year, Bowdoin battled Colby and Bates on close to even terms, then could do nothing against Maine as Black Bears ended in three-way tie with Colby and defending champion Bates. Short punt and fumble staged Maine's first two TD's, a blocked punt was cashed for another, and the Pale Blue marched 61 and 71 yards for the others. Bowdoin threatened only in the third period, went to the Maine 15.

Graduation will take ends Matt Levine and Marty Roop, tackles Pete Dionne, Ted Gibbons, and Bob Sargent, guards Ernie Belforti and Bob Kingsbury, center Dick Michelson, quarterback Brud Stover, halfback Dave Gosse, and fullbacks Bill McWilliams, Walt Durham, and John Papacosma.

In addition, fourteen men received varsity numerals. Of these, thirteen will return for the 1958 season. Two dozen freshmen were awarded numerals after a 2-2 season, and some of them may help out another year.

Alumni Weekend

DESPITE another disappointing football season and a drizzly, drippy day, hundreds of alumni returned to the campus on November 2 for Alumni Day. Features were the homecoming football game with Bates, the laying of the cornerstone of Coleman Hall, Bowdoin's new $450,000 dormitory for 76 students, and the Polar Ice Capades in the Arena.

Alumni Weekend got under way Friday evening, when many of the fraternities held formal dinners and initiation ceremonies. The pre-game football rally was cancelled because of the down-pour. In a swimming meet that is fast becoming a yearly fixture, the varsity team defeated a combination of freshmen and alumni.

On Saturday morning the Alumni Council held its regular fall meeting, with President Louis Bernstein '22 of Portland presiding. Bowdoin's Vice President, Bela W. Norton '18, spoke in chapel on the loyalty of alumni and friends of the College.

The rain let up temporarily at 10:30 when the cornerstone of Coleman Hall was laid. Picture coverage of this momentous and memorable event in the life of the College is provided on the front cover and inside front cover of this issue.

Taking part in the brief ceremony were Mrs. Frederick W. Pickard of Greenville, Del., donor of the building; John C. Pickard '22, also of Greenville, her son and a member of the Board of Overseers; Widgery Thomas '22 of Portland, chairman of the building committee for the dormitory; President James S. Coles; and the Reverend William D. Chapman of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Brunswick.

Under construction since August 12, Coleman Hall will be completed by next September. It is named in recognition of Mrs. Pickard's family, long prominent in Maine. Her gift brings the total of Pickard family gifts to Bowdoin to more than 1½ million dollars.

Late Saturday morning Bates defeated the Polar Bears 4 to 3 in an overtime soccer game. Bowdoin returned the compliment by trouncing the Bobcats 20 to 39 in cross country.

A lobster stew luncheon at noon in the Sargent Gymnasium featured the presentation of the Alumni Fund Cup to John W. Leydon '07 of Philadelphia.

Bates won the football game 6 to 0 when fullback Bob Muello recovered a Bowdoin fumble in the end zone early in the fourth quarter. During the second half Whittier Field and those spectators not under cover of the grandstand absorbed torrents of rain.

The game was followed by an informal reception at the Union, with many alumni and friends on hand to greet President and Mrs. Coles and Council President and Mrs. Bernstein.

A capacity crowd of 2500 turned out Saturday evening to see the first annual Polar Ice Capades at the Arena. The program featured many national and New England figure skaters from the Skating Club of Boston. Included in the all-star cast were red-headed Sue Blodgett, whose picture graces this page, National Junior Champion Bradley Lord, National Novice Champion Gregory Kelley, National Silver Dance Champions Sydney Arnold and Franklin Nelson, and Dudley Richards of the World's Team. The Meddiebempsters sang during the intermission, and there was a period of free skating following the show.

The Arena spectators went on their separate ways in good spirits — some to drive homeward, others to dance until a late hour in the Sargent Gymnasium to the music of the Barbary Coast Orchestra from Dartmouth College.

It was a memorable and for the most part enjoyable weekend, with the high point, of course, the cornerstone ceremony at Coleman Hall. Mrs.

Pickard's words, inscribed on the piece of ceramic tile which was placed in the cornerstone, symbolize the spirit of humble generosity of her family, the greatest benefactors in Bowdoin history — That the boys who live in this house will have a happy memory of it all their lives is the wish of their friend, Jane Coleman Pickard.

These same words might be changed a bit to express the feelings of all present Bowdoin men toward all future students at the College — "That the boys who live in this college will have a happy memory of it all their lives is the wish of their friends, all those who have gone before them."

Or as Bela Norton phrased it in Chapel that morning, "Every college that is worth its salt has loyal and enthusiastic alumni, but few have the spirited and deep rooted loyalty that is so characteristic of Bowdoin men."

He might well have extended this statement to include Bowdoin's loyal and lovely ladies — the wives, mothers, and daughters of Bowdoin men!

Dear Skipper, Deke, Blackie, and friends:

Old age finally caught up with me, and the brothers retired me to this animal hospital. Staying here is not like starting fights in the middle of chapel but I do have an easy life. I miss attending classes and was very sorry that I was not able to return for homecoming. It is the first one I have missed in twelve years. Anyway, the doctor is out of town, and I am taking the opportunity to use his typewriter, and pass along some observations I made during my long stay at Bowdoin.

From the issue of the Orient which you sent me, I gather that the campus is buzzing with talk about fraternities, rushing, and hazing. First off, I do not want any of you to think of the frat house as an eating place. Granted, they make wonderful places for dogs to eat — the brothers are always kind enough not to eat everything the cooks prepare. Remember, however, that the fraternity is also your home. I have seen a few Bowdoin men think of the fraternity just as a restaurant and I have felt sorry for them. The best Bowdoin men I have known are those who have regarded the fraternity as their home away from home. They have used the house as the center for their social, academic, and extra-curricular activities. And like all homes, the fraternities are not limited to the members. Some of my best friends live at other houses — and I have always felt free to visit them. When one of the brothers took me to another Maine college campus, I was astounded to see the closed relationship among the fraternities. As the Committee on Self Study said in their declamation, the fraternities at Bowdoin are "built into" the College. It is my belief that the strength of this structure can be determined only by the undergraduate body.

The subject of Bowdoin's rushing is always being discussed. I learned from one of my masters, who attended a national convention of our fraternity, that one midwest campus has fraternities which take candid photographs, tape recordings, and aptitude tests of prospective pledges. Naturally, the brothers laughed at this idea. Any Bowdoin house following this procedure would find future pledges choosing other houses. The Bowdoin rushing system has several advantages — advantages which go with the Bowdoin tradition. I would not want to see all the football players in one house, the glee club in another and the English majors in a third. Whenever I have had trouble understanding what a professor said in a class, there is always someone in my house who can help me. Diversification is the important factor in Bowdoin fraternities. There are no Bowdoin freshmen who do not have something to offer a house and, what is perhaps more important, there is not a Bowdoin fraternity that does not have something to offer a freshman. I have yet to know a Bowdoin man who was dissatisfied with the house he pledged and later joined.

As for hazing, many different points of view are held. Personally, I was sorry to see the College do away with walks. The best opportunity freshmen have to get to know each other comes when they are walking back from Augusta or Waterville. Even I enjoyed it, when quite by mistake, I was left with the pledges on some dirt road back in the hinterland.

Hell Week is a difficult problem. Concentrated hazing, initiations, and Alumni Weekend all in the same week are hard on the College — it's hard to tell whether the freshmen or the upperclassmen suffer the worse. My only question is if knowing "Bowdoin Beata" and the location of other member fraternities is as important as preparing an English 1-2 theme. If both can be done, hazing is okay by me.

Well, holiday greetings to everyone and I hope the houses take good care of you during Christmas vacation.

Canineingly yours,

Fuzzie*

On The Campus

During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1957, Bowdoin received gifts and legacies amounting to $874,588 for general college and miscellaneous purposes and $82,090 for scholarships, according to the annual report of Treasurer Roland E. Clark '01 of Portland. In addition, income amounting to $18,156 was added to the principal of the Endowment Fund, which as of last June amounted to $13,984,793.36.

"There is included in this amount," Mr. Clark reported, "the sum of $367,500 received from The Ford Foundation on June 24, 1957, as the second installment of the Endowment Grant and Accomplishment Grant to the College under the terms of the Foundation's Faculty Salary Endowment and Accomplishment Programs. This made a total of $707,500 received in the two payments during the past two fiscal years. This is an increase of 39% over the anticipated approximate grants which were announced by The Ford Foundation in December 1955."

The Financial Report shows that Bowdoin's Endowment Fund is bringing an annual return of approximately 4.80% on book value and 3.77% on market value. More than half, or 52.2% of the Endowment Fund, at market value as of last June 30, was invested in common stocks. Of the rest 15.1% was in industrial and miscellaneous bonds, 13.8% in public utility bonds, 8.8% in U. S. Government bonds, 4.8% in preferred stocks, 4.6% in railroad bonds, and 0.7% in real estate and mortgages.

Bowdoin ended the fiscal year with an operating surplus of $27,083. During the past decade, there have been five years with surpluses and five with deficits, with an overall surplus for that period of $20,929. Total income during 1956-57 was $1,589,108.09, and total expenses amounted to $1,562,024.37.

Scholars Honored

Sixty-two undergraduates were honored as James Bowdoin Scholars on October 24 at the seventeenth annual James Bowdoin Day exercises, held in the Pickard Theater in Memorial Hall. President Barnaby C. Keeney of Brown was the featured speaker, taking as his subject "Divine Discontent." The undergraduate response was delivered by Roger Howell jr., a senior from Baltimore, Md., who has maintained a straight "A" record in each of his three years at Bowdoin.

Six men who had maintained an "A" record for two consecutive semesters were presented specially inscribed copies of John J. Pullen's The Twentieth Maine. They were Edward L. Baxter '58 of Rockland, Douglas E. Crabtree '60 of Needham Heights, Mass., Roger Howell jr. '58 of Baltimore, Daniel N. Loeb '58 of Forest Hills, N. Y., Allan D. Wooley jr. '58 of East Peru, and John Ranlett '57 of Bangor, who was graduated last June and got his book in absentia since he is studying this year at the University of London in England under a Fulbright Scholarship.

Wooley was also awarded the James Bowdoin Cup, which goes annually to the student who in the previous college year has made the highest scholastic average among the undergraduates receiving varsity letters as competitors.

Dean M. Wood '58 of Rumford, R. I., received the General Wallace C. Philoon Trophy, presented each year to the senior who has made the best record at the annual summer camp of the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

Included among the James Bowdoin Scholars were 27 seniors, 16 juniors, and 19 sophomores. Twenty-seven of the men come from Maine and 12 each from Massachusetts and New York. Other states represented are New Jersey with 2 and Connecticut, Maryland, Michigan, New Hampshire, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, and Virginia, each with 1.

In his response Howell outlined the three possibilities facing modern man today as he stands at the threshold of a new age. "If there is one thing that a liberal education should impart to all its partakers," he stated, "it is this — that knowledge is not the province of one age but of all, not of one profession but of every profession, not to be found absolutely in some future utopia but to be found relatively in the entire history of man. . . . The function of the liberal arts student now is to grasp the values that the ages have grasped, to hold firm to them, and to resist their casting down in the face of a new, Orwellian world."

Dramatics

The Masque and Gown is dedicating its 55th season to A. Raymond Rutan of the Class of 1951, Acting Director of Dramatics for the past two years during the absence of Professor George H. Quinby '23.

Mr. and Mrs. Rutan are now in Japan, where he is working as a research fellow in the Faculty of Literature at Waseda University in Tokyo under a Fulbright grant. He is making a study of the Japanese theater.

The official dedication reads, "To A. Raymond Rutan, IV, its former actor, designer, president, and director, the Masque and Gown gratefully dedicates its 55th season."

The first production of the 1957-58 season was Robert Anderson's "Tea and Sympathy," presented in the Pickard Theater on November 20 and 21. Two members of the Masque and Gown's Executive Committee, President Ben Priest and Don Perkins, veterans of many previous productions, were cast in the leading male roles; and Barbara Packard, wife of Charles B. Packard '57 and daughter-in-law of Kenneth G. Packard '26, played

The Esso Education Foundation has made a grant of $3500 to Bowdoin as an unrestricted gift. The grant was one of 345 totaling $1,332,760 made to educational institutions for the academic year 1957-58 by the Foundation.

The Esso Education Foundation was established in 1955 by Standard Oil Company (New Jersey) and a group of domestic affiliates to assist privately supported colleges and universities in the United States.

Music

The musical season in Brunswick started off with an enthusiastic response to programs presented in October by Danish singer Manja Mourier and soprano Adele Addison. The Glee Club sang at Milton High School in Massachusetts on November 22 and at Morse High School in Bath the next day. On December 7 it joined with several other groups in singing Handel's "Messiah" at the First Parish Church in Brunswick. On December 8 the "Messiah" was given again at Portland City Hall.

The Glee Club is also scheduled to make the following appearances: February 28, Pine Manor Junior College, Wellesley, Mass.; March 1, Brockton, Mass.; March 22, Campus Chest concert in Brunswick with Colby Junior College; March 28, Wheelock College, Boston; March 29, Albany, N. Y.; March 30, Pulaski, N. Y.; March 31, Buffalo, N. Y.;

April 1, Syracuse, N. Y.; April 2, Oswego, N. Y.; April 11, annual campus concert in Brunswick; April 12, New London, N. H.; April 18, Lasell Junior College, Auburndale, Mass.; April 19, Natick, Mass.; May 8, Bowdoin Night at the Boston Pops.

The Chapel Choir will sing at the Church of the Advent in Boston on March 2 and at the Cathedral Church of St. Paul in Boston on April 20.

The Bowdoin Music Club will present a madrigal concert on February 19 and the premiere of a new opera by Fred Wilkins '56 next May.

On April 21 Professor Frederic Tillotson will join the Curtis String Quartet in its annual appearance at Bowdoin. And on April 30 Professor Tillotson will present a piano and harpsichord recital.

The latest Glee Club long-playing record is still available at the Moulton Union Bookstore and at the Bowdoin Record Shop, run by Herb Gillman '48 and Don Strong '48. Price is $3.95 plus sales tax, insurance, and postage.

Fall Sports

The Sailing Club, so successful in the past few years, suffered this fall from the loss by graduation of Charlie Leighton and Skip Howland, two of the top sailors in New England. The team won the Hewitt Trophy for the third consecutive year and continued to dominate Maine and Colby, but the Polar Bears did not fare so well in New England competition in the important regattas.

Frank Sabasteanski's cross country team had a surprisingly good season, winning two of its dual meets, those against Bates and Boston College. Individual standouts were Bob Packard, Captain Dave Young, and Tom McGovern.

Bob Miller coached an informal soccer team, which lost close decisions to both Colby and Bates. Mohammed Djoudi, who is serving as Fellow in French this year, was the trainer for the team.

Winter Sports

This is being written before the winter teams have begun their schedules,

Life Magazine has been taking pictures at Bowdoin this fall for a three-part series documenting the problems of the nation's colleges, which must prepare to enroll twice as many students by 1970 as there are presently enrolled. The series will appear sometime next spring.

Life's New England correspondent, Wilbur Jarvis, and internationally known photographer Alfred Eisenstaedt have been assigned to Bowdoin. They arrived on the campus on October 4 to take pictures of the rally before the Trinity-Bowdoin game and also of the Alumni Fund Conference. They returned for James Bowdoin Day on October 24 and remained until after Alumni Weekend early in November. They are expected to return again near the end of the fall semester to complete the picture-story.

Photographed frequently were President Coles, Professor Herbert Brown, and senior Allan Wooley, winner of the James Bowdoin Cup.

In the three-part series, Bowdoin will represent the small liberal arts college, the University of Wisconsin the state universities, and Bakersfield Junior College in California community colleges and junior colleges.

As the Life series focuses attention on the problems Bowdoin faces, it will also focus attention on the problems faced by all other institutions of higher learning. The goal is to help all of higher education.

and it is difficult to make any predictions. There are new varsity coaches in two sports — Nels Corey '39 in hockey and former Boston Celtic Bob Donham in basketball. Frank Sabasteanski '41 and Bob Miller continue to coach track and swimming, respectively.

In hockey Nels Corey lost one of his best prospects before the season even got under way when Ted Sandquist '59 suffered a ruptured spleen in the final week of the touch football schedule. The Polar Bears seem to be stronger at goalie than elsewhere, and they may need to be!

Bob Donham, who arrived in Brunswick on October 27, has a need for more height on his basketball squad, but one thing is sure — the players have developed stamina from long hours of running on the court. Captain Brud Stover will be breaking scoring records right and left in this his senior year. The squad of fourteen men consists of three seniors, nine juniors, and two sophomores.

will coach the freshman hockey squad, and Ed Coombs '42 the yearling basketball team.

Frank Sabasteanski has weightman Bill McWilliams back in action after a year's absence. Otherwise the Polar Bears would appear to have an average squad, with few real standouts, especially in the jumps and the hurdles. The runners, particularly distance men, must carry a heavy load in this winter's meets.

Bob Miller should have a fine swimming team, with several standouts from last season bolstered by an excellent crop of freshmen. His biggest concern will be depth and quantity rather than quality. However, this is a problem the mermen have faced for years, with usually a good degree of success.

Depending upon press deadlines for this issue, we hope to be able to include some of the "early returns."

ROTC

Six seniors have been designated Distinguished Military Students in the Reserve Officers Training Corps this fall. They are John P. Field, Newton Centre, Mass.; Albert F. Marz jr., Warwick, R. I.; Louis A. Norton, Gloucester, Mass.; John H. Reynolds, Detroit, Mich.; Gordon L. Weil, Hempstead, N. Y.; and Dean M. Wood, Rumford, R. I.

Rhodes Candidates

Six seniors have been selected as Rhodes Scholarship candidates from four different states. They are Norman D. Block of South Paris, Joseph M. Brush II of Far Hills, N. J., Roger Howell jr. of Baltimore, Md., Paul Z. Lewis of Sunnyside, N. Y., Gordon L. Weil of Hemp-stead, N. Y., and Allan D. Wooley jr. of East Peru.

Both Block and Wooley will appear in December before the Rhodes Scholarship committee on selection in Maine. Lewis and Weil will take part in the New York competition, while Brush will appear in New Jersey and Howell in Maryland. Two men will be selected from each state to go on to district competition.

Hormell Cup

On October 15 Stephen F. Loeb's '60 of Waterville was awarded the Orren Chalmer Hormell Cup, given annually for high scholastic honors and skill in athletic competition in the recipient's first year at Bowdoin.

A member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity, Loeb's is on the Dean's List and last spring won his class numerals as a sprinter on the freshman track team. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert F. Loeb's of Waterville. Many Bowdoin alumni are undoubtedly acquainted with his father, better known as "Mike" Loeb's of Colby.

Latest Sports Results

HOCKEY—Lost to Middlebury, Dartmouth, Hamilton, and Tufts, then defeated Merrimack 10 to 7.

BASKETBALL—Lost to Harvard, Brandeis, and Colby, then defeated Bates 58 to 57 and lost to Maine in overtime.

SWIMMING—Defeated M.I.T. 52 to 34, McGill 52 to 33, and Trinity 49 to 37.

The freshmen have won four and lost one in basketball and show a fine 3 and 0 record in hockey.

Justice Today

"Justice Today" was the subject of the 1957 Bowdoin College Lecture Series, opened on October 28 with a talk by Professor Walter Gellhorn of the Columbia University Law School faculty.

The series of three lectures continued on November 14, when Professor Charles L. Black jr. of the Yale University Law School was the speaker. The third and final lecture will be delivered on January 15 by New York State Supreme Court Justice David W. Peck, who will retire on December 31 after ten years as Presiding Justice of the Appellate Division of the First Judicial Department.

For Sale

Alfred Schretter '59, co-editor of the 1958 Bugle, reports that copies will be available for alumni wishing to purchase the volume. The book, according to Mr. Schretter, will be "bigger and better" and will contain color and "a different slant on student life." The price for each copy is $7.50. Anyone wishing to secure one should write to the following address before January 20 — Alfred Schretter, 1958 Bowdoin Bugle, Moore Hall, Brunswick, Maine.

Alumni may also be interested in two new records which will be available by the time the Alumnus reaches their mailbox. The 1956-57 Meddiebempsters have just put out a long-playing record entitled "La Mer." Priced at $3.50 plus fifty cents packing and mailing charges, it is available from the Meddies, c/o Zeta Psi House, Brunswick.

Peter Potter '58, leader of the Meddies and winner of the Arthur Godfrey Talent Scouts program on CBS-TV last June 24, has come out with a long-playing record of Christmas carols. To secure this, alumni should write to Mr. Potter at the Zeta Psi House.

Matching Programs

Many of the matching-gift programs which have been established by corporations were listed on page 21 of the October ALUMNUS. We have recently received a report from the American Alumni Council listing the following corporations which have also inaugurated matching-gift programs:

Harry Lane Palmer '04

Harry L. Palmer of the Class of 1904, one of Bowdoin's best known and most loyal alumni, died peacefully in his sleep early Sunday morning, November 3, 1957, in Skowhegan at his country home, the home in which he was born. He was 76 years old.

The last stanza of the United States Military Academy's song, "Alma Mater," says in part:

"And when our work is done,
Our course on earth is run,
May it be said 'Well done,'
Be thou at peace."

For what Bowdoin man can this be more rightly said than for Harry. He was successful in the business world, but to us Bowdoin friends and alumni his service through more than half a century for the betterment of others should be an inspiration.

His work in England with the American Red Cross, his unceasing interest in and service for his fraternity were outstanding. But the untiring contribution he made to Bowdoin through all the years is a record that can scarcely be equalled and should be a continuing inspiration to us.

Active in the New York Bowdoin Club from the time of his arrival in that city in 1904; its secretary in 1924-25 and its president in 1929-30. A member of the Alumni Council 1928-31 and again in 1936-39. Given the Alumni Achievement Award in 1934 for his outstanding work in the New York Alumni Club. An Overseer from 1934 until last June, when he resigned and was elected an Overseer Emeritus. Special Gifts Chairman of the Sesquicentennial Fund Campaign, 1947-49. Executive Director thereof 1949-53. Given an honorary Master of Arts degree by the College in 1951. President of the Somerset County Bowdoin Club 1947 to 1956. These are all indications of his devotion to his college. Of all Bowdoin's loyal sons few indeed can claim such a record.

Harry prepared for college at Skowhegan High School. He graduated from Bowdoin in 1904. His college interests were primarily social and musical. He was a member of the then "glee and mandolin-guitar club" for four years. His fraternity was Theta Delta Chi. The present Chapter House, for which he was largely responsible, is testimony to his lifelong interest.

Following his graduation he accepted a position with the New York Telephone Company in New York City. In 1917 he resigned from their employ as Division Commercial Superintendent to become General Manager of the H. K. McCann Company, then a young but thriving advertising agency which was later, as the McCann-Erickson Company, to become the second largest such firm in the world. In 1922 he became a vice-president and a director. In 1938 he retired from that firm. He was a director of the U. S. Potash Company and a member of the Union League and the University Clubs.

As we already know, this retirement from the advertising world by no means closed Harry's years of service. Quite the opposite, it opened the door and gave him much more time to devote to worthwhile projects for the benefit of others.

Before his retirement in 1938 Harry's Bowdoin activities had been largely confined to the New York area. He had served as Secretary of the New York Bowdoin Club and as its president. He had served one term on the Alumni Council and was completing a second term. He had been given the Alumni Achievement Award and been elected to the Board of Overseers.

But Bowdoin was not Harry's sole interest. With the advent of World War II it was only natural for Harvey D. Gibson, Harry's fraternity brother and fellow glee and mandolin-guitar club member, to turn to Harry for his services as a member of the executive staff of his office as Red Cross Commissioner for Great Britain and Western Europe. This post he filled from 1943 to 1945.

Back from London, back to the place of his birth in Skowhegan, Harry turned again to Bowdoin and its needs. He had certainly as much to do as anyone with the Governing Boards' reaching the decision to set up a fund raising campaign which became the Sesquicentennial Fund. Having gone that far, he could not be persuaded to accept the directorship in 1947 and it was only with much reluctance that he consented to serve as special gifts chairman, for which he was so well qualified. To this work he gave full time without compensation for two years until 1949, when he consented to take on the Directorship, in which capacity he continued to serve until 1953, when the Sesquicentennial Fund ceased to be active and fund raising came under the newly created position of Vice President of the College.

In 1951 he married Mrs. Madeleine Gillespie Hancock Palmer, who survives him. They met during World War II when they were both working for the Red Cross in England.

Needless to say, neither his interest in nor his work for Bowdoin relaxed following the close of the Sesquicentennial Fund Campaign. He was the energetic promoter of the Somerset County Bowdoin Club and its president from 1947 until it was absorbed by the Kennebec Valley Club. He was a member of several important committees of the Governing Boards, and for Harry, being on a committee meant being a working member who carefully researched into the background of any problem and also looked forward into the future probabilities that might result from any proposed action. It was not his nature to be a member of any responsible group without being active therein.

And so because of failing health he resigned last June from the Board of Overseers. His action was accepted with deep regret and with the realization that the Board had lost one of its most valuable members.

On the day of Harry's death President Coles paid tribute to him in these words: "Harry Lane Palmer . . . devoted himself to the service of Bowdoin College and his fellow man. . . . His many friends join me in extending to his widow sincere sympathy in her loss, a loss shared by so many in the Bowdoin family."

In awarding him a Master of Arts degree in 1951, the late Kenneth Sills read this citation:

"Harry Lane Palmer of the Class of 1904. Overseer of the College since 1934, zealous and effective Director of the Sesquicentennial Fund, giving generously of his time and services and placing his wide and varied experience, both in business and as Red Cross executive in England, at the disposal of his Alma Mater. An ardent exemplar both in theory and practice of the value of Anglo-American friendship; courteous and persuasive ambassador of Bowdoin's claims on friends far and near; with gratitude."

Surely we of Bowdoin can all say: "Well done, Harry. 'Be Thou at Peace.'"

YOUTH—Should It Not Be Served

A few comments on young men for Bowdoin's Governing Boards

By John W. Frost '04

Under the law establishing Bowdoin College, enacted by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts June 24, 1794, the College is "to be under the government and regulation of two certain bodies politic and corporate" (a) The President and Trustees "never greater than thirteen nor less than seven," which corporation holds title to the property of the institution and initiates by its vote all measures relating to administration and management; and (b) The Overseers of Bowdoin College "never greater than forty-five nor less than twenty-five" including the President of the College, and the Secretary of the President and Trustees, in which corporation is vested the broad visitatorial rights and powers of a supervising body, including the right to concur or not to concur in each act of the Trustees. Both are co-optative bodies. Membership is terminated by death, resignation, or removal. Bowdoin's actual experience over fifteen decades shows an average length of service in the Overseers of about 10½ years, and in the Trustees about 15 years.

At the season of the Alumni balloting each year to select members of the Alumni Council, Board of Overseers, and of other bodies, criticism is often made that the tendency is to pass by the young men in the Bowdoin family and to select men of middle age whose position in life has become established, and who, either by their services to the College, or by their long public careers, have become widely known among Bowdoin men. It is frequently lamented that so small a proportion of those chosen are young men.

It is interesting to see what the record shows, and to note that in the past and down through the years Bowdoin has not entirely failed to recognize youth, and certainly has not held brevity of years to be a disqualification for office in the positions of trust to which it has called its sons. In all her history, Bowdoin has called some 38 different men under 30 years of age to become members of her Board of Overseers, and one to become a member of her Board of Trustees.

Some Youthful Overseers

The youngest man ever to be elected an Overseer or a Trustee was Samuel Thatcher. He was a lawyer of the Town of Warren, Maine, and later resided at Bangor. In 1798, at the age of 22, he became a member of the Board of Overseers and served as such for twenty years. Mr. Thatcher was a Harvard graduate, and must have been a young man of notable ability. He was a member of the Massachusetts legislature at the age of 25, and served in that body and in the Maine legislature at several different times over a period of years. He was a Representative in Congress from 1801-1805. He died July 18, 1872, at the age of 96.

Andrew Greenwood was another young man who was chosen in his youthful years to help in mapping out the destinies of Bowdoin. Born in 1776 in Salem, he became a lawyer at Bath, Maine, and in 1800, at the age of 24, was made an Overseer of the College, serving as such until his death in 1816. He served in the Massachusetts legislature from 1812 to 1813. The College conferred upon him the honorary degree of Master of Arts in 1808.

Dr. Isaac Lincoln

Four men have been called at the age of 25 to serve Bowdoin as Overseers: — One was Ebenezer Coffin, a member of the original Board organized in 1794. As a minister, he was living at Brunswick when the College was incorporated. Both he and his father, Rev. Paul Coffin of Buxton, Harvard graduates, were members of the first Board and served briefly. His service on the Boards covered the years 1794-1796. One was Robert Dunlap Dunning, a native of Brunswick, who served as an Overseer for 34 years—1805 to 1839. A citizen of prominence, he served in the Massachusetts legislature for several terms, and was a member in 1819 of the convention to draft a Constitution for the new State of Maine. And one was Dr. Isaac Lincoln, a Harvard graduate, who lived in Topsham and Brunswick and whose long 65-year period of service as an Overseer was ended by his death in 1868. The College conferred on Dr. Lincoln a degree of Master of Arts in 1806 and that of Doctor of Medicine in 1831. His family has been identified with the College in various ways during its entire history. His son, Dr. John Dunlap Lincoln, of the Class of 1843, was an Overseer of the College from 1866 until his death in 1877, and his grandson, the distinguished Dr. C. S. F. Lincoln, of the Class of 1891, for several years served the College, acting as resident physician, and is known and loved by all of us. And a great-grandson of Dr. Isaac Lincoln, John Lincoln Baxter, of the Class of 1916, is now one of the Trustees of the College. And another of these four was Merritt Caldwell of the Class of 1828. He was Principal of Kent's Hill Seminary, and later a Professor at Dickinson College. At the age of 25, he became a member of the Board of Overseers in 1831, and served on that Board for 17 years until his death in 1848.

And One Youthful Trustee

The Trustees have been somewhat less ready than the Overseers in drafting youth, but even in that conservative body there is the record of Ashur Ware, who became a Trustee of the College at the age of 29. Judge Ware, after a few years' teaching at Harvard, where he had graduated in 1804, established himself at Portland as a lawyer, and later became Judge of the United States District Court. He was a Trustee of the College for 33 years, from 1811 to 1844, and is the only instance, so far as records show, where a person under the age of 30 has been chosen to the Board of Trustees.

Governor Dunlap

Besides those already mentioned, the list of young recruits contains several notable names. One of these is Robert P. Dunlap, of the Class of 1815, of Brunswick. Governor Dunlap became an Overseer in 1821 at the age of 27. His long and notable public career was then just starting. The next year he went to the Maine legislature, later to the Senate, of which he was President for two different terms. He served as Governor from 1834 to 1837, and as a member of Congress from 1843 to 1847. As an Overseer, he served the College for 38 years, for 16 of which he was President of the Board.

Francis Brown, later President of Dartmouth College, became a member of Bowdoin's Board of Overseers in 1810 when, at the age of 26, he was a pastor at North Yarmouth. He served as a Trustee from 1814 to 1815 and then left the Board when he became President of Dartmouth.

General John Marshall Brown of the Class of 1860 became an Overseer in 1867 at the age of 29. Long a prominent figure in the public life of Portland and of the State, he served Bowdoin as an Overseer and as President of the Board for 25 years, and as a Trustee for six years, from 1901 to 1907.

Richard Cobb of Portland, one of the members of the Class of 1806, became an Overseer at the age of 29 in 1817 and served for 19 years on the Board. George Evans, one of Maine's famous men, a member of the Class of 1815 at Bowdoin, was chosen an Overseer at the age of 29. A member of Congress for many years, United States Senator, United States Attorney General, he found time to serve on the Boards as Overseer and Trustee for the long period of 41 years. Another notable name in the list is that of Joseph McKeen of Brunswick. Son of Bowdoin's first President, he was, at the age of 26, chosen an Overseer and later a Trustee, serving in these two capacities for a total of 52 years. His lineal descendant, Joseph McKeen, graduated a member of the Class of 1936.

In the first one-and-a-half centuries of the history of the College, some 525 persons have served as Overseers and Trustees of Bowdoin. Thirty-nine of these, about 7%, initiated their services on the Boards at the age of 29 or less. The numbers drawn from the ranks of youth were greater in the early days than later.

At Present

The present Overseers of the College average about 66 years of age; the average for the Trustees is about 72. The average age at which the present members of the two Boards were first chosen for this position of trust was about 50. No present member of the Boards was under 30 when chosen. Of the present members of the Boards two were under 33 when elected. Frank G. Farrington, Esq., the most youthful, was 32 years, 4 months, and 24 days of age when chosen an Overseer at Commencement June 19, 1937. A close second in this comparison is Philip G. Clifford, Esq. Elected an Overseer in June, 1915, at the age of 32 years, 9 months, and 7 days, he is now, after 42 years, the senior in point of service among the members of both Boards.

From the records, it appears that the present tendency is distinctly away from the selection of young men to membership in Bowdoin's Boards. Each year, in the difficult process of filling vacancies, the Boards and the Alumni are presented with lists of excellent names, all able, loyal and devoted men, any of whom would serve Bowdoin well and shed lustre on the College, and it is doubtless inevitable that men of long experience will be chosen. The increasing complexity of all matters relating to education, the multitude of new problems to be met, the increased responsibility for safe administration of great funds, and the obvious value of mature experience in steering a safe course among the many hazards of modern educational voyaging, all point to and emphasize the merits of years in these positions of trust, but it would indeed be unfortunate if Bowdoin should permanently shut her eyes to the advantage of having in its Boards the leavening quality that can be furnished by a fair proportion of able young men. At their recent meeting, the Overseers were reminded that President Hyde commented on this subject in one of his annual reports, in which, reciting the essentials of a good College, he included as one essential "Governing Boards which retain old men but select young men to fill vacancies, combining wisdom and experience with initiative and progress."

It might be put forward as a recommendation that for the next few years the Boards and the Alumni give careful thought to the names of the younger men who are proposed for such vacancies rather than always to select men whose reputation among us is based upon three or four decades as Alumni. Certainly no harm would come to Bowdoin if it had a few 25-year-olds on its Boards.

Looking

In the fall the Orient carried the sad account of the boatrace during the summer at Lake Quinsigamond where Cornell won by about 2½ feet. Bowdoin men had a definite feeling of resentment against Cornell for unsportsmanlike conduct and against the referee for failing to penalize Cornell for its headstart of half a boat length.

No football during the fall, but there were several baseball games between class teams and between the "Bowdoins" and neighboring nines including one game lost and one won with Bates; and one lost to the "Colbys."

The Orient says that the students returning in the fall were disappointed not to find the expected horsecars running on Maine Street and over to Topsham. It goes on to say that the plan had been to have the Bar Harbor train stop for an hour to permit tourists to take the horsecars to see the falls and the fishway. One suspects that this paragraph carried a flavor which cannot now be tasted.

A rearrangement of the curriculum added French and German as electives in freshman and sophomore years and rearranged the science course of junior and senior years, in the effort to keep a happy medium between the wholly required curriculum of the past and the almost wholly elective curriculum which Harvard had introduced.

In a thoughtful editorial on fashions in athletic contests the Orient arrived at the conclusion that baseball would outlast boating and football as an intercollegiate sport.

Chemistry moved from the old college commons building (now the shop) to the ground floor of Adams Hall, acquiring "far better accommodations."

The undergraduate enrollment reached 170.

Bowdoin withdrew from the New England Intercollegiate Athletic Association because of lack of funds sufficient to send contestants to the meets and sent out feelers to the other Maine colleges with reference to founding a state association.

Professor Lee was absent during a large part of the college year on an expedition to study wild life on the Galapagos Islands in the Pacific Ocean.

The freshmen organized a class prayer meeting which at first held meetings in private rooms but found the space insufficient and moved to the YMCA room.

The college triennial catalog was under preparation by Professor Little for issuance at Commencement time. Its content was to be increased and its language changed from Latin to English.

Marcellus Baker, the dark colored extra-curriculum instructor in pugilism, decamped after collecting tuition fees in advance and borrowing lavishly from friends and pupils.

Professor Little bought the house at College Street where Noel now lives.

A Young Republican Club was organized with Professor Robinson as president.

The football team began the collegiate year with losses by one touchdown to Harvard, (made by fullback Apollonio, great-uncle of Carlton Apollonio, Bowdoin 1953), four to Exeter, one to New Hampshire State, three to Amherst, and two to Tufts, but subsequently Colby, Bates, and Maine were defeated. The victory over Maine, 34 to 5, cancelled regrets at losing the games with out-of-state colleges. An enthusiastic dinner was given Coach Ross McClave when he finished his duties at the end of the season. Jud the Barber presented him and the football team with silver loving cups and the New Meadows Inn entertained the first and second elevens at a dinner. Captain Crowley was presented with a solid gold fob by a group of Brunswick men.

For the first time since fraternity houses had increased the rooming facilities, the dormitories were filled.

In a letter to the Orient on November 28, 1907, K. C. M. Sills '01 pointed out the need for a college union, which need was ultimately met by the gift of Augustus F. Moulton, 1873, in 1927. It doesn't do any harm now and then to mention what one would like to have for Christmas!

To needling from the press with reference to basketball, the Orient said flatly "that there is not the slightest possibility that Bowdoin could be induced."

During the summer John F. Morrison and Richard A. Lee of the Class of 1908 lost their lives in a squall while they were cruising in a small sailboat in Casco Bay. Their bodies were never recovered. Harry J. Dugan of the Class of 1910 also lost his life by drowning that summer. All three were lovable lads popular in class and college. Morrison was president and Lee was vice-president of the YMCA; Lee was the only son of Professor Leslie A. Lee of the biology department. Memorial services were held at the Chapel on the last Sunday in October with an inspiring address by Professor Chapman. Mrs. Leslie A. Lee established a scholarship in honor of her son and a similar scholarship was established by Benjamin F. Morrison, grandfather of John, in memory of John.

The Dramatic Club produced "Halfback Sandy" in several towns in the state. All the parts, both male and female, were taken by undergraduates.

The competency of Professor Hudson Bridge Hastings, who was carrying on a course in surveying, was attested by his winning cigars from a farmer in Topsham by calculating exactly the acreage of his farm.

The American Medical Association ranked the Maine Medical School as one of the five leading schools in the country although it was far smaller than any of the other four — Johns Hopkins, Harvard, Yale, and Tufts.

Professor Ham resigned to accept a job at Trinity but was to return a few years later to Bowdoin. Professor F. W. Brown was added to the faculty.

Charlie Bowser coached the football team. The season started well, but the outcome was disappointing — winning from Massachusetts State and (for the first time in 11 years) from Williams and tying Tufts. Bowdoin lost to Colby, tied Bates in a no-score game, and lost to Maine 7 to 6 ending the season with a 20 to 0 defeat from Wesleyan.

Hard times diminished the student loan fund to the point where no funds were available for lending.

The sophomores named a committee of 12 to keep the freshmen under control. Phi Chi was nominally resuscitated.

Five new members were added to the faculty, among them A. P. Daggett '25; W. C. Root, taking the place in the Chemistry Department of Associate Professor Bollinger, who died suddenly in August; and Elbridge Sibley in the Department of Sociology. Promotions were given to Professors Kendrick, Helmreich, and others.

A clear view was had of the total eclipse of the sun during August. People from this vicinity who made the trip inland in the expectation of a better view would have done better to stay home. Elaborate preparations by scientific groups to view the eclipse from places with a record for clear weather in August came to naught by overcast skies, but Brunswick had a blue sky. From the roof of the Science Building Professor Hutchins got some wonderful pictures.

The President's Gateway, presented by the Class of 1907, was dedicated on Alumni Day.

Eleven states were represented in the freshman enrollment, Maine holding first place over Massachusetts, which had been first in 1931.

Chi Psi dedicated and occupied its new lodge on November 1st.

Oil replaced coal in the central heating system.

"Back from a victorious coaching session at the Olympic Games, Coach Magee looks optimistically into the future."

In chapel President Sills condemned the Eighteenth Amendment and the attempt to cure by law evils which must be met by individual efforts. Later in the fall Benjamin H. Spence of Toronto discussed Canada's successful handling of the liquor situation.

Dean Nixon was defeated by Professor Kendrick in the finals of the Brunswick Record tennis tournament.

Interest on the campus in national politics was indicated by the organization of a Republican Club, which held an enthusiastic mass meeting. A campus poll voted overwhelmingly for Hoover with Roosevelt a rather poor third. On election eve Professors Bartlett for the Republicans, Gray for the Socialists, and Catlin for the Democrats spoke to a large audience at the Union, which the Orient suggests would have been better attended if some of the students had not gone early to bed to get a good night's sleep as preparation for sitting up to hear the returns the next night. On election day two states voted for Hoover.

In an historical article on the "end woman" system which was given up in 1901 the Orient referred to their laziness and the absence of personal beauty which was a prerequisite to being elected for a job.

Basketball was still impossible at Bowdoin for lack of money and not, as had been rumored, by reason of any restrictive clause in the deed of the gift of the Sargent Gymnasium.

Twenty-seven major failures among the freshmen in the pre-Thanksgiving warning period plus thirty-two warnings among the upper classes set a total only one short of the total of sixty in 1927. Minor warnings also were far in excess of the average. How far the financial depression which had prevailed for three years was responsible is anybody's guess.

Notwithstanding the depression, the winter houseparties were a success with the famed Casa Loma jazzmen furnishing the music for the Gymnasium dance.

Marie Peary Stafford, daughter of Admiral Robert E. Peary, reported in a most interesting manner in the Moulton Union on the recent Peary memorial expedition to set up a monument, the gift of Mrs. Peary, designed by Felix A. Burton, 1907, on the cliffs of Cape York on the southern tip of Greenland.

Among other speakers at the Union were Professor C. Wilbert Snow, 1907, of Wesleyan (later to be lieutenant-governor of Connecticut); and Professor Morize of Harvard, who discussed Paris street scenes. He talked in French but spoke so simply that listeners unskilled in that language could get a pretty good idea of what he was saying.

At Memorial Hall Gladys Cook and the Boston Orchestral Club gave a program of classical music and songs and Miss Lois Davidson presented a costume folk song recital.

E. A. Thompson, a blind graduate of the Class of 1891, gave a brilliant reading of "Disraeli" in the Union, taking the part of all the actors in the play.

President Sills disapproved the change in the method of selecting Rhodes scholars whereby regional rather than state scholarships were granted on the basis of intensive selection, which he felt had a tendency to send to Oxford spectacular rather than the all-around men whom Rhodes intended to get. Bowdoin's candidate for selection had been discarded in favor of the candidate from another college who Dr. Sills plainly considered was less fitted than Bowdoin's candidate.

The Growler was again started and again wobbled fitfully for a few issues. As in the past it tried too hard to be funny.

Books

ROY A. GALLANT, Exploring the Moon: Doubleday & Company, Inc., 1955; pp. 63; $2.50. Exploring the Universe: Doubleday & Company, Inc., 1956; pp. 62; $2.50. Exploring Mars: Doubleday & Company, Inc., 1956; pp. 62; $2.50.

There must be a great many parents who suddenly realize that their small children have a wider knowledge of science than they do themselves, and also a wider curiosity. If they are normal parents, this irks them. They get a little bothered when they cannot answer questions such as these — "Are there men on Mars?" "Could people live on the moon?" "Where did the moon come from anyway?" "What is out beyond those stars?" If these can be answered to a child's satisfaction, there follows a whole series of questions that start with why. In my own case, even if I'm lucky enough to win the first round, I'm likely to suffer thereafter. This is probably why I have had such a happy time reading these three books by Roy Gallant, which deal with the very questions upon which I am quizzed. These books, Exploring the Universe, Exploring the Moon, and Exploring Mars, are similar in that they all offer up-to-date scientific knowledge of Astronomy. Each book is brief and colorful, and written simply enough to be understood by any reader, young or old, with a sincere interest in his questions.

EXPLORING THE MOON

According to Mr. Gallant, one astronomer's guess is as good as another's regarding the origin of the moon. No one really knows, but the guessing through the years makes an interesting and dramatic tale. Equally interesting is the imaginary trip he takes you on to the moon, a land of craters and mountains where you would freeze at two hundred and fifty degrees below zero and boil at two hundred and twelve degrees above zero.

Another section of the book is devoted to the moon in its relation to Earth, its nearness, its gravitational pull (which makes our tides), its eclipses and its cycle.

EXPLORING MARS

This book, like the others, has a title which explains itself. Here we again trace the theories which have evolved through the ages as to the character of one of Earth's nearest neighbors. This planet, which produces no light of its own, shines with the light reflected from the sun. The "Red Planet," as Mars has been nicknamed because of its red-orange glow, has a lot of tantalizing features. Mars has an elliptical orbit and passes close to Earth only every fifteenth and seventeenth years. Once astronomers do get a good view they find it difficult to interpret what they see. Mars is a maze of mysterious "canals" (waterless ones) and deserts. It is a lifeless place because its atmosphere is so thin; and because this atmosphere is lacking in oxygen, the regions of Mars are dry and its temperatures are extreme.

EXPLORING THE UNIVERSE

As I finished this book, I was struck by how much like a great family a sky full of stars can be. Some stars exist in groups, others do not. Some have short lives, others long. Some follow regular paths, and some do not. Stars, like people, are all sizes, ages, and colors. Some stars are twins — some are bright and some are dim!

These books have a great deal of startling information served up briefly and in simple language. Roughly half of the pages have vivid pictures and diagrams, which closely follow the text. The pictures by Lowell Hess contribute greatly to the ease with which a youngster can salt away his knowledge. Even a child too small to read could learn a lot just from looking at the excellent diagrams and pictures.

Mr. Gallant and Mr. Hess form a fine combination as a scientific writing and illustrating team. Their latest publication, Exploring the Weather, should find equally enthusiastic readers and should also be a boon to parents of curious children.

JEANNETTE STEELE CROSS

FREDERIC ERLE THORNLEY TILLOTSON, The Common Practice of Materials and Forms: Moulton Union Bookstore, Brunswick; pp. 267; $3.50.

Mr. Tillotson has added one more string to the proverbial bow. Somewhere in his busy life of pianist, conductor, lecturer, and department head, he has found the time to write a textbook. The Common Practice of Materials and Forms, presently in mimeographed form, is written by a musician who is thoroughly grounded in harmony, theory, and the other mechanics of music. The book, frankly, is not for leisure reading or for the dilettante, who wishes a smattering of ignorance. It is, on the contrary, a college textbook, reflecting the highly specialized science of music and the author's dedication to the art.

The book makes no concessions to the tawdry or the trivial. Just as the title The Common Practice of Materials and Forms is unlike more typical titles such as Here's the Pitch! or Tunesmiths and Tinhorns, similarly the text itself is free from the usual anecdotes, "cute" stories, and legends that clutter music appreciation books, geared more for entertainment than for instruction. Mr. Tillotson's book is down to business, anxious for the student to learn as much as possible about music, in order to share the enjoyment of intelligent listening.

In his preface Mr. Tillotson defines common practice: "Whenever we find an extended period in which the style of writing can be identified by certain idiomatic musical speech or methods of procedure, that style is defined as a common practice for that period."

The book itself is divided into three major parts: materials of music, musical forms, and modern music. The greater part of the book concerns the materials of music: melody, harmony, rhythm, and color. Part Two investigates musical forms: rondo, sonata, minuet, theme and variation, and tone poem. Finally, Part Three discusses modern music, its beginnings, impressionism, the twelvetone system, some of the greats (Debussy, Ravel, Shostakovich, et al.). Furthermore, Mr. Tillotson has added three very complete and highly useful appendices. His appendix of definitions is an excellent glossary of musical terms. Appendix ii lists the musical compositions studied in the course, facts about composers, and the book's bibliography; and the third appendix provides additional analyses for score reading and more detailed interpretation of particular compositions.

Max Schoen's words in the Foreword — "The measure of the richness of the expression is the wealth of detail experienced." — seems to set the pattern for the book. Mr. Tillotson takes great pains to familiarize the student with the timbre of various instruments. He carefully distinguishes between musical terms, for example: anacrusis and thesis motifs; basso continuo, basso ostinato, and pedal point; ternary and binary designs. Primarily, however, he is determined that the student learn the distinction between harmonic and melodic rhythms. After an intensive study of musical materials, which are admirably illustrated by excerpts from compositions, the author then discusses musical forms by employing complete compositions.

Mr. Tillotson writes in his Preface that "the foundation for intelligent listening lies not in reading about music but upon active listening to the tonal materials and forms as they appear in long terms of common practice in musical history." Although the author delves into the historical development of music and discusses the technicalities of music, this textbook is essentially concerned with listening to music. Consequently, the book abounds in musical examples; and, without exception, they are of excellent choice. As I have already mentioned, appendix ii lists musical compositions studied in the course, and actually this appendix would serve admirably as a check list for anyone wishing to build a very complete and satisfying record collection.

Whenever a textbook appears, it is bound to reflect the department of the college from which it comes; certainly this book causes us to rejoice that Mr. Tillotson is the staff of Bowdoin's musical life.

JOHN F. MACMORRAN

RICHARD V. MCCANN, Delinquency: Sickness or Sin?: Harper & Brothers, 1957; $3.00.

In 1954 a grant was made to the Harvard Divinity School "for a study of the greater role which religion might play in preventing delinquency and in guaranteeing more useful lives for our youth."

A seminar in delinquency was organized, and students were sent out to help in detention centers, clinics, probation departments, and other institutions and agencies. This program was later extended to Andover Newton Theological School, and the present book by Dr. McCann, a member of the faculty of that institution and director of the seminar from 1954 to 1956, describes the work of his students, the characteristics of the juvenile offenders and their families, the activities of the official and unofficial agencies, and, finally and importantly, his views as to the role that religion and the church should play in meeting this problem.

The first part of the book, roughly the first seven chapters, presents a brief, simplified, and highly readable story of the delinquent — his problems, his backgrounds, and the ways in which he is dealt with by those trying to help him. Interest in this portion of the book is maintained through the use of short case-histories, reports of juvenile court hearings, and accounts of home visits. The story told is representative of similar surveys, and the conclusions drawn and principles cited are essentially in accord with current professional thought in the field of delinquency and crime. For a short non-technical sketch of the problem and its setting, this material is very good, although, for this reader, too heavily seasoned with such statements as this, found on page 55: "This inadequate self-image is the rickets of the personality, the yaws of the character."

As the book runs its course, especially from chapter eight until its conclusion, the religious emphasis becomes stronger and the descriptive emphasis becomes weaker until, at times, it comes close to the vanishing point. There are, however, many practical suggestions as to effective preventive programs available not only for the church but also for the family and the community.

In summary, it might be said that this little book should be of especial value to the clergy as an aid to their better understanding of juvenile delinquency and should help toward their providing a greater role for religion "in preventing delinquency and in guaranteeing more useful lives for our youth."

BURTON W. TAYLOR

JOHN J. PULLEN, The Twentieth Maine: J. B. Lippincott Co., 1957; pp. 338; $5.00.

In The Twentieth Maine John J. Pullen has demonstrated conclusively one of my own pet theories — that Maine boys are the heart of whatever undertaking they are a part of. This I say freely and ungrudgingly, despite the fact that John Pullen was graduated from Colby College in 1935 and Colby has defeated Bowdoin on the gridiron for four years in a row now by a combined total of only sixteen points!

The Twentieth Maine describes with "You Are There" clarity the life of the 20th Regiment Infantry, Maine Volunteers, during the Civil War, beginning in August of 1862 and rising with hardly diminishing tension to that glorious moment at Appomattox, when the 20th Maine was one of the regiments chosen to receive the surrender of Lee's troops, and Bowdoin's own Joshua Lawrence Chamberlain was named to command the Union forces at the ceremony.

I say "with hardly diminishing tension" because one exception must be made to that statement. That exception is Mr. Pullen's magnificent description of the desperate battling at Little Round Top when by some miraculous combination of intelligence, instinct, courage, and determination the 20th Maine saved the day at Gettysburg. In his words, "Seldom if ever before had one small regiment been in such a fantastic spot.

"And seldom had a regiment fought so fantastically. The maneuver whereby the double line of battle had stretched itself out into a single line, extending and bending back under fire with the noise making ordinary commands impossible, was something out of a dream.

"The charge, the swinging and straightening of the left wing back into line, the plunge down the slope had succeeded simply because it had been so improbable."

President James S. Coles of Bowdoin in his annual report for 1956-57 referred to the College's "extraordinary individuality . . . in an age when conformity seems the universal goal." He went on to attribute this individuality particularly to students from Maine, who "bring to the College tremendous moral fiber which seems to spring from the very soil of northern New England, strengthened by the rigors of its climate."

John Pullen referred to this same moral integrity when he wrote early in The Twentieth Maine, "There was a lot of civilian independence in the enlisted men of the 20th Maine that neither Ames nor anyone else would ever be able to eradicate."

That Maine men still remain the heart of Bowdoin College is attested by the fact that 27 of the 62 James Bowdoin Scholars honored on October 24 come from the Pine Tree State. This despite the fact that less than one-third of the student body as a whole comes from Maine. And last June four juniors were elected to Phi Beta Kappa. Three were from Maine — one from East Peru, one from South Paris, one from Sanford. This is almost like calling the roll of the 20th Maine once again nearly one hundred years after Little Round Top.

Mr. Pullen's volume deserves to be read by all Bowdoin men, indeed by all people who have any interest in the unselfish sacrifices made by individual men in the Civil War in order that this country might continue as one nation in a brotherhood that, sorely tried and tautly strained as it has been in the past and is now in the present, nevertheless endures. The United States endures "united" because that is the will of the majority today and because that was the will of the majority a century ago.

The Twentieth Maine reads like an exciting historical novel rather than the history of a Civil War regiment. More than anything else, it reminds me of the Hornblower series of C. S. Forester, volumes which I usually manage to read at least once each year.

My hat has been off to Joshua Chamberlain since my senior year at Bowdoin, when I wrote a one hundred page biography of him which some day perhaps will be expanded into a full length volume. My hat is now off to the 20th Maine. And it is also unmistakably off to Colby's John J. Pullen!

ROBERT M. CROSS

Souvenirs de Jeunesse. An Anthology, edited by CLARENCE D. ROUILLARD: Harcourt, Brace, and Company, 1957; pp. 322; $3.25.

Just prior to the outbreak of World War II, Professor C. D. Rouillard '24 (Ph. D. Harvard, 1936) established himself as a scholar of considerable merit with the publication of a huge (700 pages) monograph entitled The Turk in French History, Thought, and Literature (1520-1660). Specialists were quick to hail this work as the definitive study of a literary type and recognized it as an indispensable reference book crammed full of carefully controlled facts relative to the history of the Ottoman Empire as seen through French eyes in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

Professor Rouillard now brings the same originality and meticulous attention to detail to an anthology intended primarily to satisfy the perennial need for a good intermediate French reader on the college level. Unpretentious in appearance, Souvenirs de Jeunesse is a delightful collection of youthful experiences and impressions as told by fourteen well-known authors.

The Foreword provides the reader with an adequate introduction to this genre of literature, and a footnote, p. XII, contains a very complete bibliography of modern studies in the field of French autobiography. As an invitation to further readings of this type, the editor lists, in another footnote, Souvenirs and Mémoires, selections from which would indeed have made stimulating classroom reading (e.g. Georges Sand and Francis Carco) but which, for one reason or another, were regrettably omitted here.

The works extracted in this anthology were composed by authors averaging over fifty years of age. There is one notable exception, however: the first two chapters of a book written at the age of twenty-eight by Jean Prévost, a martyr to the French Resistance in 1944. Each selection is preceded by a thumbnail sketch of the author and by a brief appreciation of his works with special attention being given to the passages presented in this collection.

The emphasis is clearly on modern authors, but Rouillard has done well to include the two classics of the genre, Jean-Jacques Rousseau's Confessions and Chateaubriand's Mémoires d'Outre-Tombe. Both these works were published posthumously and, in each case, scholars have expended considerable energy in an endeavor to establish a definitive text. One has the right to expect modern editors of classroom texts to take advantage of these scholarly contributions. One might make, in this connection, serious reservations with respect to the choice of edition made as a basis for the Rousseau and Chateaubriand extracts in this anthology.

The overall treatment of the text, however, is more than satisfactory. Excisions were made with great care. In one case, notably, the entire paragraph is given in a passage where, in the reviewer's estimation, Schinz erred in deleting a number of important sentences in his justly famous Vie et Oeuvres de Jean-Jacques Rousseau edited for the same type of reader. Professor Rouillard, now at the University of Toronto, is to be commended for the amount of care with which he prepared the notes at the bottom of each page of text. Instead of the usual English translations of troublesome expressions and words, the teacher and student are provided with an accurate paraphrase in French. This innovation is a good one and it is to be hoped that other editors will follow his example.

Professor Rouillard promises another anthology soon, the next to be made up of souvenirs romancés as opposed to the souvenirs réels edited here. It will without a doubt prove to be a useful companion to the present volume of interesting selections.

AUTHORS

ROY A. GALLANT '50 is now studying for his Ph.D. at the Columbia Graduate School and is associated with Doubleday and Company, New York City. Last summer he received the Thomas A. Edison Award for his book Exploring the Universe.

FREDERIC ERLE THORNLEY TILLOTSON, Mus.D., is so well known to alumni and friends of Bowdoin College that identification by the Books Editor would be superfluous.

RICHARD V. MCCANN '37, Associate Professor of Christian Sociology at the Andover Newton Theological School, was from 1954 to 1956 Director of the Harvard Divinity School Seminar on Delinquency.

JOHN J. PULLEN, a graduate of Colby College in 1935, served in the United States Army from 1941 to 1946, rising from private to the rank of captain in the Field Artillery. For several years now Mr. Pullen has been associated with N. W. Ayer and Son, Inc., in Philadelphia.

CLARENCE D. ROUILLARD '24, Professor of French at the University of Toronto and Head of the Graduate Department of Romance Languages, was recently elected a Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada.

REVIEWERS

JEANNETTE STEELE CROSS, the wife of Robert M. Cross '45, a graduate of the University of New Hampshire and a former teacher of home economics, is the devoted mother of Peter, Suzanne, and John.

JOHN F. MACMORRAN '46 enclosed with his review the following note: "About the reviewer the less said the better, but if justification for the assignment is needed — college organist, glee club accompanist, student assistant in the Music Department; directed Tilton School Glee Club and Endicott Junior College Choral Club; in my old age now, church organist."

To this modest autobiography should be added the information that Mac, formerly Assistant to the President of Endicott Junior College, is at present Headmaster of Leavitt Institute in Turner Center.

BURTON W. TAYLOR, Professor of Sociology at Bowdoin, has served as President of the Maine Welfare Association, as Chairman of the Governor's Committee for the Mid-Century White House Conference on Children and Youth, and more recently as President of the Brunswick Health Council.

ROBERT M. CROSS '45, A.M. (Harvard), is Bowdoin's omniscient and friendly Administrative Assistant as well as Managing Editor of the Alumnus.

GERARD J. BRAULT, A.B. (Assumption College), Instructor in French at Bowdoin, did his graduate work at the Universities of Pennsylvania and Strasbourg, France, and will be a candidate for the doctorate in February.

NOTES

Professor Edwin B. Benjamin '37 is the author of two recently published articles. The first, "Sir John Hayward and Tacitus," appeared in the July, 1957, issue of Review of English Studies. The second, entitled "The King of Brobdingnag and Secrets of State," was published in the October, 1957, issue of the Journal of the History of Ideas. Dr. Benjamin is Assistant Professor of English at Bowdoin.

Professor Paul G. Darling of the Bowdoin Economics Department is the author of an article entitled "The Influence of Expectations and Liquidity on Dividend Policy," which appeared in the June, 1957, issue of the Journal of Political Economy.

Edward G. Hudon '37 is the author of an article entitled "Two Maine State Statutes Affecting Insurance Agents," which appeared in the May, 1957, issue of The Insurance Law Journal.

Thomas J. N. Juko '51 had an article entitled "The Muse in Summer Dress" published in the July, 1957, issue of High Fidelity. Many photographs were used to illustrate the article, and there was a fairly full note on Mr. Juko and his connections with Bowdoin in the section on the various authors which appeared at the front of the magazine.

Professor James M. Moulton of the Department of Biology at Bowdoin has written several articles recently. Among them is "A Nighthawk Nesting on South Bimini, Bahama Islands," which appeared in the April, 1957, issue of the Maine Field Naturalist. Dr. Moulton's monograph entitled "A Collection of Drawings of Fishes Ascribed to J. P. Kirtland (1793-1877), In the Library of Bowdoin College," appeared as Number 80 of Breviora, the publication of the Museum of Comparative Zoology in Cambridge, Mass.

Alumni Clubs

BOSTON

The Directors of the Bowdoin Club of Boston held a meeting at the University Club in Boston on September 9.

The following notice, which was mailed to members of the Bowdoin Club of Boston, is self explanatory. It shows what an active group can do to get some variety and new interest into its get-togethers.

"BOWDOIN-TUFTS GAME PICNIC. The Bowdoin Club of Boston invites all Bowdoin men, their families, and friends to attend the pre-Tufts game 'Bring Your Own Lunch Get-Together' at Tufts University Oval, Medford, Mass., September 28 at 12:15 p.m.

"Ample parking available in the area behind the Bowdoin stands where our picnic site will be located. In case of rain, activities will be moved to the Tufts cage.

"Coffee, hot dogs, and soft drinks will be sold.

"Come early and visit with old friends. Tickets for the game available at the gate. No reserved seats.

Everett P. Pope '41
President

"EARLY ANNOUNCEMENT — The Bowdoin Sports Night will be Friday night, December 6, at the University Club. Please keep your eye open for boys in your area who are both good athletes and good students, and bring them along as guests for the evening. We promise an interesting, enjoyable time.

Your Committee,
Bob Bell '42
Chairman "

A recent letter from club secretary John Morrell informs us that plans are already going forward for Boston's Bowdoin Night at the Pops in May of 1958. Chairman Don Lukens '46 and the Reverend Don Lyons '48 are making the advance arrangements and preparations.

Secretary Morrell pointed out the two fine donations made last summer, one an unrestricted gift of $200 for the Music Department and the other a gift of $150 towards the Arena. While many clubs are not large enough to do such things, it is nice to know that the Boston group works to a purpose and "remembers" Bowdoin and some of her needs.

CENTRAL NEW YORK

The Bowdoin Club of Central New York held its fall meeting in Syracuse on September 28 at Martin's Restaurant. Secretary Tom Chapman '50 reported that fifteen alumni from the area were present: Arthur Chapman '17, Charles Walker '28, Robert Todd '29, Allen Benjamin '32, Jack O'Donnell '37, Bob Edwards '43, Don Larrabee '43, George Fogg '43, Dick O'Shea '45, Bob Bryant '47, Arthur Simonds '48, Dick Herrick '50, Bob Gulian '50, Gordon Hoyt '50, and Tom Chapman '50. His report continues, "Also present were 15 guests, including Professor Tillotson, who announced that the Glee Club would sing in Syracuse on April 1. He asked for the club's support. Director of Admissions Bill Shaw explained the problems and exploded the fallacies concerning college admissions. Professor Herbert Brown, with his usual matchless delivery, gave the Bowdoin Gospel to the assembled Faithful. It was a memorable evening for all concerned.

"The following slate of officers was elected for the coming year: Robert Bryant '47, President; Richard Herrick '50, Vice President; Thomas Chapman '50, Secretary and Council Member; Jack O'Donnell '37, Treasurer.

"The next meeting has been scheduled for April 1st, prior to the Glee Club concert in Syracuse."

CLEVELAND

The Bowdoin Club of Cleveland, at a recent informal meeting at Kornman's Restaurant, elected new officers. Robert S. Burton '43 is President, Dr. J. Wallace Blunt jr. '40 is Vice President, and Charles T. Freeman '50 is Secretary-Treasurer. Plans have been made to represent the College at several of the local high schools for their "college nights," and the group is making arrangements for the annual December vacation luncheon at which prospective candidates for admission will be entertained.

CONNECTICUT

On the evening of October 22 a group of Bowdoin alumni from the Connecticut area met in the home of club president Dr. Ben Whitcomb '30. The group comprised current club officers, some former officers, and the executive committee. They met to discuss future plans as well as ways and means to augment the principal of the Connecticut Alumni Scholarship Fund.

Special guests of the evening for the informal meeting were Mr. and Mrs. Philip

S. Wilder '23. Mr. Wilder, who is Assistant to the President at the College, brought greetings from the campus to the Connecticut alumni. He gave an informal report on current campus happenings, and a general discussion period followed this. The alumni and their wives, about thirty in all, expressed their thanks to their host for his hospitality and to their guests for their pleasant delivery of the latest Bowdoin news.

ESSEX COUNTY

The Essex County Bowdoin Club held a meeting at the Kernwood Country Club on November 22 in Salem, Mass. Professor Herbert R. Brown, the principal speaker, informed and entertained in his usual delightful manner. Invited guests included principals from a number of high schools and preparatory schools in the region, and Director of Admissions Hubert S. Shaw was on hand to talk to them. Peter C. Barnard, Administrative Assistant in the Alumni Office, showed color slides of the campus.

KENNEBEC

On Wednesday evening, October 23, the Kennebec Bowdoin Club held its fall meeting at the Elmwood Hotel in Waterville. About forty alumni and guests were on hand for a social hour and a dinner.

Club President Bernard Lucas '28 called the meeting to order following the dinner and introduced Carleton Merrill '96 of Skowhegan, the oldest alumnus present. Mr. Merrill kindly consented to assist in the presentation of a Bowdoin mirror to Paul Burr '51, a gift which had been generously "donated" by his fellow club members.

President Lucas then presented the club's guests: a Bowdoin father, one secondary school prospective candidate for next year's class (the others who had been invited elected to stay home with the flu), Assistant Director of Admissions Bob Glover, and Pete Barnard, Administrative Assistant in the Alumni Office. The principal speaker, Marc Bodine, Assistant Professor of Geology, was then introduced. He gave an interesting speech which was certainly not too long and which was very well received by his audience. Professor Bodine started with a few remarks on the current state of the College and then proceeded to talk about Bowdoin's newly rejuvenated Geology Department. He traced its past history and told about the current courses and what he is trying to do with the subject. Dr. Bodine concluded by pointing out the values of modern-day geology to the State of Maine and its economy. The lively question-and-answer period which ensued attested to the interest with which his audience received his remarks.

After thanking the speaker, President Lucas presided over the election of new officers for the coming year: Robert Martin '41, President; Willard B. Arnold III '51, Vice President; William T. Webster '50, Secretary-Treasurer; and Bernard Lucas '28, Council Member. The meeting was adjourned at 9:15.

KNOX-LINCOLN-WALDO

On November 15 the Knox-Lincoln-Waldo Bowdoin Club met at the Knox Hotel in Thomaston. Guests from the College included Director of Athletics Mal Morrell '24, Basketball Coach Bob Donham, Director of Admissions Bill Shaw '36, and Brud Stover '58, varsity football star and captain of the varsity basketball team.

OREGON

Convener Dan McDade '09 called an informal meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Oregon in late October, but only three Bowdoinites, Frank Gannett '07, Frank Plaisted '24, and Convener Dan, were able to be on hand. The luncheon meeting was held in the Multnomah Hotel.

PENOBSCOT

The Penobscot County Bowdoin Club held a dinner meeting at seven o'clock on November 8, the eve of the Bowdoin-Maine game at Orono. The group met at the Penobscot Valley Country Club, and the speakers were Director of Athletics Malcolm E. Morrell and Coaches Adam Walsh and Nels Corey.

PHILADELPHIA

On October 17 the Bowdoin Club of Philadelphia met at the Harvard Club for their fall stag meeting. A social hour was followed by dinner, and then the assembled Bowdoinites, about thirty in number, were both entertained and informed.

A color movie of Maine was shown, followed by an informal talk by the Bowdoin guest of the evening, Assistant Professor of English Roy Greason jr., who had just come from the campus that very day. Professor Greason spoke first in general terms about the latest happenings at the College and then went on to discuss the problems which today confront the liberal arts colleges and the educating of our students in the humanities. He completed his remarks by giving some of his personal impressions about alumni and faculty relationships and by telling some of the ways which he believed alumni might consider to improve their devotion and service to the College.

The group was pleased to have had Professor Greason as their guest, and they thanked him for his time and effort. Adjournment of the meeting found some of the group heading for home and others staying for an informal session with the faculty visitor.

PORTLAND

On October 24 the Bowdoin Club of Portland held its fall meeting at the St. Regis Hotel. Over 125 alumni plus a number of guests from the newspaper and radio-TV world gathered for a social hour and an Italian dinner. (The meal was particularly successful because it was modestly priced at two dollars per person, and everyone had plenty to eat.)

Club President Marcus Chandler '23 called the meeting to order after the dinner had been consumed by the hungry Bowdoin horde. He introduced Creighton Gatchell '32, who, in turn, welcomed and introduced the sports writers and commentators who were guests. President Chandler then presented various guests from the College, including Vice President Bela Norton '18, who said a few words, and Administrative Assistants Cab Easton '48 and Pete Barnard '50.

Club member Bruce McGorrell '53 was recognized, and he came forward to present a motion on behalf of the younger Portland alumni. It was a proposal that a basketball game between Bowdoin and the University of Maine be presented in Portland so as to arouse more interest in Bowdoin activities there and to attract alumni who look for a variety of club programs and activities. The motion was eloquently seconded by Dave Osgood '54 in absentia, and it was given a vote of unanimous approval as the Bowdoin Club of Portland prepared to consult with officials of the College and the University of Maine on the possibility of sponsoring such a contest.

Mal Morrell '24, Director of Athletics, was introduced, and he said a few words before presenting the main speaker of the evening, Coach Adam Walsh. Adam gave a vigorous speech, which was very well received, in which he told of his efforts to do the very best he could under the existing conditions. He said that he sometimes found his position "frustrating," especially in view of the number of cases of illness and injury which plagued the team following what promised to be a better start in 1957. As far as he is concerned, the State Series always hinges on Maine; the state university must always be beaten by any team which aspires to the state title. Following a brief intermission, he showed films of the recent Bowdoin-Trinity game in which the Polar Bears had won a victory and begun to climb out of the cellar.

The gathering drew to an informal close shortly after ten o'clock. Regret had been expressed that illness prevented President Coles and Alumni Secretary Marsh from attending the get-together. Plans were also announced for the holding of an informal Bowdoin luncheon on Thursday, November 7, and many who were present indicated an intention to attend.

SAN FRANCISCO

The Bowdoin Club of San Francisco met on September 26 at the San Francisco Olympic Club, at which time an election was held. Donald P. Sands jr. '44 retired and John J. Mullane jr. '50 took over as Convener and Council Member. A good turnout included Dick Hooke '43, Al Wright '54, John Ashey '49, Ham Oakes '29, Harlow Swain '50, Bruce Alden '49, Winslow Gibson '39, Bob Harkness '26, Bill Blades '38, John Mullane '50, Dave Lavender '55, Norm Richards '45, and Don Sands '44. The group is looking forward to another successful season of Bowdoin activities in the San Francisco area. New arrivals on the scene are invited to contact Convener John Mullane, whose address is Olympic Club, 524 Post Street, San Francisco 2.

WORCESTER

Club Secretary Cloyd E. Small recently submitted the following interesting report: "The Bowdoin Club of Worcester sponsored a Bowdoin evening in the Megaron at Worcester Academy on November 21 at 7:30 p.m. They invited the principals and guidance counselors from twenty-five high schools and preparatory schools to be their guests when Hubert S. Shaw '36, Director of Admissions at Bowdoin, spoke about small New England liberal arts colleges (in general) and Bowdoin (in particular). The guests were invited to bring any boy or boys, currently in the eleventh and twelfth grades, who might be interested. Bowdoin alumni in the area were also invited to come and to bring prospective candidates. Mr. Shaw's talk was followed by an informal question-and-answer period. Cider and doughnuts were served. Much credit for arranging the get-together goes to William S. Piper jr. '31, Headmaster of Worcester Academy, and Dr. Ivan M. Spear '44, who were the prime movers in this project." (The editors suspect that modest, loyal Bowdoinite Small also had a large part in the arrangements!)

Necrology

1894 JOHN WENDELL ANDERSON died in Portland on September 18, 1957, at the age of 85. Born on December 25, 1871, in Gray, he was the son of John D. Anderson of the Class of 1859 and Anna Thayer Anderson and prepared at Pennell Institute and Cony High School in Augusta. Following his graduation in 1894, he was superintendent of schools in Gray for eight years. He later studied law in Portland, was a member of the Maine Legislature, and served as a United States Deputy Marshal. He lived alone in the old family home in Gray. His fraternity was Zeta Psi.

1898 WALTER JOSEPH SARGENT, a lawyer and businessman in Brewer for more than fifty years, died on October 23, 1957, at the age of 81. Born in Bangor on November 5, 1875, he prepared for Bowdoin at Brewer High School and following his graduation in 1898 studied law at the University of Maine, taking the Bachelor of Laws degree in 1900. In the same year he was admitted to the Bar of the State of Maine. For the rest of his life he was a resident and prominent citizen of Brewer, holding many local and state offices. He was Mayor for five years, and after the adoption of the city manager form of government, the first chairman of the City Council. In addition, he served for twenty-six years on the School Board, and for eighteen years as City Tax Collector. From 1927 until 1933 he was representative to the Maine Legislature and was also elected the first chairman of the Maine Real Estate Commission. Meanwhile he carried on an active insurance and real estate business, in addition to his law practice. He was also for some years a trustee and attorney of the Brewer Savings Bank.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lois Wescott Sargent, whom he married on June 22, 1903, in West Brooksville; and three daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Loeffler of Saugus, Mass., Mrs. Christine Ardwin of Yonkers, N. Y., and Mrs. Grace W. Thomas of Skowhegan.

At Bowdoin he was a member of Alpha Delta Phi and universally popular, a loyal and devoted member of his class and college.

1901 ROLAND EVERETT BRAGG, treasurer and a director of N. H. Bragg and Sons, Bangor wholesale hardware firm, died on October 28, 1957, in Bangor. Born in that city on June 3, 1880, he prepared at Bangor High School and following his graduation from Bowdoin entered the family business, with which he remained for 56 years. He was a 32nd degree Mason, a director of the Northport Water Company, and a member of the Northport Yacht Club. He was also a member of the Tarratine Club and the Penobscot Valley Country Club. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Mongovan Bragg, whom he married on September 15, 1904, in Bangor; two daughters, Mrs. Granville M. Bond of Wellesley, Mass., and Mrs. Edward E. Lovejoy, 3rd, of Bangor; three grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren. He was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon and Phi Beta Kappa.

1902 WILLIAM LABEREE FLYE, retired telephone company engineer, died in Bath Memorial Hospital on October 29, 1957, at the age of 80. Born on October 22, 1877, in Newcastle, he prepared for Bowdoin at Lincoln Academy and following his graduation in 1902 took a position with the New York Telephone Company. In 1912 he joined the engineering department of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. He retired in 1934 and since that time had lived in Sheepscott. In recent years he had wintered in Houston, Texas.

Mr. Flye was for many years a member of the Lincoln Academy Board of Trustees. He was also a member of the Board of Selectmen in Newcastle for four years and served as treasurer of the 193rd District of Rotary International. Last July the Damariscotta-Newcastle Rotary Club made him an honorary member. A member of Kappa Sigma fraternity, he is survived by two daughters, Miss Frances L. Flye of Houston, Texas, and Miss Harriett M. Flye of Bath; and a sister, Mrs. George Keene of Damariscotta.

1904 HARRY LANE PALMER, Chairman of the Sesquicentennial Fund from 1949 to 1953 and for twenty-three years a member of the Bowdoin Board of Overseers, died at his home in Skowhegan on November 3, 1957, at the age of 76. Born on January 28, 1881, in Cornville, he prepared for Bowdoin at Skowhegan High School and following his graduation in 1904 was with the New York Telephone Company for thirteen years. He resigned to become General Manager of the H. K. McCann Company, of which he was named a vice president and director in 1922. He retired in 1938. (See page 10.)

1905 JAMES GREGORY FINN died on September 15, 1957, in Miami, Fla., at the age of 78. Born on January 30, 1879, in Lewiston, he prepared for college at Lewiston High School. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Blanche Ganun Finn, whom he married in New York City on August 3, 1929; and by two sisters, the Misses Mary and Agnes Finn, both of Old Orchard Beach. His fraternity was Alpha Delta Phi.

Major General Wallace C. (Cope) Philoon wrote the following tribute to his classmate: "In the passing of Jim Finn we have lost one of our most loyal class and Bowdoin supporters. No worthwhile project proposed for either ever failed to receive his prompt and generous support.

"A transfer from Bates in our junior year brought to Bowdoin a man a few years older than the rest of us. Football was perhaps his major interest although he made his passing grades without too much difficulty. Those of our time will remember him in his final game in 1904 against Bates, when he carried the ball play after play practically the length of the field for our second and state-championship-winning touchdown.

"Prior to college days Jim was a member of the Maine National Guard and saw service in the Spanish-American War. After graduation, in New York he was again active in military affairs. As an infantry company commander in the 42nd Division in World War I, he saw much combat service, being seriously wounded and nearly losing a leg while leading his troops in a river crossing following Chateau-Thierry. This wound restricted him physically for the remainder of his life.

"After graduation, while working for the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, he studied law and was graduated in 1909 from St. Lawrence Law School. For 29 years he was associated with the government of New York City, retiring in 1942 as Assistant Corporation Counsel. He was a member of and active in various Catholic societies and the American Legion as well as the Bowdoin Club of New York.

"Since his retirement he had lived in Miami. Jim loved life, but his physical condition greatly restricted his activities. However, much as his disabilities denied him those things which he would have enjoyed, he accepted his situation without complaint and without losing his cheerful outlook. Although his visits back to Maine and Bowdoin became less and less frequent, his keen interest in all the activities of his friends and of Bowdoin never waned.

"To his wife, Blanche, who joined him enthusiastically in his interests and who unfailingly looked well after her Jim, we extend our sympathy."

1921 JACKSON GILKEY MERRIAM, a consulting engineer in the Boston area for many years, died in that city on October 17, 1957. Born on January 20, 1899, in Kansas City, Mo., he prepared at North Yarmouth Academy and following his graduation from Bowdoin in 1921 studied at the University of Michigan for a year. From 1928 until 1941 he was a chemical engineer in Niagara Falls, N. Y., then for five years, during World War II, was assistant superintendent of a chemical plant in Freeport, Texas. In 1946 he joined the firm of James Russell Engineering Works, Inc., in Boston.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Jean Watson Merriam, whom he married in Niagara Falls on June 2, 1934; two daughters, Jane and Susan; and two sisters, Mrs. Roger W. Williams of Auburn and Mrs. Richard E. Pettingill of Falmouth Foreside. His fraternity was Kappa Sigma.

Word has also been received of the death of the following Alumni. Appropriate notice will appear in the February Alumnus.

1944 CAPTAIN WILLIAM FORBES MUDGE, JR. of the United States Air Force Reserve died in Michigan on November 1, 1957, at the age of 37. Born on July 12, 1920, in Trenton, N. J., he prepared for Bowdoin at Phillips Andover Academy. At the end of his sophomore year, in June of 1942, he entered the Army Air Forces and served for nearly four years, until March of 1946. He piloted a P-51 with the Eighth Air Force in the European Theater of Operations and was awarded three Distinguished Flying Crosses and four Air Medals, shooting down ten German planes in seventy-two missions. After the war he entered the insurance business in Exeter, N. H., with the National Life Insurance Company of Vermont but during the Korean War returned to duty with the Air Force. From 1953 to 1955 he was stationed in Alaska with his family, then returned to the States for an assignment at Kinross Air Force Base in Michigan. Recently he had been stationed with the Eastern Air Defense Force Headquarters at Stewart Field in New York and lived with his family in Cornwall-on-Hudson, N. Y.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Marian Swett Mudge, whom he married on May 15, 1943, in Bennettsville, S. C.; three sons, William F. 3rd, Randall T., and Richard; and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Mudge of Milledgeville, Ga. His fraternity was Psi Upsilon.

1955 LT.(J.G.) DAVID KING HUTCHINS was the pilot of a plane which was reported missing in the Adriatic Sea area on October 30. His Skyraider plane, which took off from the carrier Randolph at 4:00 a.m. that day, was due back at 1 o'clock that afternoon.

Born on October 31, 1932, in Providence, R. I., he prepared for Bowdoin at Winchester (Mass.) High School and Hebron Academy. He played guard on the freshman football team and was elected honorary captain but as an upperclassman had to give up the sport because of a shoulder injury. After graduation he entered the Navy's flight training program and received his wings at Pensacola, Fla., in December of 1956.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Ruth V. Adams of Cape Neddick; his father, George Hutchins of Toronto, Canada; a brother, George jr., a student at Boston University Law School; and a sister, Mrs. C. Farrell Ruppert of Haddonfield, N. J. His fraternity was Zeta Psi.

Medical School

1908 HENRY WILSON ABBOTT, M.D., a physician in Waterville for nearly half a century, died there on October 7, 1957. Born in Albion on August 18, 1884, he prepared for college at Waterville High School and attended Colby for a year before entering the Maine Medical School at Bowdoin. After his graduation he joined his father in the practice of medicine. He was a 32nd degree Mason, an ardent baseball fan, a member of the Maine Medical Society and the American Medical Association, and served on the staff of Sisters' Hospital in Waterville.

Dr. Abbott is survived by his wife, Mrs. Emma Johnson Abbott, whom he married on June 20, 1911, in Waterville; two sons, Carroll and Henry, both of Waterville; and three grandchildren.

Former Faculty

ROBERT WALLACE RAFUSE, Visiting Lecturer in Government at Bowdoin in 1948-49, died on October 10, 1957, in Binghamton, N. Y. Born on January 25, 1907, in Norwood, Mass., he prepared for college at the local high school and was graduated from Colgate University in 1934 as a member of Phi Beta Kappa. He received a master of arts degree in 1935 and a doctor of philosophy degree in 1937, both at the University of Illinois.

From 1936 to 1941 he was a member of the faculty at Williams College, then for six years at Middlebury College. In 1947-48 he taught at Bucknell, before joining the Bowdoin faculty for a year. He was later a research associate at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a specialist in government for the Education Research Foundation in Cambridge, Mass. Since 1950 he had been a member of the faculty of Harpur College of the State University of New York, serving for a time as chairman of the Division of Social Sciences. At the time of his death he was Professor of Political Science at Harpur.

Dr. Rafuse is survived by his wife, Mrs. Jean Briggs Rafuse, whom he married in Middlebury, Vt., on December 21, 1941; a daughter, Linda; three sons, Robert jr., Paul, and Peter; three brothers, and four sisters.

News of the Classes

1818 Interest in Seba Smith, early graduate of the College who went on to achieve prominence as a teacher and a newspaperman, was recently reawakened by a series of articles about him which appeared in the Portland Press Herald over the by-line of a certain Franklin P. Lincoln. (This same Mr. Lincoln, who is actually a bewhiskered Bowdoinite in disguise, mentioned elsewhere in his interesting columns that both he and the editors of the Alumnus are mathematically weak when it comes to figuring years spanned between given sets of dates. Having turned our talents to things literary, we admit the weakness.) It seems that Seba is to be credited, among other things, with the invention of "O.K.," and the columnist calls him "our first political satirist."

1825 The letters of Nathaniel Hawthorne which recently came to light on the death of Professor Richard C. Manning, a long-standing member of the language department of Kenyon College, have been sold to a Boston book dealer for an undisclosed amount. Professor Manning, who was related to Hawthorne, had eighteen letters which had been written by Hawthorne, Ralph Waldo Emerson, and Henry David Thoreau. (We do not know, at this writing, the exact content of these letters or whether or not they are inter-related to one another, but our curiosity is definitely piqued!)

1852 General Joshua L. Chamberlain, former student, professor, and president of Bowdoin, has once more achieved a place in the public eye. John J. Pullen's new book, The Twentieth Maine, gives General Chamberlain a large but well-earned place in the activities of the famous Maine regiment which played such an important part in the Battle of Gettysburg.

Generals may come and go, or just fade away, but another reminder of Joshua Chamberlain was presented recently to readers of the Brunswick Record. Several of the local ladies were pictured therein as they worked at the Pejepscot Historical Society, busily shining the general's boots and saddle.

Brunswick

Charles Hutchinson has donated a painting to the Longfellow School in Portland. It is an oil portrait of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow 1825 which was painted by the late Joseph B. Kahill, father of Charles Kahill '34. Charles has given the picture in honor of the artist, an old friend of his.

1892 Secretary, Rev. Harry W. Kimball
20 Washburn Avenue
Needham, Mass.

The redoubtable Class Secretary sent several interesting items to the Alumni Office recently. Despite the fact that the Reverend Mr. Kimball has but one surviving classmate, we are happy to reprint much of his report in the belief that many other Bowdoin men will be interested in reading it.

"I preached in my own church in August and in Dover in September. Everyone said I did well, so I am still going strong.

"I have not heard from Nichols, the only other member of my class still living, although I have written him several times.

"I still write my column every week. I have now written nearly a thousand articles.

"I have just sent an original page of Ruskin's writings to the Bowdoin College Library.

"I have just had my eyes examined. (The last time was seven years ago.) They have not changed a bit. Just as good as ever."

An August issue of a Rotary (Needham, Mass.) publication carried a full column article on Secretary Kimball. It traced in detail his long and admirable career since he left Bowdoin in 1892, with special reference to and praise for his many years in the ministry. It is indeed unfortunate that a lack of space prevents the editors from including various sections of Mr. Kimball's well-written weekly column, which, for more than 25 years, has appeared in the Needham Times. It would seem that the advanced age of 87 is not a handicap or a hindrance to an energetic gentleman who has given of himself and his efforts so ceaselessly and willingly for so many years.

1894 Secretary, Francis W. Dana
8 Bramhall Street
Portland

Classmates and friends will grieve to learn of the death of John Anderson in Portland on September 19. Formerly a superintendent of schools in Gray, John was 84 at the time of his death.

Lexington 73, Mass.

Francis Dane was the subject of a chapel talk given by his son, Professor Nathan Dane II '37, on October 5, in observance of the annual Bowdoin Fathers' Day. Speaking to a chapel-packed audience of fathers and undergraduate sons, the younger Dane spoke eloquently of the older Dane in a speech entitled "My Bowdoin Father."

1898 Secretary, William W. Lawrence
Portland 4

Percival Baxter wrote a letter to the editor of the Portland Press Herald which appeared (in bold face type) in the October 3rd issue. A plea to the public to block any attempt to build a large coliseum or sports palace on Baxter Boulevard, it urged the preservation of the street and park area as a place of natural beauty. The construction of a large building plus the attendant increase in traffic and wide parking spaces would be "a desecration and a breaking of faith with the past," he said.

Admiral Donald MacMillan, who celebrated his 83rd birthday on November 10, returned to the College on October 10 to present another of his famous lectures. Entitled "Greenland and the Far North," Don's audience-pleasing performance had 'em packed into the Pickard Theater. The lecture, based on experiences of his most recent (1954) trip to the North, was illustrated by color film.

It is sad to be obliged to record the death of Walter J. Sargent, whom his classmates hold in affectionate remembrance. A sketch of his life appears elsewhere in this issue.

Friends and classmates of the late Ellis Spear will be saddened to learn of the death of his widow, the former Margaret L. Abbott, who died in Newton Centre, Mass., on September 27, at the age of 75. Mrs. Spear had served as a member of the Massachusetts Legislature for a period of ten years, from 1940 to 1950. She represented the 5th Middlesex District, and she was particularly active in the Welfare and Education Committees of the Legislature. Long active in Republican party activities, she was also past president of both the Boston-Wellesley Club of Newton and the Newton Women's Club. She is survived by two sons, Ellis and Abbott, both members of the Class of 1929 and both residents of Newton Centre.

Bangor

A recent report from the Class Secretary: "Classmates and friends will be sorry to hear that Gov Cleaves suffered a heart attack last summer which took him to the hospital, but we are glad to hear that he is now at home again, greatly improved. Gov says he hopes soon to get back into his accustomed round of activities.

"Win Smith recently attended a meeting in Baltimore of the American Hospital Association, which has a membership of over 5,000, and of which he was President in 1916. The Trustees gave a dinner to the Past Presidents, at which Win was reminded that he was the oldest living Past President."

1900 Secretary, Robert S. Edwards
202 Reedsdale Road
Milton 86, Mass.

A recent note from the Class Secretary: "To my Classmates of 1900 — I cannot send you news of all our remaining classmates, but I do have a word from a few of our members: John Bass, Bob Chapman, Harry Cobb, Dr. Louis Spear, and Charles Willard. All of these fellows are well.

"I wish all of my classmates good luck, and may the Christmas Season's Blessing be yours."

1901 Secretary, Roland E. Clark
Portland

Harold Berry has been elected to the newly created post of senior vice president at the Canal National Bank in Portland. Harold, a director of the bank since 1923, was elected a vice president in 1933.

Classmates and friends will grieve to learn of the death of Roland Bragg in Bangor on October 28.

Dr. George Pratt has been renamed an examiner of insane convicts by Governor Muskie of Maine.

1902 Secretary, Hudson Sinkinson
North Waterboro

Class Secretary Hudson Sinkinson sent in the following report which got to the editors just a few days too late to make the last issue. (Our apologies! Mr. Sinkinson had sent it on in time, but the postal service delayed it en route.) "Ralph Stone reports that he made a fine recovery from his serious operation and is up to the job of doing light chores around his place.

"Mrs. Nat Barker recently returned from a five-weeks tour of Ireland.

"Sid Noyes has made a good recovery from his bad hip fracture, but he still finds a cane is helpful.

"Dr. Irving Mabry was among the four 1902 men at Commencement. My report of his retirement from practice at Bridgton was a bit premature. He is still carrying on.

"For what it is worth, here is a rough statistical report on the part 1902 may have played in putting Bowdoin among the ten best men's colleges in the United States.

"Of the fifty-three men listed in the 1902 Bugle, eleven became physicians, eleven entered business (insurance, sales, utilities, real estate, advertising, etc.), ten became educators, four bankers, four merchants, and four lawyers. Three entered forestry and agriculture. Three went into the ministry, two became dentists, and one became a newspaper editor." (An interesting report. The Class of 1902 has surely done a fine job of using Bowdoin education and background in good, useful, creditable service.)

An additional note was submitted by the Class Secretary in mid-October: "A group of Purple Heart Veterans of World War I recently held their first reunion in 35 years. They made plans to finance a scholarship in honor of their former professor at Boston University, our classmate, Charles E. Bellatty.

"At this fall's convocation when Portland Junior College became the University of Maine at Portland, Bill Wing was a featured speaker — and well he might be. He was the father of Portland Junior College, which he was instrumental in founding in a rent-free room at the Portland Y.M.C.A."

Classmates and friends will grieve to learn of the death of William Flye on October 29 in Bath Memorial Hospital.

Dr. Fred Stanwood has been named General Practitioner of the Year (1957) by the Charles River District Medical Society, which is associated with the Massachusetts Medical Society. The citation read, in part, "In recognition of his devotion to the Art and Science of Medicine and his manifold contributions to community welfare. . . ."

P. O. Box 438
Brunswick

Clem Robinson spoke to the Brunswick Rotarians on October 7, at which time he told about his experiences during the American Bar Association "pilgrimage" to Britain last summer. 3,500 American attorneys plus 1,600 members of their families comprised the large visiting group, and many of these people were Rotarians. Clem recounted the experiences that he and his wife enjoyed as they attended various business and social functions in London. These included a reception at the U. S. Embassy, another reception at the Lord Mayor's formal residence, a dinner at the Temple Middle Hall, Queen Elizabeth's garden party on the lawn of Buckingham Palace, and the grand banquet in London's famous Guild Hall, at which time Sir Winston Churchill spoke and announced that this was to be his last public appearance.

1904 Secretary, Wallace M. Powers
37-28 80th Street
Jackson Heights
New York, N. Y.

Emery Beane served as best man for his son, Emery jr., at his wedding on September 21 in Portland to Miss Elizabeth Jane Lester.

The Very Reverend Chester Emerson, Dean Emeritus of Trinity Episcopal Cathedral in Cleveland, Ohio, participated in the golden anniversary celebration of the cathedral on Sunday, September 22. Chester served as dean of the cathedral from 1933 until his retirement in 1951. Recently he has been recalled by his bishop to serve temporarily as Dean of Trinity Cathedral, pending the appointment of a new dean.

Classmates and friends will grieve to learn of the death of Harry Palmer on November 3.

2220 Waverley Street
Palo Alto, Calif.

Classmates and friends will grieve to learn of the death of Jim Finn on September 15. In memory of Jim, Cope Philoon wrote a tribute which appears in the Necrology section of this issue.

1906 Secretary, Fred E. Smith
9 Oak Avenue
Norway

Bill Johnson was featured prominently in the May (1957) issue of The Beta Theta Pi. Among his efforts and improvements of the Beta Sigma (Bowdoin) Chapter have been the establishing of the Beta Yeomen (alumni who have donated money for needed repairs and renovations at the Beta House) and the William Treby Johnson Awards (three of which are given every year to active Bowdoin Betas who "have lived up to the vows taken at initiation"). The grateful active members of Beta Theta Pi dedicated a lounge in the basement of the chapter house to Bill and the Beta Yeomen on October 9, 1956.

1907 Secretary, John W. Leydon
3120 West Penn Street
Philadelphia, Pa.

The Class Secretary is using part of his retirement time by teaching languages for two hours each day at the Meadowbrook School.

A photograph of the fireplace and part of the attractive interior of Mr. and Mrs. John Halford's summer home in Lovell appeared in the October 8 issue of the Portland Press Herald.

At the Eighth Annual On-Campus Conference of the Directors and Agents of the Bowdoin Alumni Fund, held October 4 and 5, John Leydon was one of five recipients of specially inscribed certificates presented to the leaders of the five decade groups in the 1956-57 Fund. John also received the Alumni Fund Cup, which was formally presented to him at the Alumni Luncheon on November 2 in recognition of his class's leadership in competition during the 1956-57 Alumni Fund.

Wilbert Snow, former governor of Connecticut and Professor Emeritus of English at Wesleyan, recently won a national poetry contest that was conducted by the Saturday Review of Literature and the Exposition Press. Professor Snow's volume, Sonnets to Steve and Other Poems, was adjudged best of the 510 entries. It is to be published this fall by the Exposition Press.

In 1958 Read is scheduled to publish a ballad by Wilbert about Theodore Roosevelt, whose birth centennial will be celebrated next year.

1908 Secretary, Edward T. Sanborn
503 North Lionel Street
Goldsboro, N. C.

Mrs. Emilie Creighton Gould, widow of the late Albert T. Gould, died on October 21 in Beverly Farms, Mass.

Sturgis Leavitt has completed an index to the literary and linguistic articles in fifty important Spanish American magazines. This index, which contains over 30,000 items, is being published in Santiago, Chile, by the Fondo Medina, an organization sponsored by the Chilean government.

Herbert Lowell has retired from business. Arthritis limits his activity. His present address is 28 Wrights Lane, Glastonbury, Conn.

1907's Summer Birthday Cake

Dr. Harold Stanwood is at the Veterans' Hospital in Togus, recovering from a broken hip which he suffered in a fall last April. He is now (September) on crutches and hopes to be able to return shortly to his home in Rumford.

1909 Secretary, Irving L. Rich
Portland 4

The following report has been submitted by the Class Secretary: "Jasper Stahl of Waldoboro has been renominated by Governor Muskie for membership on the Maine School Building Authority. The Authority issues bonds and lends money to communities and school districts for school construction.

"'Cub' Simmons is a most enthusiastic gardener. Reports a fine crop of vegetables and flowers, flowering shrubs, and bulbs from spring to fall. Cub says that he takes the Portland paper to keep posted on Maine and Bowdoin news. A very loyal classmate! We're sorry to hear that he hasn't been feeling up to par lately.

"Roy Harlow also reports that he has been a little 'under the weather' lately. Roy is at the Elks National Home, Bedford, Va. A most loyal Bowdoin man. He would appreciate hearing from you.

"A nice letter from Dr. James Sturtevant stating that he is still serving as Chief of the Children's Service in the local hospital at New London, Conn. At the request of the Board of Managers Jim has served six years beyond the retirement age. Good for you, Jim, and congratulations."

In September Justice Harold Burton addressed the Cleveland Club, an organization in Washington, D.C., which draws its members from former residents of northeastern Ohio. His subject was "The Independence and Continuity of the Supreme Court of the United States." In the question period which followed his talk, Harold said that he was not considering retiring at this time, despite some rumors to the contrary. He becomes eligible to retire on June 22, 1958, but his friends will be happy to learn that he intends to stay on and continue the good job he has been doing.

Dan McDade continues to be active in many things in Portland (Oregon). Following his recent report of Bowdoin activities in his part of the West Coast, he gave us this personal note: "Am breathing much easier these days with Mrs. McDade showing improvement. Have tight schedule — home and outside duties — but manage to make it. Great weather, and the clear days help a lot. Have Mrs. McDade out on the patio a lot.

"Book reviews, Legion publicity, and jury use up spare time. Monday will impanel November jury: then release story on Veterans' Day.

"Splashes of crimson, scarlet, and yellow on the hillside, with the deep green of the velvety lawn, make me nostalgic at times for the New England landscape — but, I'm happy. Only grief: unable to finish cross word puzzle in Sunday New York Times. Makes me mad. Regards to all."

On Tuesday, October 22, the Maine Charitable Mechanic Association of Portland commemorated the 100th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of their building. Dr. Albert Moulton is President and Irving Rich is a member of the Board of Trustees.

1910 Secretary, E. Curtis Matthews
Piscataqua Savings Bank
Portsmouth, N. H.

Charles Cary was the official Bowdoin representative at the inauguration of Hugh Borton as President of Haverford College on October 19.

John Crosby, who lives in Oxford, Md., represented Bowdoin at ceremonies commemorating the 175th anniversary of the founding of Washington College on October 20.

Congressman Bob Hale addressed a meeting of the Maine Teachers Association in Portland on October 3. He urged teachers to stress the fundamentals, things like spelling and grammar, which must serve as the basis for any meaningful further study. He said, "We can't expect great scientists and technicians, great soldiers and statesmen, unless they know the medium of exchange. As money is our commercial medium, words are the currency of the intellect."

On October 21 Bob attended a rally and supper at the Topsham Grange Hall sponsored by the Sagadahoc County Republican Committee. He addressed the meeting briefly before leaving to keep another speaking engagement at the College. There he addressed an audience at the Moulton Union under the auspices of the Bowdoin Young Republican Club. His talk, which was followed by a discussion period, was concerned with how a person, through his party, may be a more useful and a better informed citizen.

Representative Hale was reported to have stated on October 23 that he intends to renew his fight next year to control billboard advertising on the future 41,000-mile interstate highway network, despite unfavorable action by a Senate committee last session.

Friends and classmates extend their deep sympathy to Burleigh Martin, whose wife, the former Frances Purinton, died in Augusta on September 8.

Ralph Thompson was honored during a recent awards ceremony by the District of Columbia Commissioners when he received a service pin in recognition of his thirty-one years of service with the District Government in the Department of Libraries. Ralph was Assistant Librarian of the District of Columbia Public Libraries at the time of his retirement on December 1.

114 Atlantic Avenue
Boothbay Harbor

The Class Secretary has transmitted the following report: "Class President Jack Hurley is still practicing law on Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., and he is a member of the faculty of Suffolk Law School.

"Harold Andrews is Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Rhode Island, with offices in the Court House, Providence 3, R. I.

"Herb Locke, who is head of a law firm in Augusta, is President of the Maine State Bar Association. According to newspaper reports, at the 1957 meeting of the Association he presented it with a sum of money as the nucleus of a trust fund devoted to scholarships and loans for needy law students from Maine who intend to practice in Maine."

Nifty Purington was co-author of a paper entitled "A History of Some Foundations of Modern Radio-Electronic Technology" which appeared on pages 1191-1208 of the September 1957 issue of The Proceedings of IRE, the official journal of the Institute of Radio Engineers. Nifty, who has long been active in the field of radio and electronics, is a Senior Member of I. R. E., and he holds seventy U. S. patents, of which the U. S. Government has acquired rights to five and RCA to sixty-four. The paper, which is illustrated with photographs and many mystical electrical diagrams, should prove very valuable reading for those who are interested in this phase of science and the development of radio-electronics.

1913 Secretary, Luther G. Whittier
Farmington

Chester Abbott, President of the First Portland National Bank, was a speaker at a dinner sponsored by Maine's U. S. Savings Bond Committee on October 24 at the Portland Country Club. Addressing the sixty bankers present, he complimented them on the co-operation they had given the Treasury Department in the sale of bonds.

Senator Paul Douglas represented Bowdoin at the inauguration of Edgar L. Harden as President of Northern Michigan College on October 2.

1914 Secretary, Alfred E. Gray
Francetown, N. H.

Class Secretary Al Gray has submitted the following report on the recent activities of his classmates: "Alan Cole has a new address: Thornhurst Farm, Route 99, Portland 3.

"X' Callahan has written the secretary recently, 'I am still working — not knowing what to do if I quit. My health is good. My wife is the active one now, on the Montgomery County (Md.) Republican Women's Club — local social services, etc. I have five grandchildren in Houston, Texas — a Southern son-in-law, graduate of Tulane. And a Southern daughter-in-law, graduate of the University of Kentucky, with one daughter. So, you see, here I am, a Maine farmer boy with six grandchildren with Southern accents.

"Another to retire is Tib Garland, for many years in business in Springfield, Mass., where he still lives at 108 Massachusetts Avenue."

Elwyn Gage wrote recently, "I retired in June of 1956 and am now living here in Readfield for most of the year. It is a small town, not far from Augusta." He adds that while life there is not too eventful, it is pleasant and satisfactory.

The Class Secretary had a note recently from Amy Hubbard of Waterford, where she and Roswell have resided for many years. "We have eight grandchildren. John '41 has four children. He is with the Link Clinic in Mattoon, Ill., and has just been made chairman of the board of eleven doctors. Roswell '45 is with the Dennison Manufacturing Company and has two children. Mary lives in Bangor and has two children. Jean works at the Norway Hospital and lives at home."

Arthur Merrill recently wrote the Class Secretary, "I have been selling advertising for 3½ years, and a little over a year ago I formed my own company as a jobber in the business — the A. S. Merrill Company — business gifts, calendars,

The Generations Yet Unborn Fund of the Class of 1916 will mature in just 159 years, in 2116.

At its 40th reunion in 1956, the Class voted the relatively small sum of $500 to be placed in trust, to accumulate with the College at interest for 160 years, and then to become available to Bowdoin in 2116, on the 200th anniversary of 1916's graduation. If the fund accumulates at 4% interest, it will then total $265,586. No restrictions have been placed on the gift, which may be used in 2116 as the College may then determine.

It is the hope of the Class of 1916 that other Bowdoin classes, particularly the younger ones, will adopt the same general plan of providing their college with substantial support in far-distant days. It can be done relatively easily, by setting up a similar fund of $500 or so in any one year. "It is of the greatest importance, however," a spokesman for 1916 stresses, "that a class build such a fund in addition to its regular annual contributions to the Alumni Fund."

advertising specialties." Arthur, having good reason to be proud of his eleven grandchildren, continued, "The oldest has graduated from high school, has served six months in the Army, and now manages a sporting goods store in Bristol, Conn. I wouldn't be surprised to become a great grandfather before our 45th reunion!"

Phil Pope represented Bowdoin at the inauguration of the Very Reverend Edmund W. Morton, S.J., as President of Gonzaga University at Spokane, Wash., on October 6.

1916 Secretary, Dwight Sayward
415 Congress Street
Portland

The Class Secretary has transmitted the following report: "Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hawes are currently enjoying a cruise to the West Indies and other exotic areas of the globe.

"Mr. and Mrs. Plank Boardman are spending every spare moment clearing a huge lot of land in New Hampshire (some 300 acres, give or take a couple of acres either way), where they expect to retire in the not-too-distant future.

"Bob Drummond continues to make progress towards recovery from his recent serious illness, and he is now out and around again.

"Ina and Bill Lord spent the summer in Maine.

"Gordon Olson emerged from a recent big business merger as general manager of the New England Division of the Robert Gair Company.

"Johnny Robie and Langdon White have retired and are now living in Gorham.

"A recent letter from Willard Woodman says that he is nearing retirement, possibly in Florida.

"Anna and Winthrop Bancroft toured Europe this past summer.

"The additional gifts to the 1956-57 Alumni Fund, as a memorial to Jim Dunn, amounted to nearly $500."

Classmates and friends will grieve to hear of the death of Eliot Shepard in early September. In the words of the Class Secretary, "Eliot was with us only a short time, but he was always a loyal Bowdoin man and a regular subscriber to the Alumni Fund."

1917 Secretary, Noel C. Little
8 College Street
Brunswick

Colonel Boyd Bartlett, Professor of Electricity

at the United States Military Academy, West Point, and Mrs. Bartlett were dinner guests at the Combined Plan College Conference of Columbia University, held at Columbia's Harriman, N. Y. campus in early October.

Arthur Chapman has been made an honorary member of the New York State Association of Secondary School Principals for his service to the rural youth of New York State.

Roland Cobb, Maine Fish and Game Commissioner, is concerned about a growing problem to sportsmen in Maine. In his September newsletter to sportsmen's clubs, he referred to the problem of access to public fishing waters. Many of the lakes and streams in Maine are open to the public for fishing, but owners of adjoining property are becoming increasingly reluctant, in many cases, to allow the burgeoning ranks of anglers to tramp across their lands. The problem resolves itself into one of obtaining public rights-of-way to the fishing waters.

Percy Crane, Director of Admissions at the University of Maine, attended a series of meetings on admissions, testing, and guidance problems this fall. He was a panel member, discussing "The Role of the Counsellors in the College Admissions Picture," at the annual meeting of the New England Guidance Council in Hartford, Conn., on October 31. He also attended the annual conferences of the Educational Records Bureau and the American Council on Education, which were held in New York City from October 31 to November 2. Before returning to Maine, Percy went to Princeton, N. J., to participate in the annual meeting of the State Directors of Testing Programs at the Educational Testing Service.

Professor and Mrs. Noel Little entertained the delegates to the New England Section of the American Physical Society which met at Bowdoin on October 19.

1918 Secretary, Lloyd O. Coulter
Plumer Road
Epping, N. H.

Robert Albion, who is Gardiner Professor of Oceanic History and Affairs at Harvard University, delivered the initial lecture of a series of eight which is being sponsored by the Essex Institute (Mass.). Speaking on October 14, Robert took as his topic "Packets, Clippers, and China Tea." Former faculty member at Princeton, author of several books, holder of a 1948 Presidential Certificate of Merit, and honorary Life Member of the Society for Nautical Research (of England), Bob is also affiliated with the museum at the Mystic Seaport in Connecticut and its courses in American maritime history.

A good and comprehensive report has been submitted by the Class Secretary. Draw a deep breath, gentle reader, and wade in!

"Paul (Perce) Farnham writes that just after building a home in Scottsdale, Ariz., a beautiful golf course was built beside it. Right handy for Paul, who, despite the weight of years under which we all bend, still shoots in the low eighties.

"Paul has three granddaughters living in Birmingham, Mich., and he gets back East and up to New England a couple of times a year, but these dates don't seem to coincide with Commencement. This, we trust, will be corrected next June. He has just returned from a 5000-mile trip through the Pacific Northwest and British Columbia.

"Henry 'Heinie' Haskell's son, Peter, entered Bowdoin this fall. His daughter, Muriel, whose husband, Dr. John Meyer, has been appointed head of the Neurology Department at the Wayne University Medical School, is moving to Detroit. She has four daughters. Henry's daughter Mercy is moving to Cambridge where her husband will attend Harvard Law School. Mercy is expecting to present Heinie with another grandchild in February. His son, Hank '56, is still C. O. of the Petroleum Depot, QMC, Buzy, France (near Verdun). Hank reports a number of Bowdoin men in the area. The Heinie Haskell's spent their 25th wedding anniversary at Dives-sur-Mer, near Deauville, France. Heinie's father, Dr. Alaric Haskell H'46, recently celebrated his 91st birthday.

"H. T. (Horatio Tobey) Mooers may sell his attractive home in Sarasota, where a number of Eighteeners, including Nubs Nevens, have dropped in from time to time in the course of checking on the Red Sox, and move to another Florida town, maybe St. Pete or Port Richey. Tobe, who has served as Consul and Consul General for many years in many parts of the world, may return to Europe for a season's visit in the interim. Your Class Secretary has reason to know that Tobe is one of the best linguists ever to have been graduated from Joe Bowdoin's place: he wrote a highly praised novel in French, entitled The Bay of the Angeles. He is also the only American member of the Academy of Lyons since Ben Franklin.

"Howard 'Beethoven' Pierce, who most of us will agree is a popular Eighteenner, claims that everything happening to him recently is strictly trivial. He's wrong: Forty years of teaching is more than most of us can claim by way of public service. He ushers five classes of Plane Geometry through the conventional two-dimensional world twice each day. On the side, to keep his baton polished, he coaches and leads a choral group of seventy voices at the Pfizer Chemical Plant in Groton, conducts a chorus of 20-40 student nurses at the local hospital (Waterford, Conn.), and plays a church organ and leads a choir every Sunday. He doesn't explain what he does with his spare time. His address in Waterford is 18 Edgewood Avenue.

"It appears that Messrs. Cook and King, attorneys at 120 Boylston Street, Boston 16, Mass., are still keeping their appointed 'rounds' — that is, R. C. 'Bob' Rounds, who remains as senior partner of that eminent firm at the aforementioned address.

"Richard T. 'Colonel' Schlosberg has left Paris Island, Maine, where he spent the summer, for 1061 Tennessee Avenue, Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Dick lived in Alexandria, Va., when he first retired from the Army, but with that rare good judgment awarded Bowdoin men, he and Dottie have spent their summers in Maine for the past nine years. Their son graduated from West Point in 1943 and is a lieutenant colonel in the Air Force, stationed at the Pentagon. Dick and Dottie have four grandchildren whom they see a couple of times a year when they stop off in Washington in the spring and the fall. Dick hopes to be back for our Fortieth.

"Tim Stearns, President of the Textile Banking Company, N.Y.C., adds a postscript: 'I'm hoping to get to Maine for the September fishing.'

"Dr. W. H. 'Lunk' Van Wart, whose office is at 600 Asylum Avenue, Hartford, Conn., has four children and two grandchildren. Bill says he expects to be back for our Fortieth.

"Les Wallace has been hospitalized three times in the last year and a half, twice with coronaries. He says he is learning to live with it and he manages to get into City Hall, Portland, with some frequency. He sees Walt Read, who was in the same class at Deering High and in our freshman class at Bowdoin. Walt left to enter Annapolis and has just retired as a four-striper. He has a charming wife, the daughter of a naval officer, and two daughters who were married at Annapolis on successive days in June, 1956, each to a naval officer. Walt's address is Captain Walton R. Read, USN, Ret., 210 South Cherry Grove Avenue, Annapolis, Md.

"The Chicago Daily News of August 31 referred to our classmate Bill Woodfill as 'an erudite gentleman, just turned 61, who is fondly dubbed "King of Mackinac Island."' According to the writer, Mackinac and its Grand Hotel might be called one of the 'last resorts.' The Grand Hotel, owned by Bill, has the largest porch extant and a flair for elegance surviving from the days of the Chicago socialites who made the old caravan-sary their playground: the Pullmans, Fields, and Potter Palmers. Aside from the essential delights of fine food and name bands, it seems that Bill's nearby beach home is the focal point of more intellectual fare, where discussion may range from Proust and Kant to atomic energy, modern art, or sociology. This wide-ranging percipience and esoteric discursiveness surprise none who knew Bill and the Bowdoin bull sessions of our youth.

"The New Orleans Times-Picayune recently ran an article on Paul Young, who had been elected President of the Baton Rouge Association for Mental Health. He is a Director of the Louisiana State Mental Health Association and a recognized national leader and authority in this important field who frequently addresses PTA and church groups, civic clubs, and medical units on the subject. Paul has relinquished the Chairmanship of the Psychology Department at L.S.U., but he still carries on a very busy schedule as professor. He is an outstanding authority on hypnosis (a subject in which interest sharpened with the search for Bridie Murphy), and he is so recognized in Who's Who.

"The eleven surviving, of the thirteen original Young brothers, met recently for a family reunion in Greenville, Texas. Though the Young brothers can no longer be called young, they are younger than the Younger brothers, celebrated gun slingers of the wild and woolly West. The Young group included Paul's younger brother, John Young '21. Paul Young jr. finishes his work at L.S.U.'s Medical School next June. His two younger brothers are in the armed forces." (Here endeth the Class Lesson. Your breathless notes editor hopes that all members of 1918, now properly and almost completely informed, will gratefully present themselves for their Fortieth Reunion in June!)

Shirley Gray was married to Mrs. Kathryn Huissen Bazell on October 10 in Chicago, Ill.

An account of the Shirley Grays' wedding appeared on page 11 of the November Discus, the monthly publication of Chicago's Lake Shore Club. A fine personal tribute to Shirley also appeared in the magazine on page 15; it was entitled "Meet a Busy Man."

Fred McConky has been named an assistant vice president of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company. He will devote his full time to petroleum sales activities.

1919 Secretary, Donald S. Higgins
78 Royal Road
Bangor

The Reverend Milton McGorrill was formally installed as minister of the First Universalist Church of Bangor at a service in the church auditorium on Sunday, November 2.

Milton has been nominated to the Maine panel of labor mediators by Governor Muskie.

1920 Secretary, Sanford B. Cousins
200 East 66th Street
New York 21, N. Y.

Ed Berman has been named by Maine's Governor Muskie to the Committee on Problems of the Mentally Retarded.

Oliver Moses has resigned as a director of the First National Bank of Bath. Mr. and Mrs. Moses, formerly residents of Bath, are now living in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

The Emerson Zeitlers have announced the engagement of their daughter Marilyn to Mr. Joseph Carl Berg of West Duxbury, Mass. Miss Zeitler, who is currently teaching at the Duxbury Consolidated School in Duxbury, Mass., is a graduate of Lesley College. Mr. Berg, a veteran of World War II, is employed at the Hingham Naval Base.

Emerson Zeitler, National Fund Vice Chairman and Chairman of the Brunswick Chapter of the American Red Cross, presided at the annual meeting on October 11. Professor Eaton Leith presented a pipe to Zeit as a small token of appreciation from his fellow volunteer workers in the Brunswick chapter in recognition of his many years of devoted service.

1921 Secretary, Norman W. Haines
Savings Bank Building
Reading, Mass.

Harrison Lyseth, former Superintendent of Schools in Portland, was honored by a group of close associates at a testimonial dinner at the Eastland Hotel on October 3. The speakers at the occasion included William Linnell '07. A number of other Bowdoin men were present, and Harrison was presented a set of luggage by the group.

1922 Secretary, Albert R. Thayer
40 Longfellow Avenue
Brunswick

Louis Bernstein, President of the Alumni Council, received a specially inscribed certificate on October 4. The award was one of five made in recognition of the leadership given by five alumni in the recently completed 1956-57 Fund as they led their respective classes to the tops of their various Decade Groups.

Mrs. Mary Baxter White, wife of Bruce White, has sold the Harriet Beecher Stowe House to Don Strong '48. She is continuing her gift shop and travel agency interests which she now operates at 212 Maine Street, formerly the site of Pickett's Furniture Store.

59 Orland Street
Portland

Class Secretary Dick Small passes on this note from Larry Allen: "Son Charles is now a first-year medical student at Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York City. He received his A.B., cum laude, from Harvard last June. Daughter Marion now is a junior at Smith College. Wife Ruth has resumed her second year as Supervisor and Reading Coordinator in Somers, Conn., School System. We now have 22 units in our Allen's Guest House and Motel in Sanford. See you all at our thirty-fifth in June."

Dick Small, Portland attorney and Polar Bear football fan, was seen on Whittier Field this fall, sporting a coonskin coat. It seems that the coat is a relic of Dick's college days, as was pointed out in Franklin P. Lincoln's column in the October 30th issue of the Portland Press Herald. The columnist seemed to derive amusement from the fact that Dick goes hatless but coonskinned and wears gloves and several layers of socks which elicited the rather impertinent rhetorical query: "Cold hands and feet, warm heart, and hot head?"

Phil and Betsy Wilder were in New York City on November 2 for the wedding of their son, Charlie '50, to Miss Elinor Gardner Dean. Another son, Phil jr. '45, served as best man.

1924 Secretary, Clarence D. Rouillard
124 Roxborough Drive
Toronto 5, Ontario
Canada

John Morrell, son of the Mal Morrells, has become engaged to Miss Mary Louise Harris of Scarsdale, N. Y., and Bailey Island. A June wedding is planned.

1925 Secretary, William H. Gulliver jr.
30 Federal Street
Boston, Mass.

Bob Bentley was married on Friday, September 13, to the former Mrs. Elizabeth Myers Pitcaithly in Newark, N. J.

Lawrence Cockburn has moved from Skowhegan to Florida. His temporary address is 4961 15th Avenue North, St. Petersburg, Fla.

Ray and Estelle Collett extended an invitation to any and all members of the Class of 1925 to attend an open house at their home at 350 North Main Street in Brewer following the Maine game at Orono on November 9.

Chauncey Fish has left the real estate business to teach in the high school at Hicksville, N. Y., which is on Long Island. He still lives in Fairfield, Conn., on Round Hill Road, but the street number has been changed to 530.

Bill Gulliver has resigned as Chairman of the Port of Boston Commission.

Horace Hildreth, former Ambassador to Pakistan, was invited to write a feature article for the Portland Press Herald on the subject of foreign aid. The article appeared in the October 3rd issue. Giving examples from his own experience, he sought to show that the problem of foreign aid is a complicated one for which no single, established rule or formula can be prescribed.

Horace is heading the Northeastern Broadcasting Company which was officially formed on September 20. In addition to station WABI, AM-TV (Bangor), the company also owns stations WAGM, AM-TV in Presque Isle, and WABM, in Houlton. Horace is part owner of Mount Washington TV, as well, which operates station WMTW-TV.

Horace addressed the opening luncheon meeting of the Augusta Woman's Club on October 4. His subject was "Pakistan and its Importance to the United States."

Horace spoke before a meeting of the Maine Social Science Conference on November 4 at Colby College.

Crosby Hodgman, Headmaster of the Beaver Country Day School in Chestnut Hill, Mass., was host to a World University Service Assembly at the school on October 12. Representatives from New England colleges and secondary schools attended, including Roland O'Neal '59, Chairman of the Bowdoin Campus Chest Committee for 1958.

Barrett Nichols, Treasurer of the Maine Savings Bank of Portland, was elected President of the Savings Bank Association of Maine at its 64th annual convention at Dixville Notch, N. H., in September.

Ted Paul's antique "push pung" was pictured in a recent issue of the Portland Press Herald. This sled of the 1800 period was on display as part of the Maine Antique Dealers Show which was held in Portland.

1927 Secretary, George O. Cutter
618 Overhill Road
Birmingham, Mich.

Frank Farrington has resigned as Chairman of the Maine Industrial Accident Commission, a position he had held since 1949. A newspaper account reported that he gave "reasons of health" for submitting his resignation.

Don Marshall's younger son has pledged DU at M.I.T. (This, Don hastens to add, is because there is no chapter of Alpha Delta Phi there!)

1928 Secretary, William D. Alexander
Middlesex School
Concord, Mass.

Bernard Lucas, formerly President of the Kennebec Bowdoin Club, has been elected Alumni Council Member by that group.

Fletcher Means, who has been taking an active interest in the Theta (Bowdoin) Chapter of Delta Kappa Epsilon for many years, was honored by the members of DKE at the annual initiation banquet on November 1. Chapter President Frank Johnson '58 praised Fletcher and all the good work he had done and then announced that the Theta Chapter is establishing a plaque in Fletcher's honor which will be awarded each year to the outstanding Deke freshman. The recipient is to be a well-rounded student who shows ability in scholarship, athletics, and extra-curricular activities.

1929 Secretary, H. LeBrec Micoletau
c/o General Motors Corporation
1775 Broadway
New York, N. Y.

Dick Angus has a new address: The Carson House, Glen Riddle, Pa. Dick is Vice President of P. O. Moore, Inc., in Glen Riddle.

Parkin Briggs writes, "The biggest news I have is that my oldest daughter, Betty, gave birth to my second candidate for Bowdoin on October 29 — Scott Parkin Hamilton by name. The first grandson, Samuel W., is now 14 months old.

"As you know, all my prospective Bowdoin candidates turned out to be daughters. Being a grandfather twice now just makes me realize that 1929 was a long time ago."

Brad Hutchins, Waterville attorney and a national committeeman, spoke to the Sagadahoc County Republican Committee at the Topsham Grange Hall on October 21.

Brad has been renamed to the Maine Board of Bar Examiners.

Sam Ladd received a specially inscribed certificate on October 4 at the Eighth Annual On-Campus meeting of the Directors and Agents of the Alumni Fund. One of five awards, it was given Sam in recognition of his class's having led its particular Decade Group in the 1956-57 Fund.

Bill Mills is Chairman of the United Fund Campaign in Jacksonville, Fla.

Gorham Scott's son, Peter K., is a member of the freshman class at Bowdoin.

Classmates and friends extend their sympathy to Abbott and Ellis Spear, whose mother, Mrs. Margaret Spear, widow of Ellis Spear '98, died on September 27 in Newton Centre, Mass.

Dana Swan has a new grandson, Henry Franklin Anthony III, who was born on March 30.

1930 Secretary, H. Philip Chapman jr.
175 Pleasantview Avenue
Longmeadow 6, Mass.

Herb Chalmers was elected President of the Maine Association of Insurance Agents in September.

Dave Oakes wrote a very interesting account of a recent trip to Class Secretary Phil Chapman, who has kindly passed it on to the editors of the Alumnus. Because we think that the unusual, rather off beat nature of the trip (and Dave's account) would appeal to many readers, we are pleased to reprint it here.

"Thirty years ago I listened to Donald Mac-Millan talk at the Boston City Club about Labrador, which he described as the most beautiful land in the world in July and August. Following his lecture I cornered him, and with the peculiar courage of youth I asked for a berth the following summer on the Bowdoin. Only those who know that amazing man can understand Cap'n Mac's kindly manner in gently refusing my request as he fired me with a dream to visit, some day, that little-known country north of Nain.

"My dream has come true. I have just returned from a trip that took me 500 miles beyond Goose Bay. Laura accompanied me to that military base, whence she flew back to Boston, while I continued north.

"It is a land where the Hamilton River empties into Melville Lake, which divides southern and northern coastal Labrador. This is the threshold where the tourist is halted abruptly, unless he has legitimate business farther north. Fortunately my mission was of such a nature that I was permitted passage on the tiny north coastal vessel, Trepassey. Thanks to Cap'n Mac (now Admiral, incidentally) I was privileged to live among the Eskimos with the Moravian missionaries in Hebron, the most northern permanent settlement on the Labrador Coast.

"The daily temperature was around 65° and somewhat less at night. A little of last winter's snow remains, but wild flowers abound, even beyond the tree line. Blueberries grow abundantly on tiny stems that hug the ground. Mushrooms grow wild, to be had for the picking, and we feasted on them. There is a native berry known as the 'bake apple,' which is the size of a thimble, looks like a raspberry, and grows on an erect stem from a plant resembling a strawberry plant — delicious eating.

"Nain, 200 miles to the south of Hebron, has dense spruce forests. The ocean abounds with trout. Smoked it is better than peppermint candy. 'Fish' down there means cod, and one 'jigs' for it — my kind of fishing — 125 pounds in an hour, none of which goes to waste, for the dogs are always hungry. I never knew so many dogs existed, particularly when they start 'talking' to each other at 2 a.m.! Pictures tell the story as words cannot, and I shot 350 photos in color. God willing, Laura and I will go back next summer."

Olin Pettingill jr. presented a lecture which was illustrated by color movies on October 26 at the Berkshire Museum. Entitled "Penguin Summer," the talk and the movies were based on the Pettingills' experiences in the Falkland Islands, where they had been working at the request of Walt Disney. A newspaper account gave this interesting sidelight: "While photographing the windswept, treeless islands, Dr. and Mrs. Pettingill were stranded in a storm for a week and lived on native plants until a plane rescued them. During his visit to the Falklands, the photographer suffered a broken arm while saving his camera from falling off a ledge."

George Willard's son, Stephen, entered Dartmouth this fall after having graduated from Sanford High School with highest honors.

1931 Secretary, Rev. Albert E. Jenkins
515 Maulsby Drive
Whittier, Calif.

Walter Bowman, formerly associated with The American Language Institute in Baghdad, Iraq, has returned to the United States and is living at his former address, 5331 Baltimore Avenue, Chevy Chase 15, Md.

Al Fenton has moved to Cleveland, where he will be working for the coming year in the Alumni Office of Case Institute of Technology, University Circle. His home address is 3458 Northcliffe Road, Cleveland Heights 18, Ohio.

John Gould continues his good fight against the rise of driver-license and truck-registration fees in Maine. In early October, speaking at the Portland Club, he accused Republican leaders of "playing footsie" with Governor Muskie.

Herman Sweet, who is Professor of Biology at Tufts University, spent almost three weeks in the Hawaiian Islands during September. On his trip he was accompanied by his wife and his son, Dana. From September 18 through 23 he attended the Second World Orchid Conference, at which time he presented a paper on Miltonias at the Miltonia, Oncidium, and Odontoglossum Session. Herman was invited to judge at the Orchid Show in conjunction with the Conference at the Honolulu Academy of Arts.

1932 Secretary, Harland E. Blanchard
147 Spring Street
Westbrook

Harris Plaisted, a certified life underwriter and a member of the State of Maine Chapter of the American Society of Life Underwriters, has been named to a three-year term as a member of the C.L.U. Institute Board.

1933 Secretary, Richard E. Boyd
16 East Elm Street
Yarmouth

Dr. Roswell Bates, Chairman of the Governor's Executive Council, was the speaker at the fall meeting of the State Federation of Women's Republican Clubs which was held at the Eastland Hotel in Portland on November 5. "Spectator or Participant?" was his topic.

The Hal Fosters' son, John, is a sophomore at Shaker Heights High School, Shaker Heights, Ohio, where he has just been elected president of the sophomore class. In addition, he is the only member of his class to hold a varsity letter in cross country this fall.

Ed McMenemy, until recently Acting Director of Personnel for the International Cooperation Administration in Washington, has been appointed Associate Provost of Columbia University. In this new post, Ed will be the chief aide to Dr. John Krout, Vice President and Provost of the University. His office will be located in the Low Memorial Library. Temporarily his address is 5 Wayside Lane, Scarsdale, N. Y.

1934 Secretary, Rev. Gordon E. Gillett
601 Main Street
Peoria, Illinois

Fred Drake has been elected a vice president of the Maine Association of Insurance Agents.

Enoch and Jean Hunt are the happy parents of a daughter, Lisa Armour Hunt, born last July 17. Enoch is at present the representative in Palm Beach County, Fla., for the Lincoln National Life Insurance Company. The Hunts' address is 502 South Atlantic Avenue, Hypoluxo Island, Fla.

Classmates and friends extend their deep sympathy to Charles Kahill, whose father, Joseph B. Kahill, Syrian-born but naturalized American artist, died in Portland on June 29. Appropriate mention of this has not been made before because the editors learned of it just recently.

Joseph Kahill's last painting was a portrait of the American poet, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow 1825. It has been presented by its original owner, Charles Hutchinson '90, to the Longfellow School (Portland) in the artist's memory and honor.

Bob Kingsbury, who is a professor of physics at Trinity College, is running as a candidate for the school board in the town of Vernon, Conn. He is also Secretary of the New England Section of the American Physical Society, which met at Brunswick on October 19 as guests of the College and the physics department.

1935 Secretary, Paul E. Sullivan
1817 Pacific Avenue
Manhattan Beach, Calif.

Peter Weiss has been promoted to professor of physics at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J.

1936 Secretary, Hubert S. Shaw
Admissions Office
Massachusetts Hall
Brunswick

Francis Benjamin represented Bowdoin at the inauguration of Sidney Walter Martin as President of Emory University in Atlanta, Ga., on November 15.

Bill Soule was the subject of a fine article in the October 1 issue of the Portland Press Herald. The occasion for this was Bill's recent appointment as Superintendent of Schools in Portland. With twenty-one years of experience as a teacher, coach, and superintendent, Bill brings to his new position an understanding of secondary education which has been learned from the ground up.

WHERE CLASS NOTES COME FROM

To dispel the notion that every class note comes to us from the class secretaries, we would like to explain that such is not the case. Class secretaries do submit reports, but often we get our items from newspaper stories, publicity releases, and individual letters. Friends and classmates often tell us things, too. We try our best to cull and collate interesting news items from many different sources.

Winthrop Walker has been chosen to lead Portland's 1958 United Fund Campaign.

1937 Secretary, William S. Burton
1144 Union Commerce Building
Cleveland 14, Ohio

Classmates and friends extend their sympathy to Albert Gould, whose mother, Mrs. Emilie Creighton Gould, died on October 21 in Beverly Farms, Mass.

McMenemy '33

Neale Howard represented Bowdoin at the inauguration of Donald A. Eldredge as President of Bennett College in Millbrook, N. Y., on October 11.

1938 Secretary, Andrew H. Cox
50 Federal Street
Boston, Mass.

Former State Senator Phil Chapman has been speaking in all sections of Maine in what is believed to be a primary campaign swing. Some political prognosticators believe that Phil is making a bid for the Republican nomination as candidate for Governor of Maine. He has challenged the State Highway Commission for by-passing public consideration of its program. Although not critical of the highway department, he does say that it is regrettable that the highway commission does not allow public participation when it plans much of its program.

Dan Fox, experienced minister with advanced degrees from Bangor Theological Seminary and the Episcopal Theological Seminary, entered a new field this autumn. He has had previous experience as a music teacher, but he is now teaching high school social studies in Orford, N. H.

Vinnie Welch, Vice Chairman of the 1957-58 Alumni Fund, was awarded a specially inscribed certificate at the Eighth Annual On-Campus Conference of the Directors and Agents of the Alumni Fund. Presented on October 4, it was in recognition of his position as leader of his decade group in the recently completed 1956-57 Fund.

1939 Secretary, John H. Rich jr.
Highpoint on the Hudson
2727 Palisade Avenue
Apartment 7-F
Riverdale, N. Y.

Milton Gordon is teaching at Wellesley College this year, where he is Visiting Associate Professor of Sociology.

Dr. John Konecki was one of the speakers at the seventh annual meeting of the Maine Chapter of the American Academy of General Practitioners which was held in Lewiston on October 31. His topic was "The Use of Diagnostic X-ray in the Office of the General Practitioner." John is chief radiologist at St. Mary's Hospital in Lewiston, and he is also President of the Maine Radiological Society.

Seth Larrabee is reported to be carrying on a spirited correspondence with a Mr. Bolivar Ball. Reports have it that Bolivar writes the letters and Seth responds via the ether waves. (Readers in the Portland area are advised to dial Radio Station WLOB to check on the validity of this rumbling.)

Jo Pierce, Chairman of the 1957-58 Bowdoin Alumni Fund, presided at the business sessions of the Eighth Annual On-Campus Conference of Directors and Agents held on October 4 and 5.

Mrs. Tim Riley has been elected President of the Brunswick Area Student Aid Fund to succeed Mario Tonon '42.

Dr. Frank Woodruff of Barre, Vt., became Superintendent of the Washington County Sanatorium on November 1.

Schenectady, N. Y.

Bob Bass has been renominated to the Advisory Board of the Department of Economic Development for the State of Maine.

Dr. Jim Blunt has just been chosen Vice President of the Bowdoin Club of Cleveland.

Dick Doyle, sports writer for the Portland Press Herald, has written the words and music for a new Bowdoin song entitled "Fight On, Fight On, Big White." The lyrics for the song were published in the October 22nd issue of the Orient.

Paul Keeler has been appointed Manager of Government Relations at the Raytheon Manufacturing Company in Waltham, Mass. His new duties will include sales to the military services, and he will also direct the government contracts departments and district offices in Washington, D. C., and Dayton, Ohio. His office will be in Newton, Mass.

Dr. Phil Young moved in July to New Orleans, where he is now in the section on gastroenterology of the Ochsner Clinic. His home address is 3503 Prytania Street, New Orleans 15, La.

Bridgton

Bob Barton has been appointed Director of the Inter-American Department of the Institute of International Education. Following his service with the Marine Corps, 1942-46, Bob joined the U. S. Information Service, with which he has been associated ever since. From 1953 until his appointment with I.I.E. he was Assistant Cultural Affairs Officer and Attaché at the Embassy in Madrid, Spain, where he supervised and administered the Educational Exchange Program.

Bob and Eileen McCarty are the happy, proud parents of twin sons, Patrick Jeremiah and Charles Barry, who were born on September 23.

Bob Martin was elected president of the Kennebec Bowdoin Club at the fall meeting, held in Waterville on October 23.

Classmates and friends extend their deep sympathy to Bob in the death of his mother, Mrs. Frances Purinton Martin, on September 8.

Marcus Parsons has a new address: Lt. Col. Marcus L. Parsons, O-45699, MAAG France, Army Sec., APO 230, New York, N. Y.

The Reverend Walter Young, who is Chaplain at the Cranbrook School in Bloomfield Hills, Mich., recently wrote, "Martie and I had our third child, a girl, born June 17 in Boston — named Laurie Larkin Young. This makes two girls and a boy." Walt continues to be the Midwest spark plug for the S.E.B.'s Lake Erie Conference for Religion in the Independent Schools.

1942 Secretary, John L. Baxter jr.
19 Lancey Street
Pittsfield

Arthur Benoit has been named to a seven-year term as a trustee of the University of Maine. Those who remember him as a former Bowdoin football player hope that he doesn't get his bears confused!

Arthur has also been appointed State Chairman for the Maine Association for Retarded Children. In accepting the appointment he said, "I have as yet only a limited knowledge of the specific needs of retarded children of Maine, but being the father of several normal children, I know that all children need a happy home life, a wholesome neighborhood association, and schooling which enables them to grow and learn to be self-sufficient.

"Along with many others, I feel it is a privilege to support the Maine Association for Retarded Children in its effort to see that the retarded children among us have these necessities provided for them."

Dick Bond, Dean of Westbrook Junior College, presided at its opening convocation on September 22. Bowdoin's Professor William Geoghegan of the Department of Religion was the principal speaker.

Dan Drummond has been elected Treasurer of the Portland Society of Art.

Fred Fisher has been appointed chairman of the membership campaign of the Newton (Mass.) Chapter of the American Red Cross. Part of his duties will consist of coordinating Red Cross participation with the United Fund appeal.

Paul Hazelton, newly appointed Assistant Professor of Education, began his new duties this fall by teaching Education 1 (History of Education) and Education 6 (Teaching).

Mario Tonon has been elected a director of the Brunswick Area Student Aid Fund for a three-year-term.

The Reverend Dave Works, who is President of the North Conway Foundation, was an active participant in the New Hampshire Governor's Conference on Alcoholism, held at North Conway, N. H., on September 30 and October 1.

1943 Secretary, John F. Jaques
312 Pine Street
South Portland

Gerald Blakeley has been named a trustee of the Museum of Science in Boston.

Gerald was also presented a scroll at the second annual Greater Boston Achievement Awards Dinner at the Commonwealth Country Club on October 8.

The Roger Bragtons and their three children have moved to Saxtons River, Vt., where Roger has begun his new duties as head of the French department at the Vermont Academy.

Bob Burton, formerly Vice President, is now President of the Bowdoin Club of Cleveland.

Harry Twomey, formerly Manager of Industrial Relations at the Boston Works of Allis Chalmers, has been appointed Manager of the Labor Relations Section, Industrial Relations Department of the company's plant in West Allis, Wis. In this new capacity Harry will direct labor relations for the firm's headquarters and largest plant, which employs more than 15,000 men and women from the Milwaukee area.

John Wentworth has been appointed General Manager of Associated Spring Corporation's Ohio Division, Dayton, Ohio. Formerly assistant spring works manager of the Wallace Division of the concern in Bristol, Conn., John has been with Associated Spring since 1955. John, Nancy, and their three sons are moving from West Hartford to Dayton.

1944 Secretary, Ross Williams
Building 1
Apartment 3-A 14 South Broadway
Irvington, N. Y.

The Class Secretary has submitted the following report: "Bob and Ellen Schnabel have announced the arrival of Philip, their second child, on July 4. Bob writes that the early morning fireworks probably played a part in it. This fall Bob is taking up his new duties as professor of philosophy at Concordia Senior College in Fort Wayne. His address remains the same: 6902 South Calhoun Street, Fort Wayne, Ind.

"Eva Douglas Burpee arrived on August 19, weighing 8 pounds, 2½ ounces, at the Greenwich Hospital. One of Quxie's first visitors was Fred Lee, a pediatrician at the same hospital, who spotted the name and dropped in to make sure the new arrival really had Bowdoin ties.

"The Class Secretary has moved to Building 1, Apartment 3-A, 14 South Broadway, Irvington, N. Y., where he is at home to all Bowdoin men passing through the New York area."

A recent article in the Portland Press Herald carried the story of Captain Erwin Archibald's part in the recent Operation "Manhigh." As Aviation Physiologist, Erwin worked on the "Sealed Cabin Environment" aspect of the project which enabled Major Simons to ascend successfully to a record altitude of 96,000 feet. Speaking of the project and the important balloon ascent, Erwin said, "I believe we stand on the threshold of one of man's greatest adventures. I feel that this is one of the greatest challenges man has ever faced, and I feel privileged to be a part of the team. The Air Force is looking ahead 15 years to the problems they will face in human factors. They are interested in anything that involves the efficiency of the airman. Most of the problems are going to be the result of the use of hermetically sealed cabins such as the Manhigh capsule used by Major Simons in his ascent.

"Aircraft are pushing closer and closer to the limit of the pressurized cabin in terms of operative ceiling altitude. It's a continuing race to get higher and higher altitude. If we are going to send planes up 75,000 to 80,000 feet, we have to have hermetically sealed cabins because conventionally pressurized cabins won't work at that altitude."

Phil Burke has opened his office for the practice of general surgery at 491 Pleasant Street, Worcester, Mass. He writes that he now has four children, two of whom are Bowdoin "eligibles." Phil's new home address is 36 Brentwood Drive, Holden, Mass.

The Dysingers (Bob, Helen, and Calvin 2½) have moved from Waterville to Brunswick. Formerly reference librarian at Colby College, Bob is now back at his alma mater as assistant librarian, replacing John McKenna, who moved to Colby as librarian. The Dysingers live at 7 Coffin Street in Brunswick.

Classmates and friends will grieve to learn of the death of Captain Bill Mudge on November 1 in Michigan.

Dr. Fred Whittaker, Bangor educator and clergyman, was declared the "National PGA Hole-in-One Champion" on November 3. He had scored the longest "ace" of the 36 scored on Labor Day in the United States. He was awarded a huge, beautiful trophy for this feat.

1945 Secretary, Thomas R. Huleatt, M.D.
32 Ledgewood Road,
West Hartford, Conn.

Dick Berry, formerly vice president and sales manager of J. M. Rattray and Company, Inc., opened his own food brokerage business on October 1. Dick's concern offers a complete sales and merchandising service for canned and frozen foods and grocery specialties. Known as the Richard P. Berry Company, Dick's business is located at 115 Newbury Street, Boston. It will distribute foods throughout the New England area.

Dr. Dick Britton has moved to Cleveland, Ohio, where he is living at 2500 Norfolk Drive. A surgeon, he is presently associated with the Cleveland Clinic.

Bruce Elliott wrote the Alumni Office recently: "Returned to the States from Brazil last June; took 60 days leave in the East, and in August reported for duty at Rocky Mountain Arsenal in Denver, where I have been assigned as Post Adjutant. During the long leave we bought a cottage on Lake Winnepesaukee and enjoyed an all-too-short stay in that beautiful area. Now I am taking courses four nights a week at the University of Denver in an effort to get the degree I missed so long ago." He may be addressed as follows: Captain R. B. Elliott, Rocky Mountain Arsenal, Denver 2, Colo.

Lloyd Knight, formerly public service co-ordinator, has been named Production Manager of Station WGAN-TV in Portland.

Reed Manning and Professor Merle Moskowitz of Bowdoin's Psychology Department met in Paris this past summer.

Wally Philoon has been made Assistant to the Director of Chemical Process Development of the Uranium Division of the Mallinckrodt Chemical Works. This is his old company, but this is an entirely new division as far as he is concerned.

Bill Quen has been appointed National Commercial Manager for Radio Station WHDH in Boston, Mass. Since 1953 he had been associated with the station as an account executive. Bill and Alice live at 15 Blossom Lane, Weston 93, Mass., with their two sons, Christopher and Court.

Attorney Herb Sawyer, a former assistant attorney general, has been named U. S. Commissioner for a four-year term in Portland.

Gibbie Semmes has opened new law offices at 1000 Connecticut Avenue, N. W., Washington 6, D. C., for the practice of patent and trademark law.

John Succop, President of the Bowdoin Club of Pittsburgh, represented the College at the installation ceremonies at the Kiskiminetas Springs School, Saltsburg, Pa., when John Pidgeon '49, formerly of Deerfield, became Headmaster.

Norm Tronerud, a faculty member at the University of Maine, will give one of a series of six lectures in the humanities which has been scheduled for the current academic season. The series is being sponsored by the Memorial Union in cooperation with Maine's College of Arts and Sciences.

1946 Secretary, Morris A. Densmore
55 Pillsbury Street
South Portland 7

Dick Achorn has been appointed General Agent of the Maine Central Railroad at Lewiston. He began working for the Maine Central in 1947, and since then he has held several positions, including that of telegrapher and, most recently, agent. His new address is 78 Fairview Court, Auburn.

Emery Beane jr. was married to Miss Elizabeth Jane Lester of Raymond on September 21 in Portland. The bride is an alumna of Westbrook Junior College and the University of Maine. The bridegroom, who holds his law degree from Portland University Law School, is a member of the law firm of Beane and Beane and is a member of the House of Representatives in the 98th Maine Legislature. The couple is residing at 8 Flagg Street, Augusta. Emery Beane sr. '04 served as best man for his son.

Clinton Clark wrote recently, "Twin boys born March 21. Score now stands at 5: 2 girls and 3 boys. Working with WDG Radio in Minneapolis as account executive."

Ken Niven, who has been with the Columbia Broadcasting System for eight years, carries on a three-generation family tradition of reporting the news. Recently Ken broadcast a series of reports and commentaries from the Little Rock front as he covered the ins and outs of the "Faubus Fracas."

1947 Secretary, Kenneth M. Schubert
54 Aubrey Road
Upper Montclair, N. J.

Jackie Clarke served as chairman of the schools unit of the Portland United Fund drive. His division won the president's cup for exceeding its quota by the largest percentage.

Bob Morrell of the Brunswick Coal and Lumber Company was elected a director of the Maine Retail Lumber Dealers Association at its annual meeting at Poland Spring in September.

Dick Whittemore, who recently returned from the Yale School of Alcoholic Studies, is in charge of a new, full-time, state-operated counseling center for alcoholics which has been opened in Brewer. Dick has made a valiant fight from an attack of paralytic polio which he suffered in 1950. He first became interested in alcoholism as a public health problem when he was serving as a dispatcher for the Bangor Police Department several years ago. Dick and Juliette have three children: James, 19, who is a freshman at the University of Maine, Stewart, 15, and Laura Lee, 13.

1948 Secretary, C. Cabot Easton
10 Boody Street
Brunswick

Plans for the Gigantic Tenth Reunion are going forward in good order. The Reunion Committee headed by Bert Moore, is hard at work, organizing the Tenth. Questionnaires in the form of a Class Survey have been sent to all classmates of good address, and the replies are pouring in. (Over 70 replies had been received by the middle of November!)

One member of 1948 wrote recently, "Among other things, the class survey questionnaire made me review some rather vital questions in my own mind, and I am sure it was similarly received by others. Responses should be many to this and will further impress on the classmates' minds that this is a well organized and serious attempt by us to get a reunion under way, but even more important to revitalize our relationship with the College."

Members of the Tenth Reunion Committee held their second meeting in Sills Hall on November 2, the morning of the Bates game. Under the leadership of Chairman Bert Moore, the Committee hammered out decisions on several important phases of our reunion next June, including plans for the outing and banquet, housing, amount of assessment, promotion, transportation, and refreshments. A letter with details of the decisions was mailed to all class members during November.

Class members who have not yet returned the postcard enclosed with Bert Moore's class letter of October 7 are asked to do so as soon as possible, indicating whether or not they expect to be able to attend the reunion (Thursday, June 12, through Saturday, June 14).

All plans are now well under way, and it looks like a bang-up Tenth! We hope to see you there.

Don Bloomberg is engaged to Miss Mollie Eisenstein of Washington, D. C.

Cab Easton has become engaged to Miss Ruby Irene Manter of Oakland. A graduate of Mount Ida Junior College in Newton, Mass., she is completing her senior year at Boston University, where she is majoring in biology. Cab is Administrative Assistant to the Vice President at Bowdoin. A June wedding is planned.

Cab has begun giving a series of lectures built around his large collection of color slides. He offers two different topics, "European Adventures" and "Japanese Jaunts," and is prepared to present either of these to Maine audiences in consideration of a modest fee. On October 2 he delivered his Japanese talk to a group of 200 sorority girls at Colby College (a difficult task), and he gave the same lecture to a group of 600 students at a Morse High School assembly in Bath on December 6.

Charles and Lorraine Erickson are the proud parents of a new son, who was born on October 18.

Herb Gillman and Don Strong have enlarged their Bowdoin Record Shop with the addition of a hi-fi room. The increased floor space has allowed the enterprising proprietors to increase their stock and display of records in all speeds and categories, as well as phonographs, radios, and sound reproducing equipment.

Herb and Dory Gillman are the proud parents of a new son, Stephen Thomas Gillman, who was born on November 3 in Brunswick. The Gillmans now have two boys and two girls.

Pete Grant wrote recently, "A second daughter, Elizabeth Campbell Grant, joined our family on October 21, 1957. Our first, Sarah Alton Grant, will be three in December. Am still in real estate and insurance with Lacombe Agency in Maplewood, N. J."

Don Strong is expanding his business interests in Brunswick. In November he purchased the Harriet Beecher Stowe House on Federal Street from Mrs. Mary Baxter White, wife of Bruce White '22. Extensive remodeling is under way, which Don hopes to have completed in January. The renovations and improvements include the alteration of the present dining room, the addition of a private dining room, the conversion of the old stable into a new public dining room, and the addition of several sleeping rooms to the 25 which formerly existed.

1949 Secretary, Ira Pitcher
327 Court Street
Auburn

Eric Aikens has become engaged to Miss Virginia Leonard of Brockton, Mass.

Dick and Bobby Colburn are the happy, proud parents of a new daughter, Susan Ann. Their second child, she was born on September 20.

Dave Crowell, who resigned recently as associate editor of the Brunswick Record, has joined the staff of N. W. Ayer and Son, Inc., in Philadelphia as a plans-merchandising specialist. He is living in the Mayflower Apartments (L-3), 922 Montgomery Avenue, Bryn Mawr, Pa. He says that he misses Brunswick, but commuting on the Paoli Local is not too bad, and the job looks excellent.

The Reverend Bill Davis, of the Episcopal Church of the Advent in Spartanburg, S. C., represented Bowdoin at the inauguration of Oliver Cromwell Carmichael jr. as President of Converse College on December 6.

Dick Frye, formerly a member of the faculty of Emerson College, has been appointed membership and program director of the Lynn (Mass.) Y.M.C.A.

The Reverend Sam Hale was officially installed as vicar of St. John's Episcopal Church in Athol, Mass., on September 27. Sam began his new duties September 1st after having completed a year of graduate work at General Theological Seminary. The Hales now have four youngsters — but the editors don't know, at this writing, how many of them are prospective Bowdoinites!

Jim Keefe has been named Product Manager of the Sodasorb Department, Dewey and Almy Chemical Company.

Bill Lacey recently said, "Still writing TV copy for Young and Rubicam in New York. Jan and I were blessed with our second son, Thomas Mitchell Lacey, on March 14."

Dr. Raymond Lebel and his wife, Jeanne, are the proud parents of a new daughter, Vicki Jane, who was born on October 5.

The Bob Lees are the proud parents of a new son, Daniel, born September 17.

George Paradis, Publicity Director of the United Fund (Portland), has been elected to the Board of Managers of the Portland Society of Art.

Bill Wadman was named Program Manager for WGAN-TV in Portland on October 4. Still a popular weather broadcaster, Bill has been with the station since it was first organized.

1950 Secretary, Howard C. Reiche jr.
20 Olive Road
South Portland 7

Dwight Adams is now selling insurance for the Provident Mutual Life Insurance Company. His home address is 47 Wilton Lane, Cape Elizabeth.

Dr. Earland Briggs has opened an office for the general practice of dentistry at 1 Spring Street in Marion, Mass. Earland and Jean have a new daughter, Jennifer Ann, who was born on September 6.

Dr. Joe Britton is serving with the Navy at the Chelsea Naval Hospital in Chelsea, Mass.

Cornelius Darcy was married on September 7 to Miss Eleanor Henriette Starr of Greenwich, Conn. The new Mrs. Darcy is a graduate of the Shipley School and Smith College and also attended the Institut Universitaire de Hautes Etudes Internationales in Geneva and the University of Geneva. Connie Karvonides and Walt Mather were ushers at the wedding.

The Darcys are now living at 135 East 79th Street, New York 21, N. Y., and Cornelius is doing graduate work at Columbia University.

Jim and Peggy Donan have a daughter, Cindy, who was born in September.

Charlie and Dordy Freeman are the proud parents of another son. Charlie has just been elected Secretary-Treasurer of the Bowdoin Club of Cleveland and is running for the school board in his suburb, Rocky River.

Dick Haskell has been appointed advertising sales manager for Sports Illustrated in the New England area.

Mert and Harriet Henry spent some time in early autumn enjoying a Maine vacation in the Brunswick area. While they were here, they made several visits to the campus. Mert spoke before the first fall meeting of the Political Forum on October 10. His remarks, many of which were "off the record," were based on his experiences as Executive Secretary to Maine's Senator Frederick Payne.

Province and Eleanor Henry have bought a house in the San Francisco area, where they are raising their young daughter and escaping astronomical rental fees. Province is working at a nearby naval base, but the exact nature of his endeavors is a well-guarded secret!

In writing of his new home, Province says, "Since we bought this house I have become a great garden enthusiast — something I never really thought would become of me. It is lots of fun to garden in California if one has a good water supply, lots of insecticides, and lots of skill in trapping these ubiquitous pocket gophers which love nothing better than to raise their dirt mounds wherever one has his best patch of lawn or bed of flowers. They are smart too — in my opinion about twice as sharp as an educated rat, and that's something. I fell back on my pre-war ratting skills and have accounted for 28 of the critters since I came here, although I must confess that I have caught nearly all of them in the field next door. For once I agree with the old MacArthur notion that one should pursue one's enemy beyond one's borders and into the 'privileged sanctuary.' The soil here is very fertile, and the San Francisco Bay area is one of the finest places one can imagine in which to point with pride to that most bourgeois of accomplishments — a startlingly green and lovely lawn (without gophers or slugs, of course!). One seldom knows heat here, and except for the fog and the winter rainy season, it is a wonderful and invigorating climate."

Wolcott Hokanson, Assistant Bursar at Bowdoin, has been serving as chairman of the joint Boy and Girl Scout appeal for funds in the Brunswick-Topsham area.

Lee Hughes has joined the Portland insurance agency of Morse, Payson, and Noyes as a member of the engineering and sales staff. Formerly he was an inspector with the New England Fire Insurance Rating Association.

Tom Johnston has been promoted to Assistant Trust Officer of the Cleveland Trust Company in Cleveland, Ohio. Promoted in September, he previously was a trust representative in the estate planning division, a position he had held since joining the bank in 1956. Tom is a member of the Life Underwriters and Trust Officers Council of Cleveland, the Cleveland Association of Estate Analysts, and the City Club.

Bob Jorgensen was married to the former Miss Lillian Jean Barrett on September 12 in Kansas City, Mo. They are living at 306 East 48th Street in Kansas City.

Jerry McCarty, loyal, persistent, and humorous class agent for the Class of 1950, received recognition of his position as leader of his decade group in the 1956-57 Alumni Fund. At the On-Campus Conference of Directors and Agents of the Fund, held October 4 and 5, he received one of the five specially inscribed certificates that were presented to the leaders of the decade groups in last year's Fund.

Fred Malone is working in Denver, Colo., as an engineer for the Glenn Martin Company. His address is 2502 South Lafayette Street, Denver 10.

Walker Merrill has been named an assistant treasurer of the Second Bank-State Street Trust Company in Boston.

John Mullane has been elected Convener and Council Member for the Bowdoin Club of San Francisco.

Chug and Molly Payne are working to complete their camp in the Maine woods. A real bona fide log cabin, it is located on Baker Point, a promontory which stretches into beautiful Moosehead Lake. Our reporter tells us that it is a marvel of engineering and construction which is rapidly nearing completion. ("Free loaders" who don't make arrangements in advance will either have to walk through the woods or swim across the lake. There are no roads!)

shiny new Porsche has replaced the Austin-Healy in his Taft School garage.

Don Steele has left the Emerson School to teach English in New Canaan, Conn.

Bill Webster is the new Secretary-Treasurer of the Kennebec Bowdoin Club.

Bryant and Mary Whipple have a new daughter, Nancy, born on October 4.

Charlie Wilder was married on November 2 to Miss Elinor Gardner Dean of New York City. Phil Wilder jr. '45 was best man for his brother, and the ushers included Bob Akeret and Horace Hildreth jr. '54. The bride, a graduate of the Brearly School and Radcliffe College, is an aide at the Museum of Modern Art in New York City. Charlie, who is currently associated with the New York law firm of White and Case, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Wilder of Brunswick.

Paul Zdanowicz has been appointed head basketball coach at Ursinus College, Collegeville, Pa.

Emerson Zeitler, who has been teaching mathematics at The Peddie School since 1952, visited Brunswick again last summer. A fellow Peddie teacher, Donald Larrimer, a Muhlenburg alumnus, visited him then and was given "the grand tour" of Maine's oldest (and most wonderful) college.

1951 Secretary, Lt. Jules F. Siroy
2970 65th Street
Sacramento 17, Calif.

Herman Allyn, owner and manager of the Dover Stationers, is serving as chairman of the 1957 United Appeal Drive in Dover, N. H.

The Mark Antons are the proud parents of a new son, Mark J. Anton II, born September 16.

Bill Arnold was married on October 8 to Miss Joan Mary Williams of Augusta, a graduate of Lasell Junior College, who has been appointment secretary to Governor Muskie H'57. After the ceremony in Charlottesville, Va., at which Albert Lilley '54 served as best man, the couple left for a honeymoon trip to Jamaica, B. W. I. They have now moved into their new home at 53 Johnson Heights in Waterville.

Bill, formerly Secretary-Treasurer, is now the Vice President of the Kennebec Bowdoin Club.

Phil Bird, attorney, alderman, and Chairman of the Waterville World Affairs Council, has been named to head a major section of the Community Chest Drive in Waterville.

Bob Beal has resumed his law studies at the Boston University Law School.

Dave Dickson has become engaged to Miss Harriet Irvine of Harrisburg, Pa., a graduate of Florida State University. Dave has been practicing law in Berwick, Pa., but he plans to re-locate in Denver, Colo.

Pete and Francoise Fay have left the humdrum academic life of classroom teaching for another European junket. Writing from Spain in early autumn, Pete said, "Finally decided to throw off the yoke of our narrowing existence in New England. We're over here till the money runs out. Frivolous, eh wot? Crossed to Lisbon via Azores by Portuguese freighter. A wonderful trip. Off to Paris, then Yugoslavia, and???" (We hope they don't try to hack-saw their way through the Iron Curtain!)

Phil Glidden has become engaged to Miss Joanna Ashe Williams of Newton Centre, Mass., an alumna of the New England Conservatory of Music.

Ben Haywood has become associated with Mr. Lee C. Robinson in the practice of law in Miami, Fla. His business address is 432 Pan American Bank Building, Miami.

Bill and Ruth Houston are the proud, happy parents of a new son, William M. Houston jr.

Bill Ingraham was married on September 14 to Miss Marion Ronwyn McLennan in Lindsay, Ontario. The Ingrahams are living at 85 Lowther Avenue in Toronto.

The Reverend Don Mathison wrote from Vermont in early autumn, "I am looking forward to beginning my new work as Minister of Christian Education in the First Church of Christ (Congregational) in West Hartford, Conn. I will be working with a wonderful staff, including Rev. John Webster, who will be remembered for his part in our Religious Forums at Bowdoin, and Gordon W. Stearns '54. I will be in West Hartford around the first of November."

Ray Rutan, who was acting director of dramatics at Bowdoin the past two years, during Professor Quinby's sabbatical and leave of absence, is the dedicatee of the Masque and Gown's 55th season. Ray and his wife, Dorothy, are now in Tokyo, where he is working as a research fellow in the Faculty of Literature at Waseda University.

Barclay Shepard was elected by his classmates at the Tufts Medical School to be their delegate to the Annual Convention of the American College of Surgeons which met at Atlantic City in October.

Hugh Ware was married to Miss Joan Ruve Worral of Birkenhead, Auckland, New Zealand, on September 28 in Cohasset, Mass. The bride is an alumna of Druleigh College, N. Z., and the University of Arizona. Hugh is employed as a technical writer for the High Voltage Engineering Corporation of Burlington, Mass. The Wares are living in Manchester-by-the-Sea.

1952 Secretary, Lt. William G. Boggs
1117 Harvard Road
Thornburg
Pittsburg 5, Pa.

John Castner has opened a law office in South Berwick with his uncle, Judge F. Roger Miller.

Chalmers and Elisabeth MacCormick are the proud, happy parents of a daughter, Kathryn Elisabeth MacCormick, who was born on November 7. Elisabeth is the daughter of Professor and Mrs. Fritz Koelln.

John Morrell is engaged to Miss Mary Louise Harris of Scarsdale, N. Y., and Bailey Island, a graduate of Northwestern University, who also holds a master's degree from the Harvard Graduate School of Education. She is currently teaching in Scarsdale. John, a captain in the Marine Corps Reserve, is associated with the Second Bank-State Street Trust Company in Boston. A June wedding is planned.

Ag Pappanikou was one of the speakers at the fall meeting of the Maine Psychological Association, held at Pineland Hospital and Training Center on November 2. In connection with the meeting's central theme, treatment and training of the retarded child as a whole person, Pappy spoke on "An Integrated Education and Training Program Geared to the Patient."

Tom Watkinson was seriously burned on September 21 when his lobster boat caught fire at Rockland. A newspaper report indicated that he was in fair condition at the Knox County General Hospital with first and second degree burns of the face, head, arms, body, and hands. The fire, followed by a series of explosions, injured five others in addition to Tom, and his 36-foot boat sustained an estimated $2,000 in damages.

1953 Secretary, Albert C. K. Chun-Hoon
Philadelphia, Pa.

Your new class notes editor blushes and advances with hat in hand. Through some terrible oversight, on his first round with the numbers, he omitted the Class of 1953 and its 89 contributors which should have appeared in the box score on page 18 of the October Alumnus. Humblest apologies accompany best wishes for 1953 as it continues to climb upwards through the ranks of alumni giving!

Don Agostinelli, who received his M. D. from Yale last June, is now interning in pathology with the Department of Pathology of Yale University. His address is 310 Cedar Street, New Haven, Conn.

Carl Apollonio has purchased the building in which he has operated his book shop for the past few years. Located directly across the street from the First Parish Church, the structure is about 100 years old. Originally it was a stable, later it became a grocery store, and in the early 1930's it housed a clothing store. During part of the 40's it contained a restaurant, and after a period in which it was vacant, it was the home of Palmer's Bookstore, which operated from 1951 until 1955. Older alumni will be interested to know that the attic of the building still contains vestiges of a fraternity meeting hall, including a fraternity altar. Clement Robinson '03 has his law offices on the second floor.

In 1955 a new dual enterprise, named Fairfield's Bookshop and Fairfield's Crafts, was begun by Carl and by Mrs. Fitts. Carl has plans for extensive renovations to take place over the next few years.

Jack Baumer is in India, where he is studying at the University of Madras for his M. A. in philosophy. In a recent letter he wrote, "School is a good deal different from Bowdoin, although I am gradually getting accustomed to its peculiar ways. The only basic fault is the lack of organization. The Indian mind is just not fit on the whole for rules and regulations, and yet they insist on having all the red tape from the West, and yet are not willing to unwind it properly. This goes on as far as I'm concerned far beyond the college administration levels into government, etc." Jack intends to be in India till next March, when he completes his course. Then he hopes to take a long, leisurely seven-weeks homeward cruise on a Swedish freighter. His address is 111-A Poona-mallee High Road, Kilpauk, Madras 10, India.

Oliver Brown, a first lieutenant in the Army Reserve, spent two weeks of annual active duty training at Fort Eustis, Va., at the end of the summer. Following this he returned home to resume his duties as a teacher in the Weston, (Mass.) public schools.

John Curran was married to Miss Barbara Ann Chown in Holden, Mass., on September 7. Morrison Ricker was best man, and William Wyatt was an usher. The bride, who attended schools in England and Switzerland, has been on the staff of British Overseas Airways in Boston.

Dick Goodman has a new address: 211 East 34th Street, New York, N. Y. He is working in educational television with CBS-TV.

A recent communique from Pete Horton: "A small reunion of Bowdoin Alpha Deltis was kicked off recently at the Bowdoin-Amherst game where Long Island's Burch Hindle and his parents and sister, Kay (Smith '58), met with Burlington, Vermont's Paul F. Dudley and his parents, M.I.T.'s Warren Weatherill, and Frank Pagnamenta, who is briefly in this country on vacation from his export business.

"The group spent the weekend at The Old

Ark in Wilmington, Vt. where they joined Portland architect Bob Weatherill '48, his family, and his brother-in-law, Pete Horton, co-innkeeper of The Old Ark.

"Norman Milne '54, who has his own insurance business in Manchester, N. H., has frequently visited the hodge-podge lodge this summer, both by auto and plane. Also Fred Cameron '54 has been a regular visitor to the area, polishing off his preparations for the winter-time taxi service which he operates between Brattleboro and Wilmington for Mt. Snow skiers.

"Horton was recently elected president of the Dover-Wilmington Vacation Council, a business organization of 65 inns and lodges in the Wilmington area which accommodate Mt. Snow skiers in the winter, and Molly Stark Trail tourists, hunters, and vacationists in the summer."

Bruce McGorrill was heard by some listeners to Radio Station WCSH as he gave a "curve-by-curve" account of the Miss America Contest. His reports were recorded at Atlantic City and then broadcast later from the Portland station.

1954 Secretary, Horace A. Hildreth jr.
115 East 90th Street
New York, N. Y.

Phil Cole, who has completed his residence requirements for a Ph.D. at Boston University, has been named instructor of European history and the economic history of the United States at the new University of Maine at Portland (formerly Portland Junior College).

A get-together at the home of Bill George '55.

Jim Cook is at the University of Pennsylvania, where he is completing his final year of graduate work. His address is 243 South 40th Street, Philadelphia.

Moose Friedlander is back on the field, but this time he's "playing" for the Berkshire School, Sheffield, Mass. In September he wrote to the Alumni Office, "I am coaching the line in football, basketball, and tennis. My daughter, age 3½ months, and wife, Maria, are fine."

Bob Goddard, who has already sold several articles to fish and game magazines, entered the Boston University School of Journalism in September.

Bob Grout is working at the Eastman Kodak Company as an industrial engineer. His home address is 83 Gorsline Street, Rochester 13, N. Y.

The Gilbert Guys are the proud parents of a son, David Vincent, born September 1.

Dave Hogan is enrolled as a member of the June 1958 class of the American Institute for Foreign Trade at Phoenix, Ariz. Specializing in Latin America, Dave is taking the school's intensive training course in preparation for a career in American business or government.

Lt. (j.g.) Bob Hurst is engaged to Miss Mary Jane Hutton of Charlottesville, Va., a graduate of the College of William and Mary and a member of Pi Beta Phi Sorority.

Charles Orcutt has become Assistant to the Registrar of the Newark Division of University College, the evening extension of Rutgers University. He is also doing graduate work at Columbia University.

Dave Osgood has become engaged to Miss Judith Piper of Scarborough and Prout's Neck. December 28 is the date set for the wedding, which is to take place in St. Luke's Cathedral in Portland.

Herb Phillips, who received his law degree from Boston University last June, is now enrolled at the New York University Law School, where he is studying for a master's degree in taxation. Earlier this fall he passed the Massachusetts Bar Examinations.

Jim Smith has become engaged to Miss Shirley Ann Jacobson of Chicago, Ill., who was graduated from the University of Louisville in June, 1957. Jim is currently serving with the Army at Fort Knox, Ky.

1955 Secretary, 2nd Lt. Lloyd O. Bishop
Student Officers' Detachment
TOBC No. 39
T-School
Fort Eustis, Va.

Spencer Apollonio is presently a marine biologist and oceanographer on T-3 in the Arctic Ocean.

John Austin is engaged to Miss Mary Haig Lee of Mt. Kisko, N. Y., a graduate of the Emma Willard School, Pine Manor Junior College, and Colby College, who is currently on the staff of New England Deaconess Hospital. John is working toward his B. F. A. degree at the Boston School of the Museum of Fine Arts and at Tufts University. He expects to graduate in June, and he and his fiancée are planning a summer wedding.

Army Reserve 2nd Lt. Bob Bergman completed two weeks of annual active duty training at Fort Eustis, Va., on September 1. He is regularly employed by the First National Bank of Boston.

1st Lt. Wilbur Philbrook applied for a Regular Army Commission under the new policy calling for a major increase of Regular Army Officers. He was integrated under that program at the U. S. Army Transportation Terminal Command, Japan. Wilbur entered the Army in 1955 and since last August has been attached to the Far East Command. Presently he is Chief, Military Customs Clearance Section, Cargo Traffic Division at the Terminal. Wilbur and Ann now have two children, Charlene, 3, and Edward, 2.

Paul Porter, who has just completed a two-year tour of duty as a first lieutenant with the Army, is teaching mathematics and driver education at Houlton High School.

Dave Starkweather wrote in August, "I've finished my two years at Ft. Eustis and have just returned from a great terminal leave trip all over Europe. I start work at Columbia in September on a master's in hospital administration and hope classmates in New York will look me up."

Sharab Tenduf-La has returned to India, where his address is Annandale, Darjeeling, West Bengal.

Jim Williams wrote recently, "Our second child, born on September 26, is a boy — Howard James Williams, III. We are leaving Orleans, France, in two weeks, and we plan to rent an apartment in Braintree, Mass., after my discharge from the Army."

1956 Secretary, Paul G. Kirby
208 Warren Street
Waltham 54, Mass.

Horst Albach visited the campus the weekend of the Trinity game. He is here in the U. S. for a short stay which he explained in a recent communication to the Alumni Office: "Over here for a three-month period of research on Ph.D. in economics at Harvard. Came up to alma mater the weekend of September 28 and enjoyed seeing the campus very much. Stayed in the Deke House: very fine bunch of Brothers. A Maine lobster at Cook's on Bailey Island with Rupe White '55 and wife and Klaus Karlsberg '61 made a lasting impression. Saw Professors Solmitz, Daggett, Koelln, Riley, and Storer. Very delighted to have been able to see them and talk with them."

Horst returned to Germany on October 31 after completing his research in the Harvard Libraries and Library of Congress in Washington, D. C. He is finishing his Ph.D. work at the University of Cologne, which was founded in 1388.

She has been doing work on social cases for the New Jersey State Board of Child Welfare in Morristown, N. J. Art is with the New York advertising agency, Young and Rubicam.

Dietmar Klein is back in Germany, following his extended summer tour of the United States. In late September he wrote, "On our 11,500 mile trip I made about 350 color slides, a substantial part of which I have already shown to six audiences. For one thing, the hospitality aspect of our trip was most fruitful. We made many personal contacts in a comparatively short time, and we also did so many more things than an ordinary tourist would have been able to. The bigness of the American continent and the beauty of the landscape in its various aspects impressed us so much." Dietmar and his travelling companion, Dominique Auzenat, seem to have been most impressed by San Francisco, New Orleans, and the Grand Canyon. In early October Dietmar began his law studies in Freiburg, Germany.

Paul McGoldrick is one of 53 1957 college graduates who have been awarded grants for post graduate study by the Edward John Noble Foundation. He is presently studying at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration.

Faculty

Professor Philip Beam represented Bowdoin at the dinner and meeting celebrating the centennial of the American Institute of Architects (Maine Chapter) which was held at the Cumberland Club in Portland on November 30.

Professor Edwin Benjamin '37 has written an article entitled "The King of Brobdignag and Secrets of State," which appeared in the Journal of the History of Ideas for October, 1957.

Professor Marc Bodine of the Department of Geology was the guest speaker at the fall meeting of the Kennebec Bowdoin Club in Waterville on October 23. In addition to a few remarks about the state of the College, he talked about geology at Bowdoin, past and present, and he concluded his informal speech by discussing the relevance of modern geology and its practices to Maine and its economy.

Professor Herbert Brown was the guest speaker at the annual banquet of the 25 Year Club of the Keyes Fibre Company, held at the Hotel Elmwood in Waterville in late September.

Professor Brown was the principal speaker at the 19th annual convention of the Maine State Credit Union League at Portland on October 5.

Professor Dan Christie '37 has been named a director of the Brunswick Area Student Aid Fund for a three-year term.

President James Coles addressed a group of secondary school science teachers in the Deering High School Auditorium on October 3. The meeting was part of the annual convention of the Maine Teachers' Association. The President's main thesis was that high school students should be encouraged to memorize the basic facts because a memorized knowledge of facts is necessary before one can come to generalizations in science.

President Coles has been elected President of the Pine Tree Society for Crippled Children and Adults.

On October 26 and 27 President and Mrs. Coles entertained President Richard Weigle of St. John's College, Annapolis, Md., and Mr. F. L. Wormald. Mr. Wormald is Assistant to the Executive Director of the Association of American Colleges, and President Weigle is Chairman of the Association's Commission on Liberal Education.

Mr. Stuart Colie, Instructor in Government, represented Bowdoin at a conference which was sponsored by the School of Advanced International Studies of Johns Hopkins University August 26-29. The sessions were held in Washington, D. C., at the Sheraton Park Hotel. "Tensions in the Middle East" was the general topic of the conference.

Mr. Colie also served as Chairman of the United Nations Day Committee for the Town of Brunswick.

Professor Athern Daggett '25 was appointed by Governor Muskie as United Nations Day Chairman for Maine. The special observance of United Nations Day was held October 24.

Professor Daggett addressed the Brunswick Lions Club on September 16. His topic was "Government in Emergency," and it was in observance of Civil Defense Week.

Professor Nathan Dane II '37 was the featured speaker at the special chapel exercise held Saturday, October 5. In honor of its being Fathers' Day at the College, and addressing himself mainly to the many visiting fathers of undergraduates, Dr. Dane spoke movingly on the topic "My Bowdoin Father." Those who are well acquainted with their Bowdoiniana will know that he had reference to Mr. Francis S. Dane of Lexington, Mass., Secretary and prominent member of the Class of 1896.

Since last May Professor Jean Darbelnet has been conducting a bi-monthly column on French usage for Notre Temps, a French-Canadian weekly published in Montreal.

Professor Paul Darling's article "The Influence of Expectations and Liquidity on Dividend Policy" appeared in the June, 1957, issue of the Journal of Political Economy.

New Varsity Basketball Coach Bob Donham was married just before taking up his duties at Bowdoin. The wedding occurred at Seattle, Wash., on October 11. Mrs. Donham is the former Miss Barbara Dean Longpre, a graduate of the University of Washington School of Nursing.

Professor William Geoghegan of the Department of Religion spoke on "Reaction, Revival, and Renewal in Religion" at the opening convocation of Westbrook Junior College on Sunday, September 22. He was introduced by Dean Richard Bond '42, who presided at the occasion.

Professor Geoghegan spoke before a meeting of the Interfaith Forum at the Moulton Union on October 9. He talked on Buddhism, making use of film strips to augment and illustrate his remarks.

Professor LeRoy Greason of the Department of English addressed the Bowdoin Teachers' Club on October 3 at the Cumberland Club in Portland. He talked about some possibilities for a new relationship between the liberal arts college and the secondary school.

On October 17 Professor Greason represented the College at a meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Philadelphia. His informal remarks were enthusiastically received by the 25 or 30 alumni who heard him. Professor Greason talked about current happenings on the campus, as well as some problems which face the teachers of the liberal arts, and concluded by commenting on faculty-alumni relationships.

Professor Emeritus Alfred Gross was the principal speaker at the dedication of a bird sanctuary at Appalachee Shore, Boothbay Harbor, on September 21. The ceremony and the sanctuary were sponsored by the Audubon Society. Following the Society's dinner at Fisherman's Wharf, Professor Gross showed a special color movie, "Eastern Maine Birds," at the Boothbay Congregational Church.

Professor Gross delivered the Mayhew Bird Lecture at the College on October 29. His talk, entitled "Maine Birds," was illustrated by color film. A world-renowned ornithologist and lecturer, Dr. Gross continues to lead an active life which keeps him in close contact with bird lore and bird lovers.

Professor Alton Gustafson of the Department of Biology has recently attended a number of meetings of various scientific societies. He participated in the meetings of the American Society of Limnology and Oceanography which were held at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution at Woods Hole, Mass., September 3-6. From September 9 through 11 he was at the meetings of the Electron Microscope Society of America at M.I.T. He also attended the meetings of the Atlantic Fisheries Biologists in St. Andrews, N. B., Canada, October 18-20.

Eric Gustafson, eldest son of Professor and Mrs. Gustafson, is currently studying economics at the Harvard Graduate School of Arts and Sciences as a Ford Foundation Fellow in Metropolitan Affairs.

Dr. Daniel Hanley '39, Executive Secretary of the Maine Medical Society, gave a report on the progress of the Diabetic Control Drive (to be held in November) before the assembled members of the Maine Pharmaceutical Association at Rockland in mid-September.

Paul Hazelton '42 began his new assignment as Assistant Professor of Education at Bowdoin this fall. His first course offerings are Education 1 (History of Education) and Education 6 (Teaching).

Mrs. Paul Hazelton has been appointed by Governor Muskie to the State Committee on the Problems of the Mentally Retarded.

Jonathan Helmreich, son of Professor and Mrs. Ernst Helmreich, is a senior at Amherst College, where he has been named to the Dean's List.

Professor Myron Jeppesen of the Department of Physics has been elected Vice Chairman of the New England Section of the American Physical Society. During the October 19 meetings of the New England Section of the Society at Bowdoin, he delivered a paper entitled "Detuned Multilayer Films for Mirrors and Filters." (Your notes editor thinks he understands this to have something to do with a similarity of radar waves and optical waves. His confusion results from his having been, at best, a poor biology student!)

Professor Edward Kirkland is a member of the Policyholders Nominating Committee for the Year 1958 of the Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association of America.

Miss Johanna Marie Koelln, daughter of Professor and Mrs. Fritz Koelln, was married on September 20 to Mr. Ferenc Schwanauer of Stuttgart, Germany. The ceremony was performed in New York City at the Christian Community. The bride is a 1957 graduate of Wellesley. Mr. Schwanauer is completing work on his Ph.D. at the Institute of Technology in Stuttgart with the intention of returning to the United States to teach mathematics in a year or two. The couple sailed for Europe on the Queen Mary on October 2.

Miss Sonnhild Koelln, daughter of Professor and Mrs. Koelln, is a freshman at Bard College, where she is majoring in art.

Dr. Reinhard Korgen, Professor of Mathematics, spent much of the summer continuing his work as consultant for the Arthur D. Little Company of Cambridge, Mass. Professor Korgen has been mainly concerned with the North Norway Project, a development enterprise, an attempt to bring additional industries to northern Norway in order to make greater use of the low-cost electric power which is available there. Much of Professor Korgen's work involved interviewing executives and management personnel of various large American concerns, such as U. S. Steel, Olin-Mathieson, and DuPont.

During the spring semester Professor Korgen will be in Denmark, lecturing at the Technical University of Copenhagen. The subject of these lectures will be Operations Research. Following his stay in Copenhagen, Dr. Korgen will travel to northern Norway, where he will spend most of the summer of 1958 prior to his attending the International Congress of Mathematicians in Edinburgh. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Korgen, 10-year-old Kristi, and 6-year-old Anders.

Samuel Ladd jr. '29, Director of the Placement Bureau, attended the Eastern Colleges Personnel Officers Association annual conference at Poland Spring, October 6-9. He also attended the Association of Reserve City Bankers meetings in New York on October 22 and 23.

Professor Noel Little '17, Chairman of the Department of Physics, delivered the post-luncheon address to the James Bowdoin Scholars on October 24 at the Moulton Union.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman London are the proud, happy parents of a son, Scott Franklin London, born on October 25.

Professor Emeritus and Mrs. Thomas Means have returned to Brunswick from a vacation which they spent at Thorne Mountain in Jackson, N. H.

Charles Mergendahl, Lecturer in Mathematics and former Head of the Mathematics Department of Newton High School (Mass.), spent the summer teaching at the Phillips Andover Academy in Andover, Mass. This afforded him his first opportunity actually to use the text, Intermediate Algebra, by Mergendahl and Walters, which he has never before been able to try out.

Professor Stephen Minot attended a meeting of the College English Association at American International College in Springfield, Mass., on October 26.

Professor Merle Moskowitz toured Europe last summer. Dr. Moskowitz attended the International Congress of Psychology in Brussels while he was there.

On October 17 Professor Moskowitz addressed the Huse Parent-Teacher Association in Bath. He spoke on "The Effect of Punishment."

Professor Moskowitz's recent study on time estimation in pigeons has been reported in the new Century Psychology Series book, Schedules of Reinforcement, by C. B. Ferster and B. F. Skinner.

Professor James Moulton of the Biology Department has had another monograph published. Entitled "A Collection of Drawings of Fishes Ascribed to J. P. Kirtland (1793-1877), In the Library of Bowdoin College," it appears as Number 80 of Breviora, the publication of the Museum of Comparative Zoology in Cambridge, Mass.

The College has received a grant from the National Science Foundation to support Professor Moulton's work on the relations of sound to the behavior of fishes.

Dr. Moulton spent two days during October at the Museum of Comparative Zoology, studying the collection of spiny lobsters in connection with an interest in the evolution of a stridulatory mechanism. Ernest Powell '60 is doing drawings for the study.

Professor Norman Munn and his family returned to Brunswick early in September from a summer trip to Australia. Professor Munn gave a lecture at Adelaide University in August. His topic was "Mind in Evolution." In addition to this, Dr. Munn spoke to the Norwood Rotary Club (in South Australia) on "Psychology Put to Work." During his stay in Australia, Professor Munn also visited with psychologists in Melbourne and in Sydney. Young Henry Munn, a student at Phillips Andover, accepted the invitation of a group of young people to speak to them on various aspects of life in the United States.

Mrs. Bela Norton has been chairman of a committee of the Pejepscot Historical Society which has been working on the restoration and refurbishing of various rooms in the Society's building on School Street in Brunswick. Other members of the Bowdoin family who have participated in the work are Professor and Mrs. Burton Taylor, Professor and Mrs. Edwin Benjamin, Mr. and Mrs. John McKenna, Mrs. Seward Marsh, Mrs. Perley Turner, Professor and Mrs. Athern Daggett, Vice President Bela Norton, and Cab Easton '48.

Professor George Quinby '23 spoke at the monthly meeting of the Community Little Theater Association in Lewiston on October 8.

In May Professor Thomas Riley spoke to the Brunswick Teachers' Association. He also gave talks to the Couples' Club of the First Parish Church in September and to the Insurance Women of Maine in November.

Psychology Professor David Russell has been appointed by Governor Muskie to the State Committee on Mental Health.

Coach Frank Sabasteanski was elected President of the Maine Association of the Amateur Athletic Union at the annual meeting held in Brunswick on September 15.

Professor Carl Schmalz, Curator of the Walker Art Museum, has been elected to the Board of Managers of the Portland Society of Art.

On September 5 Professor Schmalz delivered a lecture on Winslow Homer to a Members' Night audience at the Portland Art Museum. He delivered another lecture to the Fraternity Club of Portland on November 18. Mr. Schmalz attended the meetings of the New England Council of the American Association of Museums on October 4 and 5 in Lincoln, Mass.

Director of Admissions Hubert Shaw attended a joint conference of college directors of admissions and the Massachusetts Secondary Principals Association at Tufts University on October 4.

Mr. Shaw was the speaker at the annual meeting of the Brunswick Area Student Aid Fund on October 15, at the Brunswick High School.

Walter Szumowski, Manager of the Moulton Union Bookstore, attended the Regional Meeting of College Bookstore Managers at the University of Massachusetts on October 24 and 25.

Professor Clement Vose on September 3 and 4 attended the meeting of thirty State Directors of the Citizenship Clearing House at the Law Center at New York University. He is CCH Director for Maine.

On September 6 and 7 Dr. Vose served as chairman of two panels on the Supreme Court and race relations at the annual meeting of the American Political Science Association in New York.

During the summer Professor Vose continued his study of the political careers of state legislators in Maine as part of a comparative study under a grant from the Social Science Research Council.

Varsity Football Coach (and State Representative) Adam Walsh has been named by Governor Muskie to the Maine Highway Safety Committee.

Adam was the principal speaker at the fall meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Portland on October 24. In a vigorous talk that was both informative and amusing, he once again pleased an audience which had turned out to greet him, listen to him, and view his movies. (On the eve of a heart-breaking loss to Colby, he showed wide-angle movies of Bowdoin's heartwarming victory over Trinity which had occurred several weeks earlier in the season.)

Andre Warren, Assistant Superintendent of Grounds and Buildings, continues to pursue his two hobbies, sailboating and painting (both in oils and watercolors). Recently two of Mr. Warren's paintings received the first and second prizes at the Five Islands Art Show.

Mrs. William Whiteside, whose husband teaches history at Bowdoin, is serving as President of the Parent-Teachers Association of the Longfellow School in Brunswick.

Professor William Whiteside of the Department of History attended the annual meeting of the New England American Studies Association at Brown University on October 12 and 13. He has been serving for two years as a member of the Committee on American Studies Programs of the National American Studies Association, being responsible primarily for upstate New York and northern New England. Since the Bowdoin Self Study authorized interdepartmental majors, including American Studies, and since several faculty members at Bowdoin are interested in establishing such a major, this survey has been useful in giving some understanding of the strong and weak features of such programs in operation at other colleges and universities.

Alumni Fund Chairman Jotham D. Pierce '39 directs attention to the advertisement on the next page. A part of the program of the Council for Financial Aid to Education, this ad points up clearly the nonsense which our Fund Directors aim to stop at Bowdoin. Contributions to our Alumni Fund help that effort.

On November 6 Professor Whiteside delivered an evening lecture at the Walker Art Building. Entitled "View from a Brownstone Turret: A Social Historian's Analysis of Architecture during the Golden Age," it was part of the College's observance of National Art Week. The speaker's purpose was to consider architecture as a reflection of cultural values. Illustrated by means of color slides and material shown through an opaque projector, the talk set forth the idea that historians are too quick to denounce the architecture of the post-Civil War generation, and that in their denunciation they have not always understood it. The lecture represented one aspect of Professor Whiteside's research into the social and the cultural history of the United States during the late 19th century.

Mr. Philip Wilder '23, Assistant to the President, attended the "Combined Plan College Conference" in early October. Meeting at Columbia University's Harriman Campus in Harriman, N. Y., the participants took as their main theme "Learning in a Materialistic Culture." The Combined Plan, started by Columbia in 1951, involves 42 participating liberal arts colleges and universities. Students begin their higher education with three years of liberal arts studies at their individual colleges, followed by two years of engineering studies at Columbia. Upon graduation at the end of five years, the participating student receives both a bachelor of arts degree and a bachelor of science degree.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilder were in New York City on November 2 for the wedding of their son, Charles W. Wilder '50, to Miss Elinor Gardner Dean. Their older son, Philip S. Wilder jr. '45, served as best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilder were in Hartford, Conn., October 21 and 22, at which time Mr. Wilder represented Bowdoin at the New England Regional Conference on Community Services to Foreign Leaders and Specialists. On the evening of October 22 the Wilders met a group of Bowdoin alumni in the home of local club president Dr. Benjamin Whitcomb '30. To this informal meeting of the executive committee of the Connecticut Bowdoin Club Mr. Wilder brought the latest news of the College and some helpful advice as the committee formulated plans for future club activities.

Former Faculty

Professor E. Parker Johnson of the Psychology Department of Colby College is the Conference of State Psychological Associations representative for the Maine Psychological Association.

Admiral Donald MacMillan, formerly Professor of Anthropology, later Professor of Ethnography, and, in 1932-33, Visiting Professor of Anthropology on the Tallman Foundation, returned to the College for another of his famous lectures on October 10. Speaking to a delighted audience that virtually overflowed the confines of the Pickard Theater, the Admiral held forth for more than two hours in his usual exciting, vigorous manner.

His talk was illustrated by thousands of feet of beautiful color movies. A breath-taking panorama of polar bears, icebergs, Eskimos, Arctic birds, wild flowers, mammoth glaciers, and the like unfolded itself before the spectators. Few in his audience, who didn't already know it, would have thought that the energetic lecturer lacked only a month of his 83rd birthday, November 10! He looks forward to another Arctic voyage on the schooner Bowdoin, and the College community looks forward to the next time he returns to entertain and inform us. The editors find that "going North with Cap'n Mac" — via the movie screen and the lecture platform — serves his purpose: "to learn something" — in a most pleasant fashion.

Former colleagues and students of Dr. Robert W. Rafuse, visiting lecturer at Bowdoin in 1948-49, will be saddened to learn of his death in October at Endicott, N. Y. Professor of Political Science at Harpur College of the State University of New York, Dr. Rafuse was fifty years old at the time of his death.

Medical School

1899 Friends and classmates extend their deep sympathy to Dr. Daniel Wentworth, whose wife, Florence Anita Wentworth, died in Eliot on October 8.

1908 Classmates and friends will grieve to learn of the death of Dr. Henry Abbott.

1915 Dr. Elton Blaisdell attended the 33rd annual meeting of the American Heart Association in Chicago, October 25-29, as one of seven doctors representing the State of Maine.

1919 Dr. Eugene Drake was one of seven Maine doctors representing the state at the American Heart Association's 33rd annual meeting in Chicago, October 25-29.

Honorary

1947 President Arthur Hauck of the University of Maine has been named a member of the Maine Committee on Educational Television.

1949 Dr. James R. Killian, President of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has been named "Special Assistant to the President (of the U.S.) for Science and Technology." His main job will be to put new drive into the nation's entire scientific defense program.

1952 Dr. Varaztad Kazanjian was honored on October 6 by the New England Society of Oral Surgeons at its annual fall meeting at the Harvard Club. Dr. Kazanjian, who was cited for his outstanding contributions to the field of oral surgery, delivered a technical paper at the meeting.

Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, who is a member of the Senate Armed Forces Committee, visited the Brunswick Naval Air Station on Friday, September 13. Superstitions notwithstanding, the senator took a complete guided tour of the base, following which she made a guided aerial inspection in a helicopter.

It's time to stop this nonsense

From every college in the nation comes the warning, "We're losing good professors faster than we can find them, yet our classrooms are growing more crowded each year. What will be the effect on our country, and on its citizens, if this trend continues?"

The warning has sound basis. Low salaries—characteristic in teaching—are driving gifted instructors and professors into other fields, and are discouraging promising young people from taking up academic careers. Classrooms and laboratories are overflowing now with students, and yet applications are expected to double in the next 10 years.

It's amazing that a nation such as ours, strengthened and enriched by our institutions of higher learning, should allow anything to threaten these wellsprings of our progress.

It's time to stop this nonsense.

In a very real sense, our personal and national well-being depends on the quality of learning nourished and transmitted by our colleges and universities. They need the help of all who love freedom, all who hope for our continued advancement in science, in statesmanship, in the better things of life. And they need it now!

BOWDOIN
ALUMNUS FEBRUARY 1958

Miller

LAST FALL a report on admissions was sent to more than two hundred alumni who have been interested in and working with the Admissions Office. This article will contain excerpts from that newsletter plus a resume of plans for the Class of 1962. We trust that this information will be interesting to alumni generally and that you will not hesitate to call on the Admissions Office about prospective students or for more information.

Applications

Last April nearly 1,200 applications were examined in selecting the Class of 1961. Of this number more than 200 candidates were clearly unqualified on the basis of poor grades, low test scores, deficiencies in the program of courses, and little promise on personal grounds. From the approximately 1,000 remaining for serious consideration, 380 were chosen for admission. Because prospective candidates often file several applications and are usually admitted to a number of receiving aid amounting to nearly $50,000. These awards currently range from $400 to $1,200, although these limits are not fixed, and are renewable each year if conditions of need persist and if a standard of grades set by the Faculty Committee on Student Aid is maintained. Available scholarships include: State of Maine 4; Bowdoin 4; Bowdoin Fathers' Association 2; Alumni Fund about 25; General Motors Corporation, Union Carbide Corporation, Adriel U. Bird, Mary Decrow Dana, John Johnston, Wayne Sibley, and Delaware 1 each. Awards are also made to freshmen from the Leighton, Moore, and Stetson Scholarship Funds. There are also two National Merit Scholarship winners in the freshman class. Starting next fall the College will participate in the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation Scholarship Program and will select two members of the Class of 1962 to receive these awards.

These scholarships are not tied to campus jobs in any way, and each recipient is free to use campus employment to

Sub-Freshman Weekends

It is becoming increasingly difficult to plan for sub-freshman weekends where the College sponsors a formal program for secondary school boys. So much visiting is now done by boys and their parents that each weekend almost becomes a sub-freshman weekend. It is preferable for a boy to visit Bowdoin when some regular activity is going on so that he may obtain as fair and normal a view of the College as possible; but with school activities, College Board testing dates, school and college examinations, house parties, and so forth, there is sometimes a problem in finding a suitable time for entertaining a prospect at the College.

As a result we encourage visiting as early in the year as possible — at a time that is convenient for the sub-freshman, preferably when the College is in session, and especially before decisions on admissions are made in April. This last, of course, is to permit the visit to have the maximum effect on a boy's decision to attend Bowdoin.

The undergraduates are extremely cooperative and do an excellent job of housing, dining, and entertaining sub-freshmen. They take their guests to classes and to campus activities and introduce them to faculty members; and especially they present enthusiastic views about being at Bowdoin.

Counselling Alumni Sons

In these days of general confusion about "admission to college," Bowdoin wishes to offer its facilities to alumni who are making plans for their sons to attend college. The Admissions Office staff encourages any alumnus to discuss with us any aspect of planning for college so that we may provide the maximum assistance to him and his son. Such discussion may well include secondary school courses, financing college expenses, or any other important item. Especially we want to talk about admission with alumni and their sons who are candidates, so that we may explain fully the bases for our decisions. We are naturally pleased when we can make a favorable decision, but it is inevitable that some rejections must result when the total record falls short of meeting the standards set by the faculty. In either case a full and frank discussion, we feel, will be in the boy's best interests. We earnestly want to assist in any way possible, so please feel free to call on us.

Another Look At Admissions Information and an Invitation

By Hubert S. Shaw '36

Director of Admissions

colleges, the 380 shrank to 193 freshmen who finally registered in September. This illustrates the problem of over-admitting which is common among colleges today.

Applications for 1958 (as of the middle of January) were running slightly ahead of the number a year ago in spite of the charge of a ten-dollar application fee. This fee is not refundable but will be credited on the term bill of a successful candidate who registers in the fall. No particular change in procedure has been instituted, and it is expected that Certificates of Admission and awards of scholarships will be mailed near the end of April.

Inquiries are made regularly about notifying candidates of their standing in advance of the April date of admission. This year, as well as in recent years, many applicants are being assured of admission (and even scholarship aid) as soon as the qualifying factors are known. Such early commitments to desirable candidates remove the necessity for filing more than one application. In other cases information is too scanty or the calibre of the candidate is not strong enough to permit an early decision.

Scholarships for Freshmen

This year fifty-three freshmen are supplement his resources to meet the expenses of college. The student payroll totals about $50,000 each year. The loan funds amount to more than $40,000, and students enrolled in the advanced R.O.T.C. program receive subsistence pay totaling about $30,000.

Alumni Activity

Valuable alumni assistance has been continued this year, both by individual alumni and by alumni clubs. Many letters of recommendation for boys who have already applied and letters suggesting names of prospective applicants have been gratefully received. In the cases of interested and seemingly well-qualified boys, individual alumni are arranging for visits to the campus. When these visits are planned in advance, undergraduates are called to serve as hosts and guides so that undergraduate views are also available to sub-freshmen.

Alumni clubs have also been active in having boys attend meetings where they can meet alumni and representatives from the College. Such meetings have already been held this year in Boston, Cleveland, Albany, Worcester, and Waterville; and similar plans are developing for Philadelphia and Providence, plus additional meetings in the area surrounding Boston.

This article is another in the informal series on admissions which alumni recall having seen in previous issues of the ALUMNUS. Additional articles will appear in the future. Alumni with suggestions for specific subjects which might be covered in this series may write either to the Editor or to the Director of Admissions.

AND GLADLY TECHE

Professor and Mrs. Henry Johnson. Professor and Mrs. Stanley Perkins Chase. The names of these honored Bowdoin people, long known and cherished by hundreds of Bowdoin men, will live on forever as the result of still another generous action in a long series of generosities, an action in which all four shared.

At the annual dinner of the New York Bowdoin Club on January 24, President Coles announced that the College is receiving more than $275,000 from "two devoted Bowdoin families." Through the Henry Johnson Trust there has come a sum of more than $275,000 for the endowment of a Professorship of Art and Archaeology. Through the bequest of Mrs. Chase, who died last November 29, there will come more than another $100,000, part of which is for the support of the Museum of Fine Arts, while the rest is unrestricted.

Together the Johnson and Chase gifts total nearly 70% more than Bowdoin ever paid these men in salary. Professor Johnson, affectionately and widely known as "Frenchy," was a member of the faculty for forty-one years, from 1877 until his sudden death in 1918. His son-in-law, Professor Chase, who married Helen Johnson in 1912, taught courses in Chaucer, Shakespeare, and English literature from 1925 until he died in 1951.

To their warm, fond memories of the Johnsons and the Chases, Bowdoin men will now add this remarkable story of devotion to teaching and to the College, of portraying in real life the Biblical parable of the talents. Older alumni are always talking about Frenchy Johnson and his wonderful classes. Mrs. Johnson, who lived until 1949, will be remembered not only by older Bowdoin men but also by younger alumni, particularly those who attended the Zeta Psi diamond jubilee initiation banquet at which she became the only woman in the history of the Lambda Chapter to be present at the traditional closing ceremony.

Chaucer classes in the Chase Barn Chamber, delightful at the time, have become even more delightful in retrospect. The conversation, the food, the warm human interest, the friendly advice and concern, all gladly and generously given by Helen and Stanley Chase, formed a unique contribution to a Bowdoin education.

Stanley Chase would never approve of altering any Chaucerian line, but just this once, on behalf of all of us, may we take that liberty and say of these four, in appreciation and gratitude for everything, but most of all for themselves,

"Gladly wolde they lerne, and gladly teche."

FROM THE CHAIRMAN OF THE ALUMNI FUND

Russia's recent scientific achievements have made the American people re-examine their educational system with a serious concern not seen before. For years we supposed that ours was the best educational system simply because we had a lower percentage of illiteracy and a higher percentage of students in colleges than any other nation.

Since Sputnik, however, we have come to compare the Russian and American systems. Among the significant differences is the fact that in Russia a professor is paid a salary comparable with what he could earn in business. In this country teachers have always been paid less than they might have earned elsewhere but, up until the last decade, the spread wasn't so great and the teaching profession had certain advantages which to some extent offset this disparity in pay. Today, however, the financial sacrifice is so large that no young man can afford to teach if he wants to raise his family with what are considered minimum standards.

Unless the situation is changed, and changed substantially for the better, American colleges will become weaker rather than stronger. The day is gone when we can have first rate professors at second rate pay. We must either increase our pay scale or take the consequences.

The problem is not unique with Bowdoin. Every college in the country is facing it. Tuition increases will make possible some of the necessary pay increases but, as in so many other phases of administration, colleges must rely on their loyal alumni to implement the balance of the program. Let thinking Americans not forget that colleges and universities are becoming more and more our first line of defense.

Our part in this vital situation is to make sure that our own college is kept strong. And the best avenue for the channeling of our support is the Alumni Fund.

Every contribution to the Alumni Fund is at once:

- a gift in support of Bowdoin,
- a share in the job which American higher education must do,
- and the premium on some insurance covering our own freedoms and those of our youngsters.

Consider, long and thoughtfully, whether a $5 or $10 Alumni Fund contribution is a fair share of the price of the job to be done.

Jonathan D. Pierce

Bowdoin Plan students Emile Jurgens from The Netherlands and Peter Blattner from Switzerland at Oak Creek Canyon, 30 miles south of Flagstaff, Arizona, on their way across the United States on a hitchhiking tour last summer.

Since the Bowdoin Plan was inaugurated in the spring of 1947, some ninety-six different foreign students have benefited from its provisions, some for one year, some for as many as four. These students, who have come from twenty-seven countries, have gone back to their native lands as ambassadors of good will, for both Bowdoin and the United States. They also leave behind them, among Bowdoin students and faculty members as well as hundreds of other people with whom they have come in contact, a much better understanding of other nations and other peoples.

Every Day Was A New One

From time to time, to remind alumni of this two-way exchange of international good-will and understanding, begun by Joe Wheeler '48 more than ten years ago, the ALUMNUS prints parts of letters written by former Bowdoin Plan students who have returned to their own countries.

In this issue, we reprint sections of two long letters. The first was written by Johannes (John) Kjoerven of Oslo, Norway, who spent last year at the College and was graduated in June, cum laude, with Honors in English. Sponsored by Psi Upsilon Fraternity, he also won the Pray English Literature Prize.

Mr. Kjoerven wrote to President Coles last October as follows:

"In my preliminary application for a scholarship America was characterized as an 'enigma.' Even if no original and revolutionary conclusion has been drawn, it is my own, and can therefore be applied in the days to come. (Little Rock makes me angry and sympathetic, but less intolerant!) As mentioned before, a sense of proportion has been established. The wealth, the incomparable size of everything, the amazing activity in all fields of life, and my notion that there are potential reservoirs, both material and cultural, beneath that thin veneer of easygoing habits and pleasant schedules, overwhelm me. Just this factor is the core towards which most of my interests turn. There was such a 'buzz' from life itself, not only from busy, marching feet, but also from the exploring work of brains. I had not expected, and was very surprised to find that America was concerned with what I might call the rediscovery of the essentials of our culture. In Europe these essentials are vaguely felt, but not thought. And because America is thoroughly un-European, the contrasts of the milieu were so stimulating. To me it is a wonderful paradox that I conceived this tradition more clearly in the new world. And then every day was a new one, changing and full of experiment and hope. This excluded that depressing monotony of life which belongs to a tradition felt but not thought and lived in.

"May I submit that a sojourn abroad for a year is personally educating, even if one does not change into a prophet afterwards? Nowadays world problems are hardly solved only through exchange programs, but a year away from home may definitely change that climate of opinion in which I move and where I happen to meet other people.

"Then, less rationally speaking (I have been far too serious, too) I am fascinated by the roaring and restless U.S. and enchanted by Yellowstone's wild beauty as well as by the serene peace of New England; but finally most fond of Bowdoin because it could affect me this much!

"At present I am studying Latin at the University of Oslo in order to pass the exam before Christmas; then it is history for two semesters before I return to Anglo-American literature. The aim is to get the final degree before 1960. As to plans for the future any kind of international work has a certain appeal.

"Then receive my deepest thanks, and impart it to all those whom it might concern. I wish the president all good luck as the head of Bowdoin. I am very happy to keep in touch with my dear alma mater, and very grateful to be an alumnus."

Also at Bowdoin last year was Emile R. J. M. Jurgens of Nijmegen in The Netherlands, who was sponsored by Delta Sigma Fraternity. Last fall he wrote some of his impressions of Bowdoin and the United States to Mr. Philip S. Wilder '23, who has been advisor to Bowdoin Plan students since Joe Wheeler's idea was first put into practice. Mr. Jurgens wrote his appreciation in these words:

"As you can imagine, it was a tremendous experience for me to live for one year in a country about which there is so much talk in Europe, and I believe I learned much more by participating in this 'American life' than would ever be possible by the reading of books.

"Last year's study-experience at Bowdoin proved to be extremely valuable. It was of great significance for me to get a good insight in the great history of your country and the working of your government, and all this helps me to understand America today.

"I never felt alone in your country, although my home was at the other side of the Atlantic. I found in your vast country many things that surprised me. The hospitality I found at Bowdoin and all over the United States during my travel experiences was amazing.

"Last June 8th was a day of strong feelings. I left Bowdoin and Brunswick and from then I knew I had to live on only with memories of that good time I was able to spend there thanks to the hospitality of Bowdoin and Delta Sigma! I can assure you that these memories are strong enough to last for many years to come!"

THE CAMPUS has been captured by the riddle craze. Students, who used to sit around talking about weekend dates, now burn the midnight oil creating riddles. It all started when someone asked, "What is red and white and eats boulders." After weeks of guessing, the answer was found to be a Red and White Boulder eater. This set everybody in motion, and riddles have been a dime a dozen on campus. Professor Benjamin contributed the most intellectual, when he asked for the difference between Aristotle's drunk and a joyous record player. Philosophy students answered him with a High Gad-Fly and a Glad Hi-Fi.

Criticized by the students recently, as perhaps always, has been the relationship between the administration and the money for chemistry breakage. The Bursar was represented by an attractive young lady, so I controlled my language, but I did not fail to show my displeasure at the way I had been handled. After complaining, it was suggested that I "trot" over to the Chemistry Building and have the matter taken care of. While saying I did not think it was my duty to "Trot," I must have lifted my voice, for Bill Hall, an assistant bursar, turned his attention in my direction. After a telephone call, he discovered that Jim, not John, had taken Chemistry.

"Why," I asked myself, "couldn't they have made that call last summer and made everyone happy?"

Backed by a vote of confidence by the students, the Student Council has abolished hazing from the Bowdoin cam-

Howell To Oxford

Straight "A" student Roger Howell jr. '58 of Baltimore, Md., was one of 32 young men throughout the United States named on December 22 to receive Rhodes Scholarships to Oxford University in England. He will represent the Middle Atlantic District.

Howell has had an amazing record at Bowdoin, having received an "A" in every course he has taken. He was elected to Phi Beta Kappa last June and was awarded the Almon Goodwin Phi Beta Kappa Prize. For three consecutive years he has been named a James Bowdoin Scholar and has been awarded a specially inscribed book on James Bowdoin Day each October. Last fall he delivered the undergraduate response at that convocation.

He was a pitcher on the freshman baseball team in 1955, is the newly elected president of Alpha Delta Phi fraternity, has served on the Student Council, and was Editor-in-Chief of the Orient during the fall semester.

In addition, Howell has been a member of the Student Curriculum Committee, is vice president of the Interfaith Forum and president of the History Club, and as a junior organized the Caledonian Society, designed to promote interest in Scotland and its people, history, and traditions.

Howell, a history major at the College, will study at St. John's College at Oxford, the college of last year's Tallman Professor, Charles Mitchell. He will read in the Honour School of Modern History. His award, worth about $1700 a year, is tenable for two years, with the possibility of renewal for a third year.

Bowdoin's fifteenth Rhodes Scholar, Howell is the first since Richard A. Wiley of the Class of 1949, who spent two years at Balliol College at Oxford and in 1951 was awarded the degree of Bachelor of Civil Laws with honors.

Beneath The Pines

An Undergraduate Point of View . . .

By John T. Gould, Jr. '60

students. The question is always asked if the administration should cater to the whims of undergraduates. If no other reason is given, let us remember that every student becomes an alumnus, and a pleased alumnus supports his college better than a mad one. At Bowdoin this is important.

I was first aware of this friction this summer. I received my term bill from the Bursar — fall tuition, board, last year's repairs on Moore Hall, and a small fee covering chemistry breakage. Having been one of Dr. Gustafson's Biology students, I questioned the reason for my subsidizing the Chemistry Department.

Now it happens that in my class there is a student named Jim Gould, a very good friend of mine, with whom I am often confused, and I knew that he had taken Chemistry. Realizing that anyone can make a mistake, I had the Bursar informed by letter that I could not be held responsible for the breakage. I sincerely felt that I would be taken care of.

But I was wrong. A week before school started, I went to Massachusetts Hall to pay for the fall semester. I was told that my check was not made out for the correct amount. It seemed, I was told, I owed for chemistry breakage. I again told the office, in a very pleasant tone of voice, that I was a Biology student and I saw no reason why I should pay the bill.

A week later, I went to Hubbard Hall to register for my classes and was told that I could not enroll, because I had not paid my bill in full. I still owed pus. The problem now is what will take its place. Between now and next fall, the Council or a committee it recognizes will have to answer this question.

Many students, as well as several faculty members, have ideas on this subject. It will be the responsibility of the members of the Council for the second semester to listen to these ideas and decide which one will be the best for Bowdoin and its fraternities. Whatever this plan may be, it must orientate the Class of 1962 into the various parts of the College, including intellectual, social, and recreational activities.

It appears that most of the students would not like a plan which would bring the Freshmen to the campus before the upperclassmen. A policy of this sort would encourage the Freshmen to form cliques, thus defeating free and open rushing. Such a policy would also hurt the diversified fraternities Bowdoin has.

The main objective of hazing was to force the incoming student to learn fraternity and college lore. Many students feel that the plan accepted by the Council should continue to make this training possible. In place of hazing, the fraternity might deny admittance or social activities to that Freshman who refuses to comply with the training — training which would be acceptable to the Council.

Many discussions and meetings will be held during the second semester to arrive at a just and agreeable answer. If the problem is handled as sensibly as the abolition of hazing, the College stands to profit from the result.

On The Campus

Mrs. Helen Johnson Chase of Brunswick, widow of Professor Stanley P. Chase '05, died suddenly on November 29 in Saco, where she had been visiting Edwin G. Walker '36 and his family.

President Coles paid tribute to Mrs. Chase in these words: "Daughter of a distinguished Bowdoin graduate and professor, wife of an equally distinguished Bowdoin graduate and professor, Mrs. Chase became a very real part of the intellectual life of the College. Hundreds of alumni recall with ever-growing appreciation class meetings in the Chase Barn Chamber, where intellectual and social hospitality was, in a unique way, dispensed by host and hostess. Bowdoin men and faculty members alike will always be grateful for having known them."

Born in Brunswick, Mrs. Chase was the daughter of Henry Johnson and Frances Robinson Johnson. Her mother was president of the Class of 1879 at Wellesley College, the first class to receive diplomas at that school. Mrs. Chase was also a graduate of Wellesley.

Henry Johnson was graduated from Bowdoin in 1875 and was for thirty-six years Longfellow Professor of Modern Languages at the College. A member of the faculty from 1877 until his death in 1918, he was also Librarian for five years, Curator of the Art Collections for twenty-eight years, and Director of the Museum of Fine Arts for four years.

Professor Chase died in 1951. A graduate of Bowdoin in the Class of 1905, he returned to the College in 1925 and the following year was named Henry Leland Chapman Professor of English Literature.

Less than three weeks before her death, Mrs. Chase established the Henry Johnson Fund at Bowdoin, to make possible the study, classification, and cataloging of the drawings in possession of the College, particularly those by the old masters, now in the Museum of Fine Arts.

In June of 1954 the Stanley Perkins Chase Memorial Lamps were dedicated at Commencement. The gift of Mrs. Chase in memory of her husband, the two lamps stand at the entrance to the Moulton Union.

The Warren Eastman Robinson Gateway, erected in 1920 at the southwestern entrance to the campus, is a memorial to Mrs. Chase's brother-in-law, a member of the Class of 1910, who lost his life as an Army lieutenant in France during World War I.

Dramatics

It had been planned to present a faculty-cast play on March 13 and 14, but the production has been indefinitely postponed because of the lack of a sufficient number of interested faculty actors and actresses. The Rivals, last seen on the campus in 1906, had been a leading contender for production.

On February 6, 8, and 10, the Masque and Gown presented Christopher Fry's translation of Giraudoux's Tiger at the Gates. Playing this story of events leading up to the Trojan War in modern costume emphasized its current applicability to threats and portents of war between major powers. Included among the actresses in the production were veterans of many previous Masque and Gown performances, a student wife, a Naval Air Station wife, and Coach Adam Walsh's daughter, Stella. The setting was designed by Guy Davis '59.

A dozen one-act plays were submitted by student dramatists to the faculty committee for the annual contest. Four will be performed for the usual prizes on March 7.

Clash With Communism

"The Arab nationalists in the countries with strong ties with the Soviet Union will one day have to clash with communism and its adherents if they are to stop its advance and avoid Soviet domination," Dr. George M. Haddad of Damascus, Syria, told a Moulton Union audience on the night of January 16.

Delivering the third and final talk in the 1958 Tallman Lecture Series, Professor Haddad declared, "In its apparent support of Arab interest and its propaganda against Western imperialism, the Soviet Union has strengthened the position of left-wing parties and of the communists, but it has caused alarm and hostility among those who are sceptical about Soviet intentions."

Arab nationalism in its present stage, according to Dr. Haddad, "is interested in the liberation of the various Arab countries subject to foreign rule and in Arab unity. It works also for the economic and social progress of the Arab countries."

During the fall semester Dr. Haddad taught a course in the history and culture of the Middle East. He was the twenty-fifth in the distinguished series of Tallman lecturers. Since 1953 he has been Professor of History and Chairman of the History Department at the Syrian University in Damascus.

Dickensiana

Mrs. Adriel U. Bird of Boston has given to the Library a valuable first edition of Charles Dickens' Little Dorrit in the rare paper-bound twenty parts in which it originally appeared during 1855-1857, along with a correspondence of nearly one hundred letters from Dickens' illustrators and editors. These pages of manuscript (aggregating two hundred holograph pages) include twenty letters from Edmund H. New, well known English illustrator. The letters contain interesting bits of Dickens lore and recollections in addition to the technical consideration of characters, color, and circumstances of illustration.

Mrs. Bird's gift also includes interesting copies of The Dickensian, a privately printed edition of Dickens' letters to Maria Beadnell, and a rare edition of Dean Stanley's sermon on Dickens in Westminster Abbey at the time of the novelist's death in 1870.

Mrs. Bird's husband, who died in 1950, was a member of the Class of 1916. A member of the Board of Overseers from 1939 until his death, he was for many years President of La Touraine Coffee Company and Kennedy & Company. The Adriel U. Bird Scholarship was established at Bowdoin in 1953 in his memory.

Army Award For Coles

President James S. Coles received a Special Certificate of Appreciation from Secretary of the Army Wilbur M. Brucker at the fall review of the Bowdoin Reserve Officers' Training Corps Regiment, held on Veterans' Day, November 11. Colonel G. W. Coffman jr., Chief of the Maine Military District, made the presentation.

The award to President Coles was made "for his patriotic service as Civilian Aide to the Secretary of the Army for the State of Maine." He resigned last fall after having served in this capacity for three years.

Winter Sports Look Up

It is safe to say that Bowdoin's winter sports teams are performing better than even the most optimistic Polar Bear supporter would have dared to predict last November.

This does not mean that Bowdoin is making a clean sweep of all opponents on the schedule, for the only undefeated teams are Frank Sabasteanski's varsity and freshman track squads — the freshmen have won two triangular meets against high school opposition and the varsity has not yet had a dual meet.

Nels Corey's varsity hockey squad has a record of four wins and eight losses, but it has shown tremendous spirit and will to win. The Polar Bears lost their first four games of the year before defeating Merrimack 10 to 7. Then in the Colby Christmas tournament they took Williams 4 to 3, led Colby's powerful squad for much of the way before succumbing 7 to 3, and lost again to a late-game Hamilton surge 6 to 2.

Since Christmas Corey's charges have won two and lost two. They pulled the upset of the year in surprising Colby 5 to 4 on January 14 in a game packed with action and excitement. Captain Bob Fritz kicked out 38 Colby shots, while Colby's goalie had 15 saves. Bowdoin senior Ron Desjardin had a hand in all five tallies, with two goals and three assists.

Bob Donham, in his first year as basketball coach, has produced a crowd-thrilling team that has already been in three overtime contests as well as three others decided by a single point. At the St. Michael's College Christmas tournament the Polar Bears trailed Williams by twenty-five points with three minutes gone in the second half, but they switched to an all-court press and won 74 to 73.

Captain Brud Stover has scored 245 points in 13 games, giving him a record-breaking three-year total of 1023, with eight contests still to go. In the second game of the year he broke the previous Bowdoin record of 801, set by Walt Bartlett '53. Stover was picked as one of eight outstanding figures in the sports world honored at the seventh annual Bangor Daily News Sports Award Dinner on January 25. He was selected as the "outstanding Maine college athlete," and a more deserving choice was never made.

Coach Bob Miller has come up with another strong swimming team, with the addition of a handful of strong sophomores from last year's undefeated freshman outfit to go with three or four stand-out holdovers. The Polar Bear mermen have won four of their first five meets, losing only to strong Amherst, with the final relay being decisive.

The freshman teams have all done well, for the most part against high school competition. Ed Coombs' basketball squad has a record of six wins and a single defeat. Danny MacFayden's hockey team has won five and lost one, to the Colby Freshmen. Frank Sabasteanski's yearling track men, as mentioned earlier, have won their two meets handily, while Bob Miller's swimmers have taken two meets, lost one, and tied another.

Bowdoin's sailors, who have brought so much fame to the College in the past few years, won another big one on December 7, when they scored 115 points to capture the two-day Potomac Frostbite Regatta in Washington, D. C. Sailing in a strong wind accompanied by rain, the Polar Bears won out over George Washington, Navy, Fordham, Detroit, Princeton, Georgetown, Colgate, and Catholic University, which finished in that order.

And, finally, in a giant slalom and cross country meet at Bridgton on January 11, Captain Bruce Chalmers led his skiing team to an easy victory over Colby and Bates.

So — things are looking up!

The Harvey Dow Gibson Memorial Trophy has been awarded jointly to Delta Kappa Epsilon and Chi Psi fraternities. The cup goes each year to the fraternity that has shown the greatest improvement in scholastic standing during the previous academic year.

The Gibson Trophy honors the late Harvey D. Gibson '02. For many years a trustee of Bowdoin, he was at the time of his death in September of 1950 President of the Manufacturers Trust Company in New York, where he was widely known for his leadership in business and civic life.

Gibson Hall of Music, completed in 1954, stands as a memorial to Mr. Gibson's lifelong interest in music.

Du Pont Grant

E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company has made a grant of $4,000 to the College as part of its program of aid to education.

Bowdoin received $2,500 for chemistry teaching and $1,500 for other courses. This is the fifth year that the College has been included in the program of du Pont grants, for which schools are selected on their records of strength in chemical education.

An Unusual First

An unusual "first" occurred on the night of December 17, when the Art and Music Departments joined to present a Christmas exhibit and concert by the Chapel Choir in the Walker Art Building. This was the first time a choral program had ever been presented there.

A Christmas exhibit of art works was selected and arranged by Curator Carl N. Schmalz, and the Choir, under the direction of Professor Robert K. Beckwith, sang Christmas music.

The program concluded with guests joining the Choir in singing familiar Christmas carols.

In December photographers Alan Meisel and Charles B. Phelps visited the campus to photograph six paintings in the Museum of Fine Arts. Acting for the Carnegie Study of Arts in the United States, the men photographed Robert Feke's paintings of Mrs. William Bowdoin, Mrs. James Bowdoin, II, and General Samuel Waldo, Joseph Blackburn's "Elizabeth and James Bowdoin," and two murals, "Rome" by Elihu Vedder and "Athens" by John La Farge.

Under a grant from the Carnegie Corporation to the University of Georgia, about 4000 color photographs of representative selections of the best examples of American art are being made throughout the country to provide color materials for colleges and universities for the teaching of the history of art in this country.

Summer Institute

In December Bowdoin received a grant of $47,900 from the National Science Foundation to support a Summer Institute on the Physical Science Study Committee's Program for Secondary School Physics Teachers, to be held on the campus from June 30 to August 8. Professor Noel C. Little '17 will serve as Director of the Institute.

Similar institutes will be held during the summer at the University of Connecticut, the University of Minnesota, the Oak Ridge Institute for Nuclear Studies, and Reed College.

For more than a year the Physical Science Study Committee, consisting of secondary school and college teachers of physics, has been engaged in the production of a new secondary school physics curriculum, text, laboratory and demonstration materials, films, supplementary booklets for students, and teachers' guides.

Bowdoin's Summer Institute will bring 45 high school teachers to the campus. Each participating teacher will have his tuition paid by the National Science Foundation grant. In addition, he will receive a stipend of $75 per week, with additional allowances for up to four dependents. This stipend is given in place of summer earnings the teacher might otherwise be able to achieve.

The visiting teachers will live in the college dormitories and have their meals at the Moulton Union.

At the close of the summer institute the Physical Science Study Committee will supply its materials to the secondary schools of those participants who wish to use the new program next year. Teachers using the materials will be expected to help evaluate and improve the program.

The following tribute to the late Robert L. Happ '53 was written by Allen F. Hetherington '54. It is part of a longer tribute which has been published in its entirety by the QUILL.

I knew him only four years — three years at Bowdoin, and his postgraduate year in Cambridge — and I was not one of his two or three closest friends. Yet Bob made a vivid and lasting impression on me, as I think he did on everyone who got to know him. I have thought a lot about him in the few years since. He had a grandeur, a fineness of spirit, that you don't forget.

Bob won the best-acting prize in the one-act play contest of 1953. It was the first and only time he ever got on a stage. In that play, which I wrote, and which was not a very great play, Bob portrayed a young artist, a painter all alone on Christmas Eve who is befriended by a woman in a railroad station. As the waif, Bob brought a wistful, hopeful, charming quality to the part which certainly had never been written into it. It was a quality that belonged to him alone. A few days later I talked with him by the gate behind Mem Hall, now the Pickard Theater. He was bent over in a typical slouch, loosely gripping his bicycle by the handlebars, in a more serious mood than usual. He told me then that winning the prize was the biggest moment in his college life. I hold that memory very dear. Because it meant that in writing the play, I had done something for Bob, something in return for all the things which, unknowingly and certainly unintentionally, Bob, by being himself, had done for me.

In that same talk, I told Bob of all the thoughts and expressions of sentiment which, separately and alone, I had written to others and then never passed on, embarrassed at being so nakedly revealed. Bob understood. He knew what I meant better than I did. And he said he believed it was better to send these feelings, because — no matter how hard it may be — if they come from the heart, they will be accepted.

This, then, is my letter for Bob Happ.

Professor Moulton

Fish Listening Continues

Dr. James M. Moulton, Assistant Professor of Biology at Bowdoin, will continue his research in the relations of sound to the behavior of fish under a two-year grant of $12,000 made to Bowdoin by the National Science Foundation.

For the past five years Professor Moulton has been studying the biological aspects of marine animal sounds, especially as related to fishes and crustaceans. During this time, in addition to his research at Bowdoin, he has carried on research at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Massachusetts, at the American Museum of Natural History's Lerner Marine Laboratory in the Bahama Islands, and at state and federal laboratories at Boothbay Harbor, where recordings of many marine animal sounds have been obtained.

One ultimate interest of Dr. Moulton's research is the possibility of directing the movements of commercially important fishes with underwater sound, a practice which has been followed in southeast Asian fisheries during much of their recorded history.

In addition to Professor Moulton's grant, two Bowdoin alumni will carry on special projects under National Science Foundation awards. Dr. William N. Locke '30, Director of Libraries at M.I.T., will publish English editions of three Russian journals, Radio Engineering, Radio Engineering and Electronics, and Electro-Communications, under a one-year grant of $70,000.

Dr. Earl D. Hanson '47, under a two-year award of $12,800, will study nucleocytoplasmic interaction. He is a member of the Yale University Department of Zoology.

Geology Grant

Professor Marc W. Bodine jr., Chairman of the Department of Geology, received a grant of $4,200 last fall from the Research Corporation of New York. The money was used to purchase X-ray equipment for use in the geology program at the College.

Bowdoin is hopeful that the work of the Department of Geology may some day be endowed. As President Coles has stated, "This would be particularly appropriate at Bowdoin, where Parker Cleaveland, one of the early mineralogists on the North American continent and author of the first textbook on mineralogy to be published in North America, taught and made mineralogical collections during the first half of the 19th century."

Dr. Bodine joined the faculty in the fall of 1956 when geology was reintroduced into the curriculum after being absent since just before World War II.

Debating

Professor Rudy Thayer '22 started the year with a squad of twenty-four active debaters. With the exception of the Tufts Tournament, in which we entered freshmen against seasoned varsity teams, Bowdoin's record has been gratifying. At the Brown University Tournament, attended by forty-nine colleges, Bowdoin won from seven of its ten competitors. In the University of Vermont Tournament, Bowdoin debaters won sixteen of their twenty contests. For the third consecutive year the Dick Morgan-Al Schretter combination emerged unbeaten, an unbroken string of victories over fifteen colleges in this particular competition.

In practice debates with Colby, the University of New Hampshire, Boston colleges, and a non-championship state competition, Bowdoin has been seasoning its eight teams for coming competition in tournaments sponsored by M.I.T., West

Professor Bodine

Point, Boston University, Brooklyn, and the New England Forensic Association. The College will also enter the Dartmouth Novice Tournament in an effort to retain the trophy it brought back to Brunswick from Hanover a year ago. In all contests for the year debaters have been concerned with the subject of right-to-work legislation.

In addition to intercollegiate debating, informal weekly fireside debates are being held at fraternities as competition for the Wilmot Brookings Mitchell Debate Trophy approaches the semi-finals.

The interest in debating has grown to the point where more adequate accommodations, with typewriters, files, and work tables, are needed, according to Professor Thayer.

Cumbersome And Slow

"Court procedures inherited from an ancient age are cumbersome and slow, unduly dilatory and costly," retired New York State Supreme Court Justice David W. Peck told a Pickard Theater audience on January 15, as he delivered the third and final talk in the 1957-58 Bowdoin Lecture Series, on the general subject "Justice Today."

Justice Peck, now 54 years of age, retired on December 31 after ten years as Presiding Justice of the Appellate Division of the First Judicial Department in New York. In his talk he raised the question of whether the right to a jury trial in civil cases should not be qualified to deal with the volume of litigation in city courts.

"Justice today," he said, "is long delayed in many places, courts are not efficiently organized, and the procedures employed are so wasteful of professional time that lawyers have to go underpaid unless clients are to be overcharged."

Music

The Glee Club has added one concert, on April 25 in Falmouth Foreside, to the schedule printed in the December ALUMNUS. Other appearances are as follows: February 28, Pine Manor Junior College, Wellesley, Mass.; March 1, Brockton, Mass.; March 22, Campus Chest concert with Colby Junior College; March 28, Wheelock College, Boston; March 29, Albany, N. Y.; March 30, Pulaski, N. Y.; March 31, Buffalo, N. Y.; April 1, Syracuse, N. Y.; April 2, Oswego, N. Y.

Also, April 11, annual campus concert in Brunswick; April 12, New London, N. H.; April 18, Lasell Junior College, Auburndale, Mass.; April 19, Natick, Mass.; May 8, Bowdoin Night at the Boston Pops.

Professor Frederic Tillotson will join with the Curtis String Quartet on April 21 to present the Dvorak Piano Quintet. Nine days later, on April 30, he will present a piano and harpsichord recital.

The Chapel Choir, under the direction of Professor Robert Beckwith, will present a joint concert with Westbrook Junior College on March 15. Professor Beckwith also directs the Bowdoin Music Club, which will present a joint concert of renaissance choral music with the Chapel Choir in March.

The latest Glee Club long-playing record is available at the Moulton Union Bookstore and at the Bowdoin Record Shop. Price is $3.95 plus sales tax, insurance, and postage. The 1956-57 Meddiebempsters' recording, entitled "La Mer," is available at $3.50 plus fifty cents packing and mailing charges from the Meddies, c/o Zeta Psi House, Brunswick.

Alumni may also secure a long-playing record of Christmas carols sung by Peter Potter '58, leader of the Meddies and winner of the Arthur Godfrey Talent Scouts program on CBS-TV last June 24, by writing to him at the Zeta Psi House. Mr. Potter made a return appearance on the Godfrey morning show throughout the week of January 6.

Bowdoin Browsing

"Bowdoin Browsing" represents the first in what the editors hope will be a continuing series of articles on books, written, at first at least, by different members of the Bowdoin family — faculty, faculty wives, alumni, alumni wives, and so forth.

Author of this first column is Dr. Lawrence S. Hall '36, Associate Professor of English at Bowdoin. Each guest columnist will approach the subject of books in his own chosen way.

Professor Hall

If I rightly sense the purpose of this column I have the honor of inaugurating it is to make good coffee talk about books. That is, it is not to be pontifical or even authoritative, certainly not professorial, not to have so much prejudice as to be exasperating or so little as to be dull. In other words, the sort of stuff a man who likes to think about what he's read likes to kick around with those who also like to kick around what they've been pleased to think about what they've read. In five to eight-hundred words you can't worry about proof, or reputation, or even about your transitions too much. You have to have your fun and bow out, leaving your interlocutors to have theirs via the mail.

Now this being the first of what I hope will be a fascinating exchange of readers' ideas, I find it appropriate to speak generally about what can be read — which means saying something about what gets published.

That is, I would like to give you a very incomplete but all live look into the neurotic minds and behavior of publishers, at whose mercy both readers and writers are.

In the December Atlantic the remarkable publisher Alfred A. Knopf has a remarkable confession — I think that is a better word than article — which contains most of the symptoms of this neurosis. He begins by moaning about the booksellers, who do not pressure their customers into buying the books being merchandized, as if books were unlike any other commodity in that they are all of equal value, or of any value for that matter. Then he moans about current reviewers because, unlike Mencken, Broun, and Phelps, they fail to show indiscriminating but merchandizable enthusiasm for "books" — period. "Whether they were sound critics wouldn't matter so much to the book trade. . ." Italics mine. He takes a swipe at readers "who wouldn't dream of borrowing any other purchasable object" but "feel no compunction about borrowing a book" — and who, I wish to point out, have also borrowed many a tuxedo or shotgun because they have too little use for either to own one. He swings a low metaphor at authors who naturally believe in their work. "You can offer a grade A milk and a grade B if you are in the dairy business, but authors are vain in a way that cows are not." And I am reminded of a phrase of Dorothy Parker's that you can milk something-or-other till it moos with pain, as Mr. Knopf might profit by discovering if he were to go into the dairy business. The trouble is, he says, that you can't say to a grade B author "'Your book is so bad that it can't be published,' because the author is just as likely as not to go down the street and sell it to the first publisher whose office he passes" — which might, of course, be Knopf. With the result that the publishers develop a competitive concentration on grade B books which Knopf expects the booksellers to push, the reviewers to extoll, the readers to buy, and the authors not to write.

But this is not the limit of the pathological self-pity in which Mr. Knopf flounders. With disarming candor he confesses that there is no excuse "for producing the large volume of trivial, unimportant, inferior, and downright unworthy stuff we do. The general methods pursued by publishers in acquiring books to publish are often unsound and result in the proliferation of books that are neither good nor saleable." Italics again mine and conjunctivitis again his. Simultaneously he remarks, "I guess" — by now you know whose are the italics — "if better books were written, publishers would publish them."

Why doesn't Mr. Knopf know? The answer I suggest is that, like the notorious American woman, publishers are confused as to their role and their functions. They do not know whether they are Madison Avenue boys or staunch devotees of real books. They vacillate between the two without as a consequence quite mastering the disciplines and insights of either. Subconsciously and correctly they lack confidence in their judgments.

I give you some real-life inside evidence. A work of fiction which, because it had a little to do with the sea, reminded one publisher's reader of Conrad — why not Melville or Le Pêcheur d'Islande I do not know unless the reader had never read these, rejected because it did not have Conrad's theme of fate, as if Melville and Loti and this particular other writer should have been writing Conrad's books and not their own. Another work of fiction condemned for too much resembling Hemingway by another reader who added apologetically, "but I'm here late tonight trying to read some mss I'd put aside for special attention and the spookiness of this place is making me garrulous." One of these readers was one of Mr. Knopf's readers. Either of them could have been any publisher's.

Well, the final garrulity is again Mr. Knopf's. "I feel confirmed," he testifies, "in the conviction I have held for more than forty years that by and large the taste of the reading public" — whom he castigates for not purchasing his books — "is better than that of us who cater to it." To that one is ready to say "Amen," while wondering where for forty years he and the other publishers have been able to find places spooky enough to do such thinking in.

I for one am tempted irreverently and cheerfully to suggest that all of them should go and have their Knopfs examined.

Books

ARTHUR SHERBO, English Sentimental Drama: The Michigan State University Press, East Lansing; pp. 154; $4.50.

Arthur Sherbo's study clearly makes its appeal to the professional reader. Densely documented, awesomely comprehensive in its knowledge of the pertinent literature, and written with an austerity yielding nothing of tribute to the gaudier Muses, English Sentimental Drama is an essay in defining and describing a literary genre that proliferated amid high popular and critical esteem in the palmy days of the Enlightenment. This surely is a pregnant paradox — that the play expansive in easy morality, excessive emotionalism, and comforting notions about the nature of man looms so impressively in the era of cool reason. Perhaps it is a question of revenge. Reality has a way of vindicating her claims. Hedged in too narrowly, she will exert pressures in her own behalf. The Eighteenth Century saw its ideal reasonableness degenerate into a restricting and falsifying rationality. Empiricism declined into an attenuated skepticism. Excess in one direction leads to excess in the opposite direction and we need not be surprised to discover the emotional insipidities of Richard Cumberland and the atrophying rigors of Hume sharing the same sky.

Mr. Sherbo's methodology is straightforward. He collects, examines, and sifts a variety of pronouncements on the nature, composition, and intent of sentimental drama. Proceeding to examine sentimental drama in the light of a composite definition, he shows convincingly where theory breaks down, then shifts his attention from materials to dramatic techniques, invokes a variety of miscellaneous criteria, and closes with a survey of the fantastic popularity of the genre in its day.

Within the limitations imposed by the terms of his approach, Mr. Sherbo is completely successful. He is thorough, painstaking, and clear. Occasionally a spate of reference dwindles into a trickle of conclusion. Not all of the right questions are asked. Sentimental drama is, above all, organized externally. It preys, so to speak, upon the predispositions of its audience. Its energy is essentially the energy of the audience. The effectiveness of Richard II does not primarily depend on its successful incorporation of Elizabethan political theory. But sentimental drama of the eighteenth century is a long-cold corpse. It died when it could no longer derive sustenance from its audience. Exploration of theological, moral, economic, or sociological assumptions would have borne the burden of relevance in this case.

ARTHUR SHERBO '47, Assistant Professor of English at Michigan State University, was the recipient of a Guggenheim Fellowship last year. Dr. Sherbo's Samuel Johnson, Editor of Shakespeare; with an Essay on The Adventurer, was reviewed in the December, 1956, issue of the ALUMNUS.

REVIEWER

GERARD L. DUBE '55 is studying for his doctorate in English at Harvard, where he is also an assistant instructor. In a recent letter to the Books Editor, "Gerry" describes his interesting teaching program which should arouse the envy of many a college professor: "With an eager, aggressive honors section in General Education and two handfuls of slightly more complicated 'tutees,' I find my days full and tiring. Four honors theses are under my direction this year. The topics range from Byron's dramas to Faulkner's novels with stops made at the novels of Henry James and D. H. Lawrence. I do Victorian prose with my juniors in which the attention paid to Newman looms largely."

NOTES

An important philological work, Skein-Winding Reels: Studies in Word History and Etymology (University of Michigan Publications) by Charles H. Livingston, Longfellow Professor Emeritus of Romance Languages, will be reviewed in a later issue of the ALUMNUS.

Lincoln Smith '32 is the author of "Engineers as Regulatory Commissioners" in the November 7 and 21 issues of Public Utilities Fortnightly.

An edition of Oliver Wendell Holmes' The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table with an introduction by Professor Herbert R. Brown has recently been published by the Sagamore Press, New York.

William N. Locke '30, Professor and Head of the Department of Modern Languages and Director of Libraries at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is the author of Scientific French: A Concise Description of the Structural Elements of Scientific and Technical French (John Wiley and Sons, Inc., 440 Fourth Avenue, New York: pp. 112; $2.25).

This textbook has been written for the use of science or engineering students who need to develop a rapid reading knowledge of technical articles or books in French and assumes no previous knowledge of the language. Selections for study and translation are taken from actual scientific books and journals. An added inducement for the beginner: "All grammatical terminology is explained as it is introduced, and its use is kept to a minimum."

Irish Folk Ways by E. Estyn Evans, one-time Tallman Professor at Bowdoin and now Professor of Geography at Queen's University, Belfast, Ireland, will be reviewed in the next issue of the ALUMNUS.

"Etymology of French Jusqu'a la Saint-Glinglin" by Gerard Brault has been reprinted from Romance Philology, Vol. XI, No. 1, University of California Press. Dr. Brault is a recent and very able addition to the Department of Romance Languages at Bowdoin.

Publishers' Weekly, July 15, 1957, contains an article by Carl L. Apollonio '53, the proprietor of Fairfields Book Shop, Maine Street, Brunswick, entitled "Service and Large Paperback Stock Help Build Sales in Maine Store."

For discrimination and good taste in the selection of books as well as attractive surroundings, Fairfields has become known as one of the best bookstores in this region. The Books Editor as a grateful browser offers this sincere tribute with no insidious thought of a professional discount.

In The Fossil ("official organ of the Alumni of Amateur Journalism") for April, 1957, Clement F. Robinson '03 has an interesting article on Joseph Griffin, one of Brunswick's earliest printers, and his weekly magazine The Juvenile Key.

From 1819 to 1874, the year of his death, Griffin was the official college printer as well as the proprietor of a book and stationery store. During these years he printed the college catalogues in addition to text books by Professors Upham, Smyth, Parker Cleaveland, and others. Perhaps his most famous client — the Books Editor would like to add — was Bowdoin's first Professor of Modern Languages, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, who, dissatisfied with the language texts then available, wrote or edited his own for the use of his students. Hubbard Hall has a complete collection of grammars and readers for Longfellow's French, Spanish, and Italian classes, all of whose early editions were printed by Griffin.

The Juvenile Key, later to be called The Family Pioneer and Juvenile Key, was edited by Griffin with the assistance of his seven-year-old son and a daughter who was but two years older, who acted as typesetters and proofreaders. The periodical, which was issued from September 18, 1830, until May 23, 1837, is of particular interest in the history of journalism since it was one of the earliest amateur weeklies in this country. Its aim, as stated by the editor in the prospectus of the first issue, was to publish a "moral and political miscellany . . . designed principally for the instruction of children."

An article by August Miller '27, entitled "An International Mission for the Naval War College," appeared in the December, 1957, issue of the U. S. Naval Institute Proceedings. Last year he served as Visiting Professor of Government at the Naval War College in Newport, R. I.

Asa Knowles '30, President of the University of Toledo, is the author of an article entitled "Emerging Features of Tomorrow's Higher Education," which was published in the October, 1957, issue of The Educational Record, the publication of the American Council on Education.

Richard E. Crockford '49 is the author of an article entitled "Educating Women to Be Women," published originally in the New Hampshire Profiles and reprinted in the November, 1957, Colby Junior College Bulletin. He is a member of the English Department at Colby Junior.

Alumni' Clubs

ALBANY

Several interested alumni, four prospective admissions candidates, and an interested parent from the Albany area met on Friday evening, December 20, in the home of Convener John W. Manning '33. The purpose of the informal get-together was to sharpen local interest in Bowdoin College, especially among secondary school students in the region. Peter C. Barnard '50, Administrative Assistant in the Alumni Office, was on hand to represent the College by showing some color slides and by answering questions and telling something about Bowdoin and what it offers. The meeting, which lasted from eight until eleven o'clock, was a small but vital beginning for what many Albany Bowdoinites hope will become an annual enterprise in the ever-increasing competition to draw the best-qualified boys from the Albany area to the College.

BOSTON

The annual sub-freshman sports night of the Bowdoin Club of Boston was held at the University Club on December 6. About thirty Greater Boston schoolboys were guests of the club. President Everett P. Pope '41 greeted the guests at a pre-dinner reception and introduced them to Athletic Director Morrell and Admissions Directors Shaw and Glover.

At the dinner Robert L. Bell '42 was master of ceremonies. Representing the College, Professor Herbert R. Brown described Bowdoin and what it offers in his customary vivid and entertaining style. The Fordham Flash and Hall of Fame big-leaguer, Frank Frisch, regaled the assembly with reminiscences of his long athletic career.

Other visitors from the campus were Dean

Kendrick, Seward Marsh, Adam Walsh, and Frank Sabasteanski.

Club Secretary John Morrell '52 reports that preparations are going forward for the Annual Dinner, which will be held at the University Club on April 10. Fred Moore '49 is chairman of the committee which is making the arrangements.

CENTRAL NEW YORK

The Bowdoin Club of Central New York held a small, informal meeting on Saturday afternoon, December 28. Club President and Mrs. Robert Bryant '47, Secretary Tom Chapman '50, Charles and Mrs. Sawyer '28, and Joseph Gage jr. '27 met with Pete Barnard '50, Administrative Assistant in the Alumni Office, who gave an informal report on current happenings at the College and showed color slides of the campus. Plans for future club activities and projects were discussed. (Secretary Chapman reminds all alumni in the area to reserve the evening of Tuesday, April 1, the time of the dinner for alumni and wives which precedes the Glee Club concert in Syracuse.)

CHICAGO

Club Secretary Harold Fish '25 reports that the Bowdoin Club of Chicago is off to a good start for a year of vigorous activity.

"Although December is a bad month for a meeting, sixteen alumni braved the pre-Christmas season to attend and make a festive occasion of our meeting at Barney's Market Restaurant on December 6.

"As soon as the dishes were cleared away, we settled down to work as a planning committee. Suggestions came from everyone present. Essential agreement was reached that regularly scheduled meetings should be organized for the coming year, each with a prepared program if at all possible.

"A publicity committee was organized to work among secondary schools in the area to publicize the College. Albert A. Clarke '40 was appointed chairman. It is felt that one of the chief duties of the club should be to present Bowdoin to prospective students and to let the College know of good prospects.

"The following alumni were present: W. Jennings Brown '55, Don Buckingham '53, Dan Callahan '41, Al Clarke '40, Jim Dolan '43, John Estabrook '36, Hal Fish '25, Art Fox '35, Shirley Gray '18, John Hayden '50, George Hutchings '43, Ben Karsokas '39, Tom Lathrop '53, Bob McAvoy '50, Robert Morss '38, and Hunter Nicol '36.

"We are looking forward to Professor Herbert Brown's visit on February 7 when alumni and their wives will gather at the Midland Hotel for a six o'clock dinner meeting."

CLEVELAND

On December 23 the Bowdoin Club of Cleveland held its annual subfreshman luncheon at the Midday Club. Presiding at the informal noon meeting was club president Robert S. Burton '43. Other Cleveland alumni present were Dr. Jim Blunt '40, Vice President, Ned Brown '36, Bill Burton '37, Ollie Emerson '49, Al Fenton '31, Hal Foster '33, Dick Lampion '32, and Phil Stuart '57. Six prospective admissions candidates were guests of the club, including Al Fenton's son, Pete, who was at home on vacation from the Loomis School.

Two undergraduates, Pete Relic '58 and Bob Fritz '59, were also guests of the club, and both of them gave informal reports on current campus happenings and undergraduate life at Bowdoin. Pete Barnard '50, former secretary of the Cleveland group but now Administrative Assistant in the Alumni Office, was also present to show a collection of color slides and give additional commentary about the College and what it offers. The meeting was officially adjourned at 1:45, following President Burton's reminder of the annual dinner to be held on February 6, but some of the alumni and subfreshmen lingered for continued informal discussion.

ESSEX COUNTY

The Essex County Bowdoin Club held its first meeting of the 1957-58 season on November 22 at the Kernwood Country Club in Salem, Mass. One hundred and fifteen people turned out for a grand and glorious meeting, including alumni, wives, special guests, and representatives from the College.

A delightful social hour and a delicious buffet dinner were followed by introductions of invited guests by the retiring club president, Harry Simon '24. Principals of about ten public high schools in the area and their wives were the special guests of the club. Venerable, distinguished Judge George Sears '90 was the oldest alumnus present. Professor Herbert R. Brown and Messrs. Hubert S. Shaw '36 and Peter C. Barnard '50 were the official representatives from the campus. Following the introductions was a brief business meeting. Chairman Dean Cushing '45 of the nominating committee presented a new slate of officers which was unanimously approved.

Charles Shulman '37 is now President, Howard F. Ryan '28 and Leland B. Howe '50 are Vice Presidents, J. Sheldon Caras '48 is Secretary, and William J. D. Ratcliff '27 is Treasurer. Retiring President Simon was elected the club's Alumni Council Member. The Board of Directors has been increased from five to seven in number, and they now comprise Richard S. Thayer '28, Clark S. Sears '28, Frank R. Loeffler '14, Norman Von Rosenvinge '33, Robert S. Porter '41, Wesley E. Bevins jr. '40, and James A. Whipple jr. '31.

At 9:45 the group adjourned to an adjoining auditorium. Director of Admissions Shaw spoke briefly, addressing himself mainly to the principals who were guests. Administrative Assistant Barnard followed with a showing of color slides of the College and an accompanying commentary. Professor Brown, the "feature" of the program, was then introduced, and he proceeded to spellbind his audience in his usual charming manner. In speaking about Bowdoin, he emphasized its unique and admirable qualities. His remarks were most appropriate in their catholicity for all his audience: the alumni, the ladies, and the visiting schoolmen.

After thanking the visitors for attending and urging his fellow club members to continue their most auspicious start, President Shulman adjourned the meeting at 11 p.m.

KNOX-LINCOLN-WALDO

Ralph Cushing '05, active club member and unofficial scribe, has sent us the following report: "The Knox-Lincoln-Waldo Bowdoin Club met at the Knox Hotel in Thomaston on Friday evening, November 15. High school seniors and juniors from the area, who had been selected as good Bowdoin prospects, were guests at dinner.

FUTURE CLUB MEETINGS

- Cleveland — Annual Dinner (Alumni and Wives) - University Club - Thursday, February 6 - 6:30 p.m.
- Chicago — Annual Dinner (Alumni and Wives) - Midland Hotel - Friday, February 7 - 6 p.m.
- Washington — Annual Dinner - Continental Hotel - Thursday, March 13 - 6:30 p.m.
- Pittsburgh — Annual Dinner (Alumni and Wives) - Cardinal Room of the University Club - Friday, March 14 - 6:30 p.m.
- Central New York — Pre-Glee Club Concert Dinner (Syracuse) - Tuesday, April 1
- Boston — Annual Dinner (Alumni and Wives) - University Club - Thursday, April 10 - 6:30 p.m.
- Aroostook County — Dinner - Friday, May 16 - Northland Hotel, Houlton

It was a well-attended meeting, there being 20 boys and 26 alumni and visitors from the College. (The four representatives present from the campus were Mal Morrell '24, Director of Athletics, Bill Shaw '36, Director of Admissions, Bob Donham, the new basketball coach, and Brud Stover '58, captain of the basketball team for the 1957-58 season. Each made a short talk which seemed to have the boys much interested.)

"Bowdoin songs were sung throughout the dinner — with Ned Packard '32 leading and Don Lewis '27 at the piano. Alumni present had come from all up and down the coast, from Wiscasset to Belfast. The meeting was presided over by Jasper Stahl '09, club president.

"For an hour after dinner the guests mingled with the alumni and the representatives from the College in a question-and-answer session. Reports are that the boys were much impressed with the new basketball coach, Bob Donham. It is hoped that the meeting will have proved valuable to the College in its efforts to attract a first-rate group of boys for next year's freshman class."

MERRIMACK VALLEY

Club Secretary Roy Davis '30 reports a successful informal meeting of his group on December 11 at the Andover Inn in Andover, Mass. Although it was primarily a social gathering, one important item of business was transacted. The club members voted to change the name of their group from the North Shore Bowdoin Club to the Merrimack Valley Bowdoin Club.

NEW JERSEY

The Bowdoin Club of New Jersey met on Tuesday evening, December 3, at the Suburban Hotel in East Orange. Twenty-five alumni from the area and one Bowdoin son (of Paul Vanadia '28) turned out to greet Bursar Glenn R. McIntire '25 and Assistant Bursar Wolcott A. Hokanson jr. '50, who were guests from the campus.

The social hour was followed by dinner, and then a short business meeting ensued, at which the following officers were elected: Malcolm S. Moore '50, President; Elton F. Chase '18, Vice President; Peter O. Grant '48, Secretary-Treasurer; and Arthur A. Hamblen '48, Assistant Secretary-Treasurer. Frank A.

St. Clair '21 was re-elected Alumni Council Member.

After the business meeting, Messrs. McIntire and Hokanson showed a selection of color slides of Bowdoin. The slides and the accompanying commentary proved delightfully reminiscent, especially for those who had not been able to return to Bowdoin for some time.

Great credit for organizing the meeting was due to the efforts of former President Carl Kuebler '17.

RHODE ISLAND

At noon on Wednesday, January 8, the Bowdoin Club of Rhode Island held its first monthly luncheon of 1958 at the University Club. About fifteen alumni were present (more would have attended had it not been for a snow storm) to meet Bob Glover '56, Assistant Director of Admissions. Following the meal, club members adjourned to the lounge, where they held a long and informal conversation with Mr. Glover. Stressing the value of thoughtful and informed interest and activity on the part of the alumni in attracting qualified students to the College, the Assistant Director of Admissions explained the admissions policy of the College and the present qualifications for admission which a candidate must meet. He further discussed changes that have come about in the program of scholarship awards at Bowdoin. In conclusion, Mr. Glover stressed the value of informal meetings in the homes of alumni which are held for interested students who seem able to meet Bowdoin's standards for admission and show promise of becoming assets to the College.

ST. PETERSBURG

The editors were delighted to receive another lively communique from Convener "Doc" Lincoln '91, which they are happy to pass along.

"The Bowdoin Club of St. Petersburg held its first monthly lunch of the season at the Carleve Hotel on December 19 with thirteen present: Cos Smith '90, Lincoln '91, Sec. Fessenden '95, Carmichael '97, Tom White '05, Ben Briggs and Seth Haley '07, Sewall Webster '10, Elden Barbour '12, Ray Kennedy '13, Col. Jim Tarbox '14, Tobey Mooers '18, and the Reverend Alan McKinley '20 of Safety Harbor (a new member). One or two of the old standbys failed to connect, and two new men failed to come though notified. Not bad for a starter, however. The food was excellent and the caterer and wife, who run the dining service, own and manage Kenniston Hill Inn, Boothbay Center, Maine, so they were interested in making us welcome.

"The boys had a good bull session, and we hope to do better in January. There should be several more winter residents back next month. Warn any Bowdoin men whom you know or hear of coming down the West Coast (of Florida) to get in touch with me. This is a standing order! Our area includes the cities of Clearwater, Bradenton, Sarasota, and Tampa, and smaller towns like Dunedin, Largo, Lakeland, and any within 40 or 50 miles of St. Pete. When Don MacMillan comes down here in February, as has been reported, we will stage our lunch so that he can be with us."

VERMONT

On December 7 the Bowdoin Club of Vermont held a dinner meeting at the Bristol Inn at Bristol. In describing the meeting and the visit of Professor Paul Hazelton, Convener Robert D. Peakes '36 wrote, in part, "In the person of Paul Hazelton you have an ambassador extraordinary who brings with him all the vitality, persuasiveness, and enthusiasm necessary to rekindle the often lagging interest of the alumni. After dinner Paul held our small group in the palm of his hand until almost midnight, covering a variety of subjects, including athletics, admissions, the undergraduate temper, the value of the liberal arts, and the function and obligations of alumni. I am sure everyone came away from the meeting with a renewed interest in the problems of the College and a resolve to do what we can as alumni.

"Although I had been promised an attendance of 25, the weather turned out to be somewhat threatening, which undoubtedly kept some away. The following did show up: Molly and Jim Lewis '42 (and 11-year-old twin sons), Hannah and Art Williams '50, Mary and Ralph Kidd '43, Maud and Larry Ranney '27, Abe Smith '23, Judy and Joe Caldwell '47, Virginia and George Little '40, and Peg and Bob Peakes '36. I think everyone had a very enjoyable evening and, thanks to the delightful setting of the Bristol Inn and especially to Paul, the meeting was successful."

Necrology

1906 HAROLD STARBIRD ELDER died in Portland on December 17, 1957, at the age of 73. Born in that city on June 24, 1884, he prepared for Bowdoin at Westbrook Seminary and following his graduation studied for a year at Harvard Law School. Where There's A Will . . .

There's A Way To Serve Bowdoin

The College has received notice of the following legacies:

From Philip O. Coffin '03 the sum of $5,000.

From the estate of Ethel L. Howard of Farnington the sum of $21,155.09 to establish the Guy Charles Howard Scholarship in memory of her brother, a member of the Class of 1898. Income from the fund will be used for scholarship aid to some student to take a post-graduate course in this or some other country.

From the estate of Henry Johnson '74 more than $275,000 to endow a Professorship of Art and Archaeology.

From Mrs. Stanley P. Chase more than $100,000, part of which is for the support of the Museum of Fine Arts, while the rest is unrestricted.

1925 PAUL FOSTER MCGOULDRIK, a retired Internal Revenue officer for the United States Treasury Department, died at his home in Bangor on November 14, 1957, at the age of 60. Born in Machias on September 29, 1897, he prepared for college at Cony High School in Augusta and at Bridgton Academy and attended Bowdoin for one year. He lived in Machias, Portland, and Augusta before moving to Bangor more than twenty years ago. In his younger days he was a south-paw pitcher for the Augusta Millionaires and the Bar Harbor semi-pro baseball team. A veteran of World War I, he was a member of the American Legion. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Jane Nelson McGouldrick, whom he married in June of 1924 in Portland; two daughters, Mrs. John C. Ryder of Baldwinville, N. Y., and Mrs. Peter J. Guthy of Freeport, L. I., N. Y.; a son, Paul F. jr. of Cambridge, Mass.; two brothers and five grandchildren. His fraternity was Beta Theta Pi.

1941 LT. COL. DONALD MacMILLAN MORSE, who shot down eleven Japanese planes in the Pacific during World War II, died suddenly at his Air Force base near London, England, on December 5, 1957. Born on September 21, 1919, in Minneapolis, Minn., he was the son of Dr. John H. Morse '97 and Mrs. Morse and was named for Donald B. MacMillan '98, originally a classmate of Dr. Morse at Bowdoin. He prepared at Cony High School and Staunton (Va.) Military Academy and attended Bowdoin for part of a year before leaving because of an appendicitis operation. He entered the Air Force in May of 1941 while he was attending Virginia Military Institute and received his wings on December 12, five days after Pearl Harbor. A few weeks later he was on his way to the Pacific, where he compiled a distinguished war record. He was awarded the Silver Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Air Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, and the Purple Heart, awarded for gallantry in action over Australia, not for being wounded. In 1944 he returned to the United States after having completed 75 missions with the Fifth Army Air Force, in the Philippines, Java, and Australia.

Surviving are his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth W. Morse of Augusta; his wife, Mrs. Mary Farnum Morse, whom he married on December 29, 1945, in Augusta; three sons, Peter Farnum, 6, Michael Gannett, 4, and Stephen, 1; and two brothers, Edward H. '33 and John J. His fraternity was Theta Delta Chi.

1945 FREDERICK SANDERMAN DICKSON, M.D., died suddenly on Thanksgiving Day, November 28, 1957, in Detroit, Mich., where he had been a surgeon for several years. Born on August 31, 1922, in Portland, he prepared at Portland High School. At Bowdoin he played both varsity football and varsity basketball. When the Army Reserve was called up in the spring of 1943, he went along with it and studied at New Hampshire, Vermont, and Wisconsin under the ASTP programs, acquiring enough credits so that he received his Bowdoin degree without returning after the war. He continued his work at the University of Rochester Medical School and received his M.D. degree in 1948.

He interned at Homer G. Phillips Hospital in St. Louis, spent two years in Japan in the Korean War as a major with the Army Medical Corps, and then set up his practice in Detroit. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. David A. Dickson of Portland; three Bowdoin brothers, Dr. Leon A. Dickson '35, Dr. Audley D. Dickson '38, and Professor David W. D. Dickson '41; and a sister, Mrs. Lois D. Irish, the wife of Ted Irish '45.

Medical School

1900 ALFRED WILLIAM HASKELL, M.D., former director of the Maine Institution for the Blind, died on November 28, 1957, in Portland. Born in that city on February 8, 1876, he attended the local schools and following his graduation from the Maine Medical School in 1900, interned at French Hospital in New York City. He returned to Portland in 1903 and set up practice there. In 1931 Governor William T. Gardiner appointed him director of the Institution for the Blind.

Dr. Haskell was at one time a member of the Portland Board of Health. During World War I he served overseas as a major in the Army Medical Corps. He was a Mason and a past commander of the Harold T. Andrews Post of the American Legion. From 1909 until 1914 he was a clinical assistant in surgery at the Medical School, and from 1914 until 1919 he was an assistant in ophthalmology. One of Portland's earliest eye specialists, he was widely known in this field throughout Maine. He is survived by a sister, Miss Louise F. Haskell, with whom he lived, and a cousin, Merrill Haskell of Yarmouth.

1900 HENRY KINGSBURY STINSON, M.D., a retired surgeon, died in Denver, Colo., on September 4, 1957. Born on November 28, 1875, in Lowell, Mass., he prepared at Richmond Academy and following his graduation from the Maine Medical School became assistant physician at the Maine State Hospital in Augusta. In 1905 he set up practice in Palermo and from 1907 until 1916 was assistant surgeon at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Togus. After a year of general practice in Augusta, he became a major in the Army Medical Corps and served through World War I until 1923, when he became associated with the United States Veterans' Bureau. He retired from this position in 1946, after serving successively in Denver, Cleveland, and Livermore, Calif.

Surviving are a son, Thatcher M. '26; a sister, Mrs. Ellsworth B. Reed of Richmond; and two granddaughters.

1903 STILLMAN DAVID LITTLE, M.D., a retired physician, died in Phoenix, Ariz., on October 18, 1957, after a long illness. Born October 5, 1871, in Alexander, he prepared at Calais High School and following his graduation from the Maine Medical School in 1903 set up practice in Caribou. In 1911 he moved to Phoenix, where he practiced until his retirement in 1946. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Avis P. Little.

Honorary

1929 ADMIRAL WILLIAM VEAZIE PRATT, USN, Retired, former Chief of Naval Operations, died on November 25, 1957, in Chelsea Naval Hospital in Massachusetts at the age of 88. During his 47-year career in the Navy he saw active service in three wars, served the federal government on important diplomatic missions, and held the Navy's two highest posts.

Born in Belfast on February 28, 1869, Admiral Pratt prepared at the local high school and was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1889. During the Spanish-American War he was a lieutenant and took part in the blockades of Havana, Santiago de Cuba, and Puerto Rico. By World War I he had risen to the rank of captain. During that conflict he served as Assistant Chief of Naval Operations and earned two Distinguished Service Medals, one from the Army and one from the Navy.

Admiral Pratt accompanied President Woodrow Wilson to Europe after the signing of the armistice and served as a technical advisor at the Paris Peace Conference. He served as president of the Naval War College at Newport, R. I., from 1925 to 1927, when he was designated commander of Battleship Divisions with the rank of Vice Admiral. In 1929 he was named commander-in-chief of the United States Fleet and promoted to full admiral. He served as Chief of Naval Operations from 1930 until his retirement in 1933.

In January of 1941 President Roosevelt called him back to active duty for six months to expedite development of escort carriers for anti-submarine warfare. Throughout World War II he wrote on naval affairs for Newsweek Magazine.

Admiral Pratt is survived by his wife, Mrs. Louise Johnson Pratt, whom he married on April 15, 1902, in Boston; and one son, William V. jr.

When he was awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree at Bowdoin in 1929, the late President Sills read the following citation: "... Maine-born and Maine trained, with the further broader education that comes of having had Bowdoin brothers; succeeding in his present high office another Maine-born man, Admiral Hughes; now in command of all the fleets of the United States Navy; decorated for service in the Spanish-American War, in the Philippine insurrection, the Boxer insurrection, and the World War; naval expert of the American Commission at the Conference on Limitation of Armaments; one who in character, attainment, and service exemplifies the fine traditions of the American Navy; gladly honored by State and College, so many of whose sons have gone down to the sea in ships."

News of the Classes

1892 Secretary, Rev. Harry W. Kimball
20 Washburn Avenue
Needham, Mass.

Class Secretary Kimball writes, "You may be interested to know that I have received a good letter from Tom Nichols, the only other living member of the Class of 1892. He and his wife are at the Masonic Home in Utica, N. Y., and are receiving wonderful care. He is at present writing an argument for a military high school to prepare boys especially for the three U. S. academies. He also thinks Bowdoin is going too far in the Classical track and argues for four years of compulsory mathematics. By the way, Nichols won the Smyth Mathematical Prize when he was an undergraduate. For myself I am still writing my weekly column, and I preach once in a while. Still go to Masons and Rotary and in my 88th year am quite well."

1895 Hoyt Moore, having retired from the law firm of Cravath, Swaine, and Moore, effective last January 1, is now counsel to the firm.

Lexington 73, Mass.

Eunice Lady Oakes, widow of the late Sir Harry Oakes, Bart., has given Bowdoin a very handsome gift. Lady Oakes has presented her Bar Harbor home, "The Willows," to the College. The property consists of five to seven acres of land, a house of upwards of 20 rooms, a four-car garage, a tennis court, gardens, etc. The College has not yet made an estimate of the gift nor has there been time to consider fully the purpose for which it might be used. However, in accepting it on behalf of Bowdoin, President Coles said, "The College is most grateful for this further demonstration of Lady Oakes' thoughtfulness and generosity."

1897 Secretary, George E. Carmichael

A shaft of brown Italian marble holding a bronze bust of former Governor Percival Baxter has been set in place in the rotunda of the State House Hall of Flags at Augusta. Walter Hancock of Gloucester, Mass., sculptured the bust, which was later cast in bronze, when he was President of the American Academy of Art in Rome, Italy. The base for the bust carries the inscription, "Percival Proctor Baxter, Governor, 1921-1925. Sculptured for the State of Maine by order of the Maine Legislature of 1955. Walter Hancock, Sc."

At the Fifty-sixth Annual Meeting and Banquet of the Society of Mayflower Descendants in the State of Maine, held at the Columbia Hotel in Portland on November 21, the 337th anniversary of the signing of the Compact in the Cabin of the Mayflower, Clarence Eaton was re-elected State Secretary and State Historian; State Senator Benjamin Butler '28 was re-elected State Elder; and Owen Brewster '09, with Mrs. Brewster, sat at the head table with the officers and was one of the speakers at the banquet.

1899 Secretary, Edward R. Godfrey
172 Kenduskeag Avenue
Bangor

The Class Secretary has submitted the following report:

"Ned Marston still lives in North Anson but has spent his winters in St. Petersburg, Fla., since his retirement from medical practice in 1950. On his way south this winter, he stopped overnight with his cousin, Charlie Merrill, at the latter's home in Kennebunkport. Both Ned and Charlie are retired M.D.'s.

"Pop Towle lives in Exeter, N. H., as he has for many years, but he leaves there occasionally to visit children and grandchildren who live elsewhere. One of his sons-in-law, Ralph Gogue, has accepted a professorship in psychology at Princeton, his work to begin there at the opening of the second semester.

"Tom Merrill is on a fund-raising drive for the building of a home for the aged in Richland County, Montana.

"Win Smith is another '99 retired M.D. who spends his winters in Florida. Win and his wife live in Baltimore but spend their summers in Hebron, N. H., and their winters at Pompano Beach, Fla. The weather at Pompano Beach has not been to their liking of late."

1900 Secretary, Robert S. Edwards
Milton 86, Mass.

Fred Lee recently wrote, "I live a quiet life with my sister in a home my family has owned for 52 years. My retirement from active church duty took place ten years ago. I do supply work near my home and visit my old friends on occasion. Drop in and see me, classmates." Fred's address is P.O. Box 184, Damariscotta.

1903 Secretary, Clement F. Robinson
P.O. Box 438

Clement Robinson, best known to Alumnus readers as the author of our feature column, "Looking Backward," published an interesting article in the April, 1957, issue of The Fossil. The article, entitled "The Juvenile Key," deals

Bowdoin To Share In Special Education Supplement

A special supplement on U. S. higher education in 1958 is coming in the April issue of the ALUMNUS. Alumni magazine editors and publishers throughout the country have joined in this first cooperative effort to tell the story of American higher education in a dramatic and panoramic way. In 32 pages of pictures and text, the supplement will present the immense diversity of higher education in its variety of objectives, its problems, its restlessness, and its new approaches. The text has been written by a group of alumni editors who have been at work for more than a year. One of the country's leading photographers, Erich Hartmann of Magnum, has taken the pictures. The supplement will appear in more than 150 alumni magazines whose combined circulation is 1,300,000.

with the work of a nineteenth-century Brunswick printer named Joseph Griffin, who published a weekly magazine of that name for six years, beginning in 1830.

1904 Secretary, Wallace M. Powers
37-28 80th Street

John Frost has become associated with the firm of DeForest, Elder, and Mulreany of 20 Exchange Place, New York 5, N. Y., as counsel, effective January 1, 1958.

1905 Secretary, Stanley Williams
2220 Waverley Street
Palo Alto, Calif.

Classmates and friends of the late Professor Stanley Chase will be saddened to hear of the death of his widow, Mrs. Helen Johnson Chase, on November 29. Away from her Brunswick home for a short visit with friends in Sacø, Mrs. Chase was stricken suddenly. She was the daughter of the late Professor Henry Johnson '74.

Classmates and friends of the late Kenneth H. Damren will be pleased to know that a group of his friends and associates from Camp Allen have gotten out a very handsome memorial album in remembrance of him. Those who knew Ken will be interested to read the inscription from the first page of this booklet: "In remembrance of Kenneth H. Damren, 1882-1957, for twelve years President and beloved Leader of Camp Allen; Faithful and Devoted Friend of the Blind; Tireless in his efforts to make this place a haven of happiness and inspiration — his friends dedicate this memorial. August, 1957."

9 Oak Avenue

Plans for the Fiftieth Reunion are being made by a group including Bill Crowley, Rufe Stetson, Carl Robinson, and the Class Secretary. Details will be spelled out soon.

1909 Secretary, Irving L. Rich
11 Mellen Street
Portland 4

Class Secretary Bud Rich sends in the following report: "Charles Bouve is as loyal as they make them. He says he is O.K. — sends best wishes to all the class. He is at 12 Hancock Street, Boston.

"Tom Ginn and family celebrated the Thanksgiving holiday with the Dan Koughan family. Dan spent about six months in Maine during the summer and fall season, and Tom says he had a thrilling experience attending the Beta Convention at Poland Spring.

"The Ernest Pottles are now permanently located at R. D. Beattystown, Hackettstown, N. J. Ernest wishes to be remembered to all the Class."

A further report from Class Secretary Rich: "U. S. Supreme Court Justice Harold Burton

AND FOREIGN HOUSE COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE COMMERCE

"Polar Bears" is a good nickname for Bowdoin athletic teams. Admiral Robert E. Peary of the Class of 1877 was the first man in history to reach the North Pole, on April 6, 1909. Congressman Robert Hale of the Class of 1910, who represents Maine's First District in Washington, became one of the first men in history, and the first Bowdoin man ever, to see both Poles. On November 10 he flew over the North Pole and on November 24 over the South Pole, on both occasions with the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. His comment—"One can now visit the North Pole in pajamas, but the South is still something to think about."

presided over his family's twelfth annual Thanksgiving dinner in a private dining room of the Hotel Cleveland, Cleveland, Ohio. 'We are gathering here to give thanks for the blessings we have received in this nation,' the former Cleveland mayor told a reporter. 'I wouldn't try to list all the blessings because the dinner would get cold.' At the family table with Harold and his wife, Selma, were the former Barbara Burton, who now lives in Beaver Falls, Pa., with her husband, H. C. Weidner, and their son, James, 15; William Burton '37, his wife, Nancy, and their three daughters, Susan, 15, Betsey Lea, 13, and Diane, 12; the former Deborah Burton, her husband, Wallace Adler, and their three daughters, June, 14, Christine, 11, and Wendy, 7; and Robert Burton '43, his wife, Sally, and their children, John, 2, and Jane Ellen, 10 months."

1910 Secretary, E. Curtis Matthews
Piscataqua Savings Bank
Portsmouth, N. H.

Senator Robert Hale sends us an interesting communique: "I flew over the North Pole on November 10 and over the South Pole on November 24 — first Bowdoin man to reach both axial extremities. One can now visit the North Pole in pajamas, but the South Pole is still something to think about!" (He ends his cool communique with "Warmest regards!")

Merrill Hill says, "Retired from teaching at English High School in Boston in October of 1953. I carry on a small publishing business, by mail, in language charts. My wife and I spend the winter in the small town of St. Cloud, Fla."

30 East 42nd Street
New York, N. Y.

Blaine McKusick writes, "Retired. Expect to change my residence to the state of Maine if I can locate a house."

James Pierce has been named to the Maine Industrial Building Authority. He is President of the First National Bank of Houlton.

Classmates and friends will grieve to learn of the death of John Roberts of Brunswick on December 10.

Boothbay Harbor

The Class Secretary has submitted the following comprehensive report: "Ed Leigh writes (from Seattle, Wash.), 'We recently moved the business — Universal Plastics Company — into a new location. I am active from the standpoint that I come to work every day, but son Frank is the man behind the works.' Ed and Mrs. Leigh have five grandchildren.

"Joe O'Neal and his wife are wintering in York, Ala., on a 4,000-acre farm, a big acreage of pines with lots of deer and other game. Joe sticks to hunting squirrels. Two tornadoes missed the place but heavy rainfall resulted. Temperatures have run from 28 to 85 above zero. Sounds like an interesting life.

"Pewt Purington comes through with some wise and caustic comments on the position of the United States in the missile race. His letter was accompanied by the minutes (a sizable volume) of the Institute of Radio Engineers which was held recently. It contained an article by Pewt and Dr. J. H. Hammond jr. of the Hammond Research Institute of Gloucester, Mass., on 'The History of Some Foundations of Modern Radio Electronic Technology.' The Class Secretary must confess that he barely made one semester of physics, but he read the article and could understand parts of it. The report is now in the hands of a high school boy who is 'eating it up.'

"Burleigh Rodick is coming out in '58 with another book called Six April Days: The Story of Appomatox. Burleigh has uncovered some very interesting material on General Joshua Chamberlain (1852) of the 20th Maine Volunteers who was promoted on the battlefield by General Grant. The book, like his former work, The American Constitutional Custom, involved many years of research.

"Judge and Mrs. Hal Andrews made a flying trip after Commencement to San Diego to visit their daughter, Priscilla, and her family and then went on to the Hawaiian Islands for a two-weeks vacation.

"Don Weston is still working with the Textron Lumber Company in Allentown, Pa., as an estimator. Their twin sons, Robert and Richard, live near New York City. Don has five grandsons, one of them slated for Bowdoin in 1975.

"Tige Hale sends no news but says, 'I want to tell you how much Mrs. Hale and I enjoyed the Reunion Report. The letter was swell and the pictures most interesting.'

"Maurice Hill from Rockland writes, 'I am partly retired, and Mrs. Hill and I live quietly in Rockland. I attended a meeting of the Knox-Lincoln-Waldo County Bowdoin Club in November. Saw Kid Vannah who told me of the Reunion and some of the fellows he met there.'

"Johnnie Miffin says that he is Clerk of the Session of the First Presbyterian Church, Vice President of the S.A.R. (Niagara Falls Chapter), and also Vice President of the Retired Men's Service Club. His hobbies are contract bridge and golf.

"Dr. Kenneth Churchill, practicing medicine in Lebanon, N. H., is still at it because doctors of medicine do not have social security benefits and there are only three M.D.'s in active practice in the city. Lebanon is the first community in New Hampshire to establish a community college which is now in its second year with an enrollment of 126 students. Ken also worked on a committee which brought about a manager form of government, effective this January.

"Ned Morss has moved to 41 Russet Lane, Melrose, where the Morsses have purchased a one-level ranch-type house. He and Mrs. Morss took off in December for a flying trip around the world, taking in Lisbon, Rome, Athens, Istanbul, Karachi, Ceylon, Singapore, Bangkok, Hong Kong, Manila, Tokyo, Hawaii, and San Francisco. They expect to be home by the middle of February.

"Ned Kent of Medomak had a period of hospitalization at Damariscotta in November. He has returned home after securing a new housekeeper. His daughter, Sally, is a senior at Lincoln Academy."

Classmates and friends extend their deep sympathy to Dr. Herbert Lombard, whose mother, Mrs. Capitola Fitch Lombard, widow of Dr. Herbert A. Lombard M'86, died on December 27 in Bridgton at the age of 90.

Classmates and friends will grieve to learn of the death of John Sullivan on December 20 in Brookline, Mass.

1913 Secretary, Luther G. Whittier
R.F.D. 2
Farmington

Rex Conant heads the 45th Reunion Committee. Reunion headquarters will be at Lookout Point with Conference Room A in the Union the campus gathering spot.

Chester Abbott is the President of the new First Portland National Bank, the product of a merger of the former First Portland National Bank and the National Bank of Commerce of Portland.

Senator Paul Douglas has been awarded $1,000 which is given annually for meritorious public service by the Sidney Hillman Foundation. Paul, in turn, turned the money over to four organizations: $500 to the legal defense fund of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and $500 to be divided among the American Friends Service Committee, the Catholic Council on Working Life, and the American Jewish Committee. He said his hope was to "put the award to constructive use in bettering the relations between races, classes, and religions."

Clifton Page retired from teaching in the English Department of The William Penn Charter School in Philadelphia last June. The November issue of the Penn Charter Alumni News carried a fine tribute to him. It said, in part, "This scholarly New England gentleman, who retired in June, has contributed richly to the English Department, to the Dramatic Club, and to the life at Penn Charter for 13 productive years.

"Mr. Page's plans for retirement have very little to do with Webster's definition of the verb 'to retire.' They include the pleasant aspects, 'privacy' and 'protection' (from the daily time schedule) but have tremendous scope for activity. After a year of travel Mr. Page plans to write and probably do some teaching.

"Penn Charter's loss is overshadowed by the realization of the full life ahead for Mr. and Mrs. Page. They have the pleasure of remembering the past accomplishments and possess the intellectual background for a stimulating future." (Incidentally, the article also included reference to Clifton's many fine years of service as teacher and administrator at the Taft, Lawrenceville, and Indianapolis Park Schools prior to his joining the Penn Charter faculty in 1944.)

1914 Secretary, Alfred E. Gray
Francestown, N. H.

Warren Eddy was featured in a recent publication of the Maine Savings Bank, of which he is the Manager of the Real Estate Department. Since joining the bank's staff in 1934, he has raised their total mortgage loans from 7½ millions to more than 41 millions of dollars.

Warren and Marion have three children: Warren jr. '43, an orthopedic surgeon now practicing in Arizona; Harry '45, who is actively connected with the operations of the Universal Laundry in Portland; and Mrs. Barbara Nowlin of Lynchburg, Va. They also have ten grandchildren.

Classmates and friends will grieve to learn of the death of Henry Hall on December 27 in Skowhegan.

Earle Thompson, formerly President of West Penn Electric Company, is Chairman of the Board of Directors and chief executive officer of the concern.

1915 Secretary, Harold E. Verrill
436 Exchange Street
Portland

Classmates and friends will grieve to learn of the death of Alfred Willett in Fort Myers, Fla., on September 20, 1957.

1916 Secretary, Dwight Sayward
415 Congress Street
Portland

The Class Secretary recently submitted the following comprehensive report:

"When the editor of the trade journal, Publisher's Auxiliary, recently wrote an editorial condoning incorrect spelling, especially in newspapers, Editor Paul Niven of one of Maine's liveliest and sprightliest newspapers picked up the gage and cudgel and battled strenuously in defense of English I and Wilmot Brookings Mitchell. 'Poor spellers are lazy,' was his battle cry, 'and they ain't no excuse for them.' In an exclusive interview with this correspondent, Editor Niven reaffirmed his pristine faith in good spelling and the principles of unity, emphasis, and coherence. Paul readily relegated his antagonist to the position of a very minor auxiliary.

"The Bowdoin Forever Fund, established a year ago, to be tapped on the occasion of the 200th anniversary of the graduation of Bowdoin's Best-Loved Class, now stands at $505. Such is the power of compound interest that the Fund will be in the neighborhood of a quarter of a million dollars by the time of our 200th, when there will be a special observance at our headquarters, just the other side of the pearly gates.

"Honorary Member Herbie Brown has completed ten years as Managing Editor of the New England Quarterly, a publication devoted to belles lettres and the propagation of the faith that English should be spoke just so.

"John Fitzgerald has been elected a trustee of the Maine Osteopathic Hospital.

"Ned Garland's daughter, Barbara, was married on November 2 to David Clinkenbeard of Seattle, now practicing law in Boston. Ned's son, David '50, has been admitted to the Massachusetts bar.

"Don George went hunting last fall, returning empty-handed, without even a glimpse of a deer, only to learn that during his absence a big buck had been feeding in his garden.

"Hobie Hargraves has again given up smoking.

"Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hawes will be sojourning in Nassau in March.

"Doc Haywood's son, Ben '51, passed the Florida bar examinations in August and is now associated with a leading law firm in Miami.

"Alden Head jr. '56 is in the Army.

"Larry Irving spent the summer exploring the Porcupine River area between Alaska and the Yukon Territory, just about at the Arctic Circle, for the purpose of studying the distribution and adaptation of animals in that frozen north section. The expedition was sponsored by the Public Health Service and the Arctic Institute of North America. This fall he has been at the National Museum in Washington studying the results of the expedition.

"Hayward Parsons has had a complete recovery from his illness of nearly two years ago; for several months he has been at his office full time — except during the striped bass season.

"The Seal is the name of the new house organ of the Second Bank-State Street Trust Company in Boston; the front page of Vol. I, No. 1, carries a good picture of the bank's president, who has changed remarkably little in the past forty years. Bill's picture also appears with the bank's official softball team, champions of the Boston Bank and Insurance Softball League, but the accompanying story fails to report what position he played.

"Sixteeners were not at all surprised to learn that Bowdoin ranked seventh in the Chicago Tribune's study of all the men's colleges in the country, and they take pride in their contribution toward that high standing.

"Earle Stratton is Assistant Treasurer of St. Anne's Episcopal Church in Lowell, Mass., and is treasurer of the church building fund. He's still active in the American Legion, and last year was delegate to the national convention in Los Angeles. On top of that he was recently elected Commissaire Intendant of Middlesex County Voiture of the 40 and 8 Société. Sixteeners travelling in the vicinity of Tyngsboro, Mass., are advised to note a war memorial engineered by our Earle with the help of the Legion and the Village Improvement Society, of which Earle is president. In between times he operates a poultry farm and no doubt has Chicken Every Sunday. His farm, he writes, is 95 acres, completely surrounded by sunshine in summer and snow in winter.

"Henry Wood is spending the winter in the Virgin Islands.

"Willard Woodman, who modestly announces the arrival of his third grandchild (Marion Griswold Ely), offers the belief that the 1916 Ivy is just to the right of Memorial Hall's front door. Can anybody else add to the controversy? Herb Foster and Don Edwards both want to know.

"Paul Niven's son, Ken '46, has arrived at his new post in Moscow, the sole correspondent behind the Iron Curtain for the Columbia Broadcasting System. He can be heard and seen on CBS radio and television stations throughout the United States."

John Baxter represented Maine corn canners at a special conference held in Boston on January 9.

On December 1 more than 500 persons gathered in South Portland for the dedication of the $650,000 Beal Memorial Gym. This building was named in honor of the late George E. Beal, for 36 years a coach, a teacher, a principal, and a superintendent in the area. Mr. Kermit Nickerson, Deputy Commissioner of Education, said, in part, "It is fitting that the gymnasium is named for one who dedicated his life to South Portland education . . . to honor in this way one who did so much for his community." Donald Beal '41 thanked the citizens of South Portland, on behalf of his mother, Mrs. George E. Beal, for the fine tribute which had been paid to George.

Mrs. Adriel Bird has given the Bowdoin College Library a valuable first edition of Charles Dickens'

Little Dorrit in the rare paperbound twenty parts in which it originally appeared during 1855-1857. She has also given the Library a correspondence of nearly one hundred letters from Dickens' illustrators and editors, comprising some 200 holograph pages, which contains interesting bits of Dickens lore and recollections plus technical consideration of characters, color, and circumstances of illustration.

An additional report from Secretary Sayward: "Sam Fraser left for the Philippines early in January and will remain there until mid-April taking care of his varied business interests. Mrs. Sam, who has been active all fall recruiting Cancer Crusade teams in southern Aroostook, will spend the winter with daughter Ann in Port Chester, N. J.

"Sixteeners will remember Al Kinsey's reports on a Certain Subject and will remember that in his studies of sex practices in foreign countries he sought to bring into the United States certain publications and pictures necessary to the completion of his work. Deciding that this material was pornographic, the U. S. Government forbade its entry. Al brought suit against the government, and just recently, more than a year after his death, a Federal Court has ruled that the material is scientific and educational and should not be barred.

"Larry and Mireille Hart proudly hail the arrival of grandson James Lawrence Oaks, son of daughter Ann, born the night before Thanksgiving. The middle name is in honor of grandpa himself."

1917 Secretary, Noel C. Little
8 College Street
Brunswick

Percy Crane, Director of Admissions at the University of Maine, has announced that he will retire on June 30, at the end of the academic year. He has held this position for 21 years. General Willard Wyman was the subject of a searching editorial in the December 20 issue of The Daily Press of Newport News, Va. Indicating that the general reaches the "normal" retirement age in March, the editorial, entitled "Good Brain Being Lost?", pointed out that the commander of the U. S. Continental Army Command holds a very vital position, and General Wyman, with his great knowledge, experience, and ability, should not leave that job merely because of age. The editors concluded by saying, "General Wyman undoubtedly will hear many platitudes regarding his impending retirement. Our point is simply this: He is the type of military commander we can ill afford to lose at this time. Old soldiers are old soldiers, and General Wyman is not one of them."

Miss Marilyn Zeitler, daughter of the Emerson Zeitlers, was married to Mr. Joseph Carl Berg of West Duxbury, Mass., on November 23 in Brunswick. Emerson Zeitler '50, brother of the bride, was best man. Mrs. Berg, a graduate of Lesley College, is presently teaching in Duxbury, Mass. Mr. Berg, a veteran of World War II, is employed at the Hingham Naval Base.

1921 Secretary, Norman W. Haines
Savings Bank Building
Reading, Mass.

President Asa Knowles of the University of Toledo had an article published in the October (1957) issue of The Educational Record, the publication of the American Council on Education. Entitled "Emerging Features of Tomorrow's Higher Education," it was based on an address which Asa delivered in May to the Michigan College Association and the Michigan College Presidents Association.

The editors regret their error in reporting that Asa Knowles received an honorary degree from the University of Rhode Island last June. He did receive such a degree from Northeastern University, as we reported in August. Perhaps our confusion arose from the fact that Asa is a former Dean of Rhode Island, not to mention the fact that a Rhode Island faculty member was honored by Northeastern at the same June exercises.

Dr. Ben Whitcomb, President of the Bowdoin Club of Connecticut, wrote a letter to the editor of the Hartford Courant which was published in the December 19 issue of the newspaper. Stressing the need for complete education, in the humanities as well as the sciences, Ben quoted liberally from speeches by President Coles. Particularly thought-provoking is Dr. Coles' statement, "What ever mistake was made in respect to our efforts for the earth satellite program, it was not a mistake of scientists but rather a mistake of statesmen, politicians, Congressmen, and all other men whose thinking directs our national destiny. In part the failure is traced to anti-intellectualism — the refusal of 'practical men' to consider seriously and sincerely the theorizing of men who 'never met a pay roll.' In part, it is evidence of national misdirection — where we reward the salesman to a far greater extent than we reward the thinker, where we hold the material far above the intellectual."

1931 Secretary, Rev. Albert E. Jenkins

The Reverend and Mrs. Kenrick Baker sent out a detailed Christmas-time letter from the Fellowship Center at le Chambon-sur-Lignon, Haute Loire, France, where they have been for the past twenty months. They said, in part, "In our work in the Fellowship Center we have come to realize that things must move at a different tempo in France from what they would in the States. We are amazed at the profundity of thought which goes into the making of all decisions. In Church life this is particularly true. A few weeks ago we attended the meeting of the Synod of this region of France. This year all the synods of France are studying two questions: The Nature of Church Membership and the Church, and The Sick and Healing. Each of the topics is studied from a profound theological point of view, issuing in reports to be submitted to the National Synod, which in turn will issue further reports. At all levels this kind of serious philosophical or theological reflection goes on."

Tom Bartlett writes, "Sure was sorry to learn of Fred Dickson's death. He was one swell guy."

"We're still five strong here in Chicago — two boys, 10 and 8, and our girl is 6. They sure grow like weeds. His appointment, which was made in late October at the annual convention in Indianapolis, Ind., is for the First Judicial Circuit of Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island.

Dick addressed the Small Loan Companies Loan Association at the Columbia Hotel in Portland in November. As U. S. Referee in Bankruptcy, Dick's knowledgeable and informed statements were both sobering and interesting. He said that small loan companies in Maine are opening the door to the bankruptcy court for many persons by indiscriminate extension of credit. His suggestion to loan company officials was reported by the press to be that they should "be more discriminate in extending credit to persons in the low-salaried brackets. You folks have a moral obligation to assist in every way to reduce the number of bankruptcy cases."

On their way back to Brunswick, Messrs. McIntire and Hokanson stopped in East Orange, N. J., where they represented the College at a meeting of the Bowdoin Club of New Jersey. Following a social hour, dinner, and the transaction of club business, the visitors showed a number of color slides of Bowdoin and undergraduate life.

Professor Stephen Minot attended the meetings of the College English Association, held at American International College in Springfield, Mass., on October 26.

Director of Athletics Malcolm Morrell '24, Coaches Adam Walsh and Daniel MacFayden, and Administrative Assistant Robert Cross '45 represented Bowdoin at the business conference of the Maine Intercollegiate Athletic Association on November 12. The meetings were held at the Elmwood Hotel in Waterville.

Director of Athletics and Mrs. Morrell '24 were in Philadelphia the week of January 6, where Mr. Morrell attended the meetings of the National Collegiate Conference on Athletics.

Psychology Professor Merle Moskowitz acted as fund drive chairman for the Brunswick area in the appeal of the Maine Association for Retarded Children, which began on November 18.

Professor James Moulton is the author of an article entitled "Sound Production in the Spiny Lobster Panulirus argus (Latreille)" which appeared in the Biological Bulletin of October, 1957 (vol. 113, pp. 286-295). This constitutes part of the report on work done at Bimini in the Bahama Islands during 1956.

Professor Norman Munn, Chairman of the Department of Psychology, addressed the Beta Chapter of the Delta Kappa Gamma Sorority in Brunswick on January 11. He showed his new sound color film, "South Pacific Holiday," and told of his trip last summer to Australia and the islands of the South Pacific.

Professors Edward Pols and Walter Solmitz of the Department of Philosophy attended the annual meeting of the Eastern Division of the American Philosophical Association, as well as that of the Society for Ancient Greek Philosophy, held at Harvard University from December 27 to 29.

Mr. Hubert Shaw, Director of Admissions, addressed a meeting of Bowdoin alumni and invited guests in Worcester, Mass., on November 21. The meeting was held at Worcester Academy, of which William Piper '31 is Headmaster. The guests were principals and guidance counsellors from a number of preparatory schools and high schools in the region, as well as 11th and 12th grade students who had shown interest in Bowdoin or in other small liberal arts colleges of the same type. Mr. Shaw also gave a showing of color slides of the College.

Mr. Shaw was one of three college admissions officers to be honored by Thayer Academy (Brain-tree, Mass.) on November 14. He was presented with a specially inscribed citation because he had attended every Thayer Academy College Day program since 1950.

On December 2 Mr. Shaw appeared on television as a panel member in a program which was presented by educational television station WGBH in Boston. The program, which was entitled "Why Choose the Liberal Arts College," was part of a series, College and You.

In addition to his many trips to various secondary schools, public and private, Mr. Shaw has been a guest of a number of Bowdoin alumni groups, including the ones in Essex County (Mass.) on November 22 and in the Knox-Lincoln-Waldo County area on November 15.

Dr. James Storer, Associate Professor of Economics, spoke on "Maine Business Indicators" at a meeting of the Southern Maine Chapter of the National Association of Accountants. The meeting was held on November 21 in Brunswick.

Sociology Professor Burton Taylor spoke to the Central District Nurses Association at Lewiston on November 14. He discussed the value of human relations.

Miss Joan Thayer, daughter of Professor and Mrs. Albert Thayer '22, was pictured in an article entitled "A Room to Grow In," which appeared in the February (1958) issue of TV-Radio Mirror. The article concerns a television program named "Romper Room." It appears on many TV stations, in various local versions, and Miss Thayer is featured in the programming from New York City on Channel 5.

Dr. David Walker, Assistant Professor of Government, delivered a lecture on "The Meanings of American Citizenship" to the Citizenship Laboratory Class at Bates College on January 9.

Dr. William Whiteside, Assistant Professor of History, delivered a lecture on December 10, in the Lounge of the Moulton Union, which was entitled "Alexander Hamilton Reinterpreted." The talk was sponsored by the Caledonian Society, a student organization devoted to the study of Scottish culture and the careers of Americans of Scottish origin.

Former Faculty

Dr. Ronald Bridges '30, Tallman Professor in the spring of 1954, recipient of Bowdoin's honorary Doctor of Divinity degree in June of 1954, and presently Chief of Religious Information for the United States Information Service, gave the opening talk of the season to the Men's Club of the First Parish Church of Brunswick on December 5.

Associate Professor Ralph Childs, formerly Instructor and Assistant Professor of English at Bowdoin, is spending a one-year sabbatical away from Cooper Union, where he is a member of the faculty.

Dr. Edgar Folk, formerly Assistant Professor of Biology at Bowdoin and presently professor at the University of Iowa Medical School, is spending the year studying at the University of London.

The Portland Press Herald printed a fine tribute to Mrs. Clara Hayes on the occasion of her eightieth birthday, January 13. Known to several generations of Bowdoin men, Mrs. Hayes served as secretary to the late President K. C. M. Sills '01 from 1918 until he retired in 1952. Mrs. Hayes is still very active, and the newspaper writer pointed out that she "pines for something to do aside from the routine household chores. She does typing occasionally for Bowdoin students and would like to do more, although she will undertake nothing that must be turned out in a hurry."

Honorary

1911 Friends, associates, and former colleagues of Dr. Payson Smith, formerly Commissioner of Education in Massachusetts and in Maine, and a Professor Emeritus of Education of the University of Maine, extend their deep sympathy to him as they learn of the death of his wife, Mrs. Carrie Smith, on December 16 in Portland. In addition to Dr. Smith, she is survived by a son, Norman S., and two sisters.

1947 Mr. Cadwallader Washburn was honored by a reception at the Atlanta Art Association Galleries recently on the occasion of his 90th birthday. An artist of international reputation, Mr. Washburn's etchings and paintings are in such places as the British Museum, the Metropolitan Museum, and the National Gallery.

1948 The Reverend Hilda Ives was guest speaker for the Boscawen Women's Club and the Ladies Aid Society of the First Congregational Church in Boscawen, N. H., on December 12.

1955 Sir Roger Makins, formerly British Ambassador to the United States, has returned to England, where his address is Sherfield Court, near Basingstoke, Hants. He will be best remembered by the many Bowdoin men who heard his marvellous speech, graceful, charming, poignant, and thoughtful, at the Commencement Dinner in June of 1955.

To Build A Better Bowdoin

A NEW BOWDOIN BROCHURE was published in January by the Vice President's office and initial distribution made to the Trustees and Overseers, the Faculty, the members of the Committee on Bequests and Trusts, and the Associates.

Entitled To Build a Better Bowdoin, this illustrated two-color publication is nine inches by twelve inches in size and features pictures of the 1878 Gateway and the Chapel on the front and back covers. Illustrating the text are pictures of a typical Chapel choir, a conference with a professor, Commencement, and architect's tentative sketches of several proposed Bowdoin buildings.

This brochure outlines the various phases of Bowdoin's Development Program, which seeks to add $15,000,000 in capital funds by 1967. Alumni will recall that this program was one of the subjects discussed in a letter to all alumni from President Coles last July.

Highlighting the program is the urgent need to increase and even to double faculty salaries. Even after the generous grants from The Ford Foundation announced late in 1955, the average Bowdoin faculty member still has 23% less purchasing power than in 1940, and this at a time when the competition for able teachers has become more intense. Approximately $5,300,000 is needed as additional endowment for faculty salaries.

The first step in the building program will be to seek funds for a Library addition to provide space for more book stacks, studies, and seminar rooms. Other buildings required during the next decade include an addition to the Sargent Gymnasium and new dormitories. Coleman Hall, already under construction as a gift from Mrs. Jane Coleman Pickard, is the first step in the realization of this building program, the total cost of which will approach $4,000,000.

Additions to scholarship funds are essential to insure that a Bowdoin education continues to be made available to highly qualified students regardless of their economic status. Scholarship aid will require $2,000,000 in additional endowment.

General operations and maintenance of Bowdoin's physical plant need the income from $3,900,000 more in endowment funds.

The goal of this long-range program is to raise these capital funds from corporations, foundations, and friends of the College as well as from a select number of alumni. The Alumni Fund will continue to seek annual gifts to help meet Bowdoin's current operating expenses.

In his introduction to the brochure, President Coles says, in part, "Our integrated two-fold program sets these goals: the strengthening of the present College and the assimilation of recent gains by adding endowment immediately needed; and the orderly, planned enlargement of the student body from 775 to 925, requiring the augmenting of capital funds for endowment and buildings."

The brochure was prepared under the direction of the Committee on Development of the Governing Boards, including, from the Board of Trustees, Earle S. Thompson '14, Chairman, and Charles A. Cary '10; from the Board of Overseers, Roscoe H. Hupper '07, Wallace C. Philoon '05, Owen Brewster '09, Sanford B. Cousins '20, A. Shirley Gray '18, Louis B. McCarthy '19.

Although alumni are not being generally solicited, all alumni can be of great assistance by suggesting potential sources of new funds for the College. As President Coles wrote in his alumni letter last July:

"All alumni will be asked to assist by being ever mindful of Bowdoin's needs, by interesting possible benefactors in Bowdoin, and by keeping the officers of the College informed of what they think might be developed as possible sources of funds. . . ."

THE MAINE STATE CAPITOL BUST OF GOVERNOR BAXTER

IN 1955 THE MAINE State Legislature "authorized and directed a Special Recess Commission to erect a suitable memorial in appreciation by the people of the State of Maine for the service and altruistic generosity of Honorable Percival P. Baxter of Portland to the people of the State of Maine".

In due course the Commission arranged for the preparation of a bronze portrait bust, and Governor Baxter, whose term was from 1921-1925, went to Rome where the bust and pedestal of Italian marble were made. These were placed in the Hall of Flags in the State Capitol at Augusta by order of Governor Edmund S. Muskie, the State Art Commission and the Special Legislative Commission.

The sculptor is Walker Hancock of Rome and Gloucester, Massachusetts, who is President of the American Academy of Art in Rome.

Governor Baxter graduated from Bowdoin in 1898. After taking the degree of Bachelor of Laws at the Harvard Law School he engaged in the private practice of law. Since the expiration of his term as Governor he has travelled extensively but makes his home in Portland.

In addition to other public benefactions, Governor Baxter has given to the State a tract of wild forest land of 193,254 acres in Northern Maine, which by state law is "forever to be held in trust by the State for the people of Maine for public park, public forest and public recreational purposes and as a sanctuary for wild beasts and birds".

Governor Baxter also has given to the State of Maine Mackworth Island with a causeway thereto, in the Town of Falmouth, comprising one hundred acres, on which he and the State have erected a group of eight new buildings for the accommodation and education of the State's deaf children, to be known by act of the Legislature as "The Governor Baxter School for the Deaf".

From The Society Of Bowdoin Women:

Our Society extends through you to each and every lady in your family a very cordial invitation to join us in our activities during Commencement this year. All day Friday and on Saturday morning, they will find our Headquarters in the Gibson Hall of Music a pleasant and comfortable place for rest and relaxation and a convenient place to meet their friends. Hostesses will be on hand to welcome them and to give them information.

On both Friday and Saturday, luncheons for all visiting women are sponsored by our Society. These are served while the Alumni are having their own special luncheons. The Friday luncheon — last year 240 members were present — is followed by a brief Annual Meeting of the Society. At the Saturday luncheon we entertain as our special guests the mothers and wives of the Graduating Class.

The Society of Bowdoin Women was founded in 1922 "to provide an organization in which women with a common bond of Bowdoin loyalty may, by becoming better acquainted with the College and with each other, work together to serve the College in every possible way." We try to accomplish this purpose by offering hospitality to all women visiting the campus during Commencement, by providing funds biennially for lectures at the College by outstanding women, by adding to the "Society of Bowdoin Women Foundation" created by us in 1924 (the income of which is administered by the College and used for general college purposes), and by making other gifts of varied nature.

Our annual dues are only $1.00 and any woman who loves a Bowdoin man or Bowdoin itself is eligible to join. It would be wonderful if we could boast of a member in the family of every Bowdoin alumnus. Our treasurer is Mrs. Gilbert M. Elliott jr., 15 Vaughan Street, Portland 4.

We urge you to let us know if the ladies in your family are planning to attend Commencement this June and if they would like to assist us in any way. We are looking forward to greeting them at Bowdoin this June.

Cordially yours,

ELIZABETH N. COUSINS, President

American Higher Education 1958

Bound into this issue of the ALUMNUS is a 32-page supplement entitled American Higher Education 1958. Simultaneously it is going to some 1,350,000 alumni within the covers of more than 150 other alumni magazines.

Born of a comment to some top American Alumni Council editors by one of America's greatest editors, to wit: "You are doing a good job telling the story of your own campuses . . . but what about higher education in general? What is it doing for the individual and the nation?", American Higher Education 1958 is the result of pooled editorial efforts to answer those queries through discussion of a dozen major educational issues and problems.

THE COVER

The cover and inside front cover are devoted to three pictures of the Maine State Capitol bust of Governor Percival P. Baxter of the Class of 1898 and to an account of how the bust came to be made.

The three pictures were all taken by Mr. Arthur G. Rogers, who also flew Governor Baxter to Rome, where sculptor Walker Hancock made the bust. The cover itself shows the unfinished bust, Mr. Hancock, and Governor Baxter. The inside front cover shows (at the left) the bust when it was almost completed. At the right the finished bronze bust stands on its Italian marble pedestal in the Hall of Flags in the State Capitol at Augusta.

SCAPEGOATS FOR SPUTNIK

by

President JAMES S. COLES

WHEN SPUTNIK WAS LAUNCHED and coursing its trajectory over the United States some fifteen times each day, the thought lurked in many minds that hydrogen bombs might be dropped on America with similar devices. To a much greater degree than anyone had anticipated, Sputnik itself was an explosive bomb, in that its launching has had repercussions in America reverberating far more than any actual explosion. The Russians quickly found a dog for Sputnik and launched Pupnick. In the United States we hysterically searched for a scapegoat for Sputnik, and, in a torrent of national pride, launched — in what Crawford Greenewalt calls the “furore set off by the satellites” — a sudden outburst of concern for intellectualism, at least so far as science is concerned.

The reverberations are resounding throughout the nation, and apparently the scapegoat is our educational system from sub-primary grades through high school, college, and graduate school. The apprehensive, startled cry is: “What is wrong with American education?”

In any explosion there is much fire and confusion, pressure and shock, brick bats, dust, and smoke. After an explosion, it takes a time for the smoke and confusion to clear, and for some of the debris to be removed in order that the actual situation may be accurately assessed. As alumni of a college which has long held the intellectual life and the life of the mind foremost over all else, I know you are concerned that whatever is wrong be corrected.

Just what is the situation in the United States with respect to education? Are we deficient in the training of scientists? Have we failed in training as able scientists as Russia? If there is weakness, where does it lie? Are college teachers right in always being ready to blame the high schools, and in turn high school teachers right in blaming the elementary schools? Is the answer in greater emphasis on science and engineering, with perhaps a generous Federal scholarship program for the training of scientists and engineers? Where does fact lie?

First, we must recognize that although launching an earth satellite is an unquestionably distinguished achievement, scientifically it is not so difficult an achievement as many things which United States scientists have accomplished many times in the past. I would guess, for example, that the difficulties in launching an uninstrumented earth satellite such as Sputnik were not nearly so great as those encountered in the production of the first atomic bomb. It is thus not lack of scientific manpower or brainpower in the United States which kept us from being the first nation to launch an earth satellite. Rather it is the assignment of our national scientific and engineering effort to various other endeavors which determined that we should not be the first. The same scientists and other scientists of caliber equal to those involved in the Alamogordo tests in 1945 have been working in their laboratories since World War II just as they were before. The question to be resolved is: How badly do we as a nation want these scientists to work on a given special project? Do we wish to assign national support and effort to a satellite, or would we rather assign it elsewhere? Is a satellite important enough to divert scientists from much more basic and fundamental research of their own choosing? Is a satellite important enough to make our Federal scientific enterprises inviting and satisfactory situations for scientific careers — not only in terms of salary and emoluments but also in terms of freedom from stultifying harassment and vindictive inquisition? These are the essential questions which must be answered relative to Sputnik and our place in the sun, or rather our place in the heavens.

Crawford Greenewalt answered this before the American Association for the Advancement of Science in December, when he said, "Startling as the Soviet accomplishments in outer space have been, they represent, quite clearly, a concentration of effort, manpower, and brains on a single objective, achieved to the detriment of almost every other element of their society. We should not be provoked into similar patterns."

In point of fact, our failure insofar as Sputnik is concerned is not evidence of inadequacies of scientific brain power so much as it is evidence of ineptness in assessing psychological impact. As a nation we did not comprehend the tremendous propaganda advantage accruing to the first nation to launch an earth satellite. Those isolated individuals proclaiming this belief years ago gained no important adherents — convinced no one in high position, nor the public generally, of the reasonableness and practicality of what were probably regarded as starry-eyed visionary dreams. Our failure was in knowing human values — the working of human minds. Not only were we lacking in assessing this impact on the peoples of foreign nations, but we had no conception of its impact upon our own citizens. Evidence of lack of wisdom? Yes! A failure of science and the education of scientists? No!

Clearly, our inadequacies and shortcomings are more broadly based. The basic flaw in our society has been in the absence of respect, and the lack of high esteem, for intellectual pursuits. Too much is the emphasis upon doers as opposed to thinkers. Some of you bridle at this, for most of you here are doers, and obviously to be successful doers you must also think. Doers are essential. But just as we cannot do without doers, neither can we do without thinkers. And if we are to be successful as thinkers, we must respect those who think for the sake of thinking alone. We need an anti-missile missile to destroy anti-intellectualism.

Egghead as an epithet must be exiled. As Killian puts it, "hot minds" are more important than "hot rods." Our concerns in our educational system must be for the primacy of the academic program, not only in select colleges and universities, but in all colleges and universities. As a people we must be not only willing but anxious to spend more on books and basic research than we spend on admissions to athletic events and movies and other amusements. In 1956 almost three times as much was spent on admissions to such events as was spent throughout the nation on books or basic research. As Edwin L. Dale of the New York Times states regarding such figures, "They certainly seem to say that creature comforts have meant much more to us than the high work of education and research and even of survival."

To this point this may seem a whitewash report on American education. It is not meant to be such. Our entire educational system has not done the job it could do, nor the job it should do. However, and unfortunately, in its inadequacies and in its softness it has reflected the national mores. This is perhaps a natural and justifiable state of affairs, but at the same time it is a completely inexcusable state of affairs. Instead of reflecting the national mores, our education should be setting them at higher and higher levels.

Educational standards have been lax in many areas and instances. Educational philosophies, at least in the early 20th century stage of development, have commingled and misinterpreted equality and democracy through their concern for mass education, and have thus denied education and training to the individual according to his ability. In unsuccessfully trying to raise the slower learners to the level of the average, the gifted have been retarded, and the average itself has been depressed.

Science is part of Bowdoin.

The coffee break in the Union is also part of Bowdoin.

Colleges, instead of holding to former high standards for admission and for graduation, which in turn required high level achievement to be met by preparatory schools, have often lowered standards to the level of mediocrity. Without the necessity to meet high college entrance standards, secondary schools have reacted in a not unexpected fashion, and the efforts of teachers, and more important the efforts of students, fell off. Even more important, in the home parents themselves have not held their children to the intensity of effort and the code of conduct requisite for us to be a people as dedicated to democracy as were our illustrious forebears of the 18th century.

Speaking particularly of my own generation with growing families, as adults do we set the proper example? Are we sufficiently dedicated in our own lives? Are we willing to sacrifice self for family and community? Do we recognize that as much time, thought, and effort are required to mold a child's character as to mold a beautiful sculpture? I doubt it.

To whatever extent the United States has failed, it is our citizenry that has failed. And we shall suffer a larger failure unless we can be roused in dedicated concern, convinced that individual effort on the part of each of us is what is needed.

As citizens we fail, if when in travail, we merely turn to the government to solve our problems of education. We fail if we see no solution outside of liberal Federal aid. We fail as citizens when we blame Washington for lack of leadership in not outlining specifically a program to cure educational ills which, when carefully diagnosed, are obviously best subject to local therapy. We fail when we cry that the billion dollars recommended by the President for Federal aid to education is too little, too late — rather than put our own shoulders to the wheel, to do our own part.

If each of us through his concern could so stimulate other college men and women that eventually every college alumnus in the United States would share that dedicated concern, the necessary influence and support bearing at the local level in every city, town, and hamlet, in every school and every schoolroom, would raise educational standards overnight.

Mathematics can be well taught as easily as it is poorly taught — to the same child in the same schoolroom with the same blackboard and the same chalk. No more effort is required to write a word with the right spelling than is required for the wrong. Good history is no harder to teach than is bad. Most often an inadequate teacher can, with proper stimulation and encouragement, become an able teacher, holding high standards for his students. The same dollars that pay the salary of an incompetent teacher will go toward the salary of a fine teacher, even though they need occasionally be augmented.

These essential factors for good education are all subject to the control of the local community and the local school board. It is up to citizens to interest themselves in the schools constructively, to lend support and encouragement to the schools, and to demand fine performance from the schools. When the confidence and sustenance our schools must have come to them, preceding will be understanding and appreciation on the part of the whole community.

In speaking thus strongly, I speak from personal conviction and experience. Three years as a member of the Superintending School Committee of the Town of Brunswick, with all of the petty harassments, details and frustrations which come with such office, have in a more important sense been most exciting. During this period, through the leadership of the Superintendent of Schools and the several principals, the standards of pupil performance have been remarkably raised; at the same time the morale of both students and the teachers has risen to heights never before attained. This accomplishment has cost but little more than would have been necessary for a mundane operation. More important, accompanying it has been a greater bargain for the taxpayer's school dollar, in terms of the quantity and quality of education purchased. Essentially this achievement results from intelligent devotion on the part of teachers and principals, and parents, coupled with the strong support of the local citizenry. This success in Brunswick parallels that of many other communities in New England and across the United States, and it is attainable in any community which earnestly desires better schools.

In general terms, it is my conviction that the state of education in the United States is in its ascendancy. This ascendancy can be accelerated by participation of all citizens in supporting school programs, in requiring high standards of performance by teachers, and also by giving understanding support as parents in extending the work of the school into the home by individual effort and study on the part of the child. We see around the corner, but the full turn will not come until every intelligent person willingly gives time, thought, and effort.

No better could the dedication required of each of us in meeting the challenge of the age be emphasized than to recall once more the oft-quoted words of the first President of Bowdoin College, Joseph McKeen, delivered at the exercises opening the College, which have delineated the role Bowdoin has played in the 156 years since that time:

"... literary institutions are founded and endowed for the common good, and not for the private advantage of those who resort to them for education. It is not that [the graduates] may be able to pass through life in an easy or reputable manner, but that their mental powers may be cultivated and improved for the benefit of society. If it be true no man should live for himself alone, we may safely assert that every man who has been aided by a public institution to acquire an education and to qualify himself for usefulness is under peculiar obligations to exert his talents for the public good."

"Scapegoats for Sputnik" is printed here substantially as it was delivered by President Coles at the annual dinner meetings of the New York and Philadelphia alumni clubs on January 24 and 25. With a few changes (such as including this country's launching of its first satellite on January 31) the talk will appear in the May issue of the Association of American Colleges Bulletin.

On The Campus

Delta Kappa Epsilon defeated Delta Sigma on March 19 in the finals of the Wilmot Brookings Mitchell interfraternity debating competition, which had been going on since last November. In other debating action Alfred E. Schretter '59 of Woodstock, Vt., won a plaque as the best individual speaker among the 250 who took part in the Brooklyn College tournament on March 7 and 8, as Bowdoin finished third behind St. Peter's and Dartmouth. A total of 62 colleges competed. Schretter, who was also one of the winning Deke debaters, teamed with Richard E. Morgan '59 of Hempstead, N. Y., as Bowdoin's negative team won all five of its debates. Morgan was selected as the third best speaker in the tournament, and the two men won a cup as the best negative pair.

Memorabilia

When Bowdoin reached its sesquicentennial in 1944, the dramatic club was 40 years old and celebrated the occasion by a display of posters, programs, and photographs representing the hundreds of productions undertaken from She Stoops to Conquer in February of 1904 to As You Like It in June of 1944 at the Walker Art Building. This collection, framed and captioned by Steve Merrill '35 and highlighting many artistic posters by Professor Beam, decorated the old stairwell office of the Masque and Gown until the generous bequest of the late Frederick W. Pickard '94 and the far-sighted action of the Governing Boards permitted the inclusion of the Pickard Theater in Memorial Hall. The collection was then boxed until the opening of the Theater in 1955, when a few of the most effective items — including scenic designs by Woods '37, Bliss '47, Rutan '51 and Professor Schmalz were hung in the lower lobby.

During the past Christmas vacation, it was necessary to remove this display while the floor was relaid. A new collection has now been hung there to memorialize the performances of Shakespeare at Commencement from 1911 to the present time. It emphasizes the contribution of the late Mrs. Arthur Flint Brown in directing these plays from 1911 to 1927, with the late Cedric Crowell '13 as her star for the first three years and Albert Ecke (Dekker) '27 for the last three. Later productions under the direction of Professors Grey, Chase, and Quinby attest to the importance of these performances academically. It is particularly appropriate that several photographs and programs include the face and name of Cedric Crowell at a time when his classmates return for their first formal reunion after having set up the

Tax Deductions To Help Preserve Freedom

A MENDMENT OF THE INTERNAL REVENUE LAW to provide that "an individual's contribution to a recognized college or university could be taken as a credit against income tax owed" was suggested on March 13 by President James S. Coles, speaking at the annual dinner meeting of the Washington Bowdoin Club.

This provision, Dr. Coles stated, "would be in contrast to the present provisions merely permitting such gifts to be deducted from the income upon which taxes are calculated. Obviously, proper restrictions and safeguards would be necessary to protect the interests of the Government.

"There would have to be a limitation on the amount of tax credit which could be taken under this plan. This could be set so that the total gifts made to private colleges would be in amount approximately equal to that amount currently under discussion as the cost of a Federal program of aid to colleges and universities and their students. The cost to the Government would then be no more than that for a program of Federal aid.

"The colleges would receive more, however, for every dollar given would be useful to them, as opposed to the situation where Government collection, administration, and disbursement expenses would have to be taken from tax funds collected before they would be distributed."

The President pointed out that if American colleges are to remain strong, "new and significant measures must be taken in financing them. Federal aid can never be received without entailing some measure of Federal direction and Federal control. As soon as there is direction and control, the complete independence of action which has always characterized the educational system of this nation is lost. In a situation so desperate as to let us consider relinquishing precious freedoms, we should first consider all other alternatives.

"If this nation is to have available college and university graduates who believe in freedom of enterprise and freedom from government support and government control, there must be a nucleus of colleges and universities which are independent of any kind of government support and independent of any threat of government control."

John Gould's column, which appears elsewhere in this issue, covers winter sports but omits mention of several events of interest. On March 1, in an exciting overtime game, the alumni hockey squad, coached by Danny MacFayden, defeated Nels Corey's varsity squad 4 to 3. About twenty-five alumni players took part in a fine display of stamina and college skill come to life again.

The Polar Bears will join Bates, Colby, Maine, Tufts, Wesleyan, Rutgers, and St. Michael's in the first annual Down-east Classic Basketball Tournament, to be held for four days in the new Bangor auditorium from December 31 through January 3. The proceeds will go to recognized charities. The tournament is being sponsored by the Bangor News.

The Hugh Munro jr. Memorial Trophy, honoring a Waban, Mass., man who died in service in World War II, has been established at Bowdoin by his family. The trophy will be inscribed each year with the name of the varsity hockey player who "best exemplifies the qualities of loyalty and courage which Hugh Munro jr. demonstrated at Bowdoin and in the service of his country."

Defenseman Roger D. Coe of Swampscott, Mass., captain elect of hockey, was selected as the first recipient of the trophy.

A member of the Class of 1941 at Bowdoin, Hugh Munro played forward on the varsity hockey team for three seasons, was active in the Masque and Gown and the Bowdoin Yacht Club, and took part in interfraternity athletics. ANY SUGGESTIONS?

The Editors of the ALUMNUS always welcome suggestions and comments from alumni concerning the content of the magazine. We particularly welcome such comment on this issue, which contains no Class Notes section and includes a thirty-two page insert on "American Higher Education 1958."

We hope to hear from the satisfied as well as the dissatisfied. We would like to know what parts of the ALUMNUS individual alumni enjoy and what parts they never or seldom read.

Anyone with any comment to make — favorable, unfavorable, or indifferent — is encouraged to write to the Editor, The Bowdoin ALUMNUS, Getchell House, Brunswick.

A SPECIAL REPORT

AMERICAN HIGHER EDUCATION 1958

ITS PRESSING PROBLEMS AND NEEDS ARE EXCEEDED ONLY BY ITS OPPORTUNITIES

THIS is a special report. It is published because the time has come for colleges and universities—and their alumni—to recognize and act upon some extraordinary challenges and opportunities.

Item: Three million, sixty-eight thousand young men and women are enrolled in America's colleges and universities this year—45 per cent more than were enrolled six years ago, although the number of young people in the eighteen-to-twenty-one age bracket has increased only 2 per cent in the same period. A decade hence, when colleges will feel the effects of the unprecedented birth rates of the mid-1940's, today's already-enormous enrollments will double.

Item: In the midst of planning to serve more students, higher education is faced with the problem of not losing sight of its extraordinary students. "What is going to happen to the genius or two in this crowd?" asked a professor at one big university this term, waving his hand at a seemingly endless line of students waiting to fill out forms at registration desks. "Heaven knows, if the free world ever needed to discover its geniuses, it needs to do so now." President Robert Gordon Sproul of the University of California puts it this way: "If we fail in our hold upon quality, the cherished American dream of universal education will degenerate into a nightmare."

Item: A college diploma is the sine qua non for almost any white-collar job nowadays, and nearly everybody wants one. In the scramble, a lot of students are going to college who cannot succeed there. At the Ohio State University, for instance, which is required by law to admit every Ohioan who owns a high-school diploma and is able to complete the entrance blanks, two thousand students flunked out last year. Nor is Ohio State's problem unique. The resultant waste of teaching talents, physical facilities, and money is shocking—to say nothing of the damage to young people's self-respect.

Item: The cost of educating a student is soaring. Like many others, Brown University is boosting its fees this spring: Brown students henceforth will pay an annual tuition bill of $1,250. But it costs Brown $2,300 to provide a year's instruction in return. The difference between charges and actual cost, says Brown's President Barnaby C. Keeney, "represents a kind of scholarship from the faculty. They pay for it out of their hides."

Item: The Educational Testing Service reports that lack of money keeps many of America's ablest high-school students from attending college—150,000 last year. The U. S. Office of Education found not long ago that even at public colleges and universities, where tuition rates are still nominal, a student needs around $1,500 a year to get by.

Item: Non-monetary reasons are keeping many promising young people from college, also. The Social Science Research Council offers evidence that fewer than half of the students in the upper tenth of their high-school classes go on to college. In addition to lack of money, a major reason for this defection is "lack of motivation."

Item: At present rates, only one in eight college teachers can ever expect to earn more than $7,500 a year. If colleges are to attract and hold competent teachers, says Devereux C. Josephs, chairman of the President's Committee on Education Beyond the High School, faculty salaries must be increased by at least 50 per cent during the next five years. Such an increase would cost the colleges and universities around half a billion dollars a year.

Item: Some critics say that too many colleges and universities have been willing to accept—or, perhaps more accurately, have failed firmly to reject—certain tasks which have been offered to or thrust upon them, but which may not properly be the business of higher education at all. “The professor,” said one college administrator recently, “should not be a carhop who answers every demanding horn. Educational institutions must not be hot-dog stands.”

Item: The colleges and universities, some say, are not teaching what they ought to be teaching or are not teaching it effectively. “Where are the creative thinkers?” they ask. Have we, without quite realizing it, grown into a nation of gadgeteers, of tailfin technicians, and lost the art of basic thought? (And from all sides comes the worried reminder that the other side launched their earth satellites first.)

THESE are some of the problems—only some of them—which confront American higher education in 1958. Some of the problems are higher education’s own offspring; some are products of the times.

But some are born of a fact that is the identifying strength of higher education in America: its adaptability to the free world’s needs, and hence its diversity.

Indeed, so diverse is it—in organization, sponsorship, purpose, and philosophy—that perhaps it is fallacious to use the generalization, “American higher education,” at all. It includes 320-year-old Harvard and the University of Southern Florida, which now is only on the drawing boards and will not open until 1960. The humanities research center at the University of Texas and the course in gunsmithing at Lassen Junior College in Susanville, California. Vassar and the U. S. Naval Academy. The University of California, with its forty-two thousand students, and Deep Springs Junior College, on the eastern side of the same state, with only nineteen.

Altogether there are more than 1,800 American institutions which offer “higher education,” and no two of them are alike. Some are liberal-arts colleges, some are vast universities, some specialize in such fields as law, agriculture, medicine, and engineering. Some are supported by taxation, some are affiliated with churches, some are independent in both organization and finance. Thus any generalization about American higher education will have its exceptions—including the one that all colleges and universities desperately need more money. (Among the 1,800, there may be one or two which don't.) In higher education's diversity—the result of its restlessness, its freedom, its geography, its competitiveness—lies a good deal of its strength.

AMERICAN higher education in 1958 is hardly what the Puritans envisioned when they founded the country's first college to train their ministers in 1636. For nearly two and a half centuries after that, the aim of America's colleges, most of them founded by churches, was limited: to teach young people the rudiments of philosophy, theology, the classical languages, and mathematics. Anyone who wanted a more extensive education had to go to Europe for it.

One break from tradition came in 1876, with the founding of the Johns Hopkins University. Here, for the first time, was an American institution with European standards of advanced study in the arts and sciences.

Other schools soon followed the Hopkins example. And with the advanced standards came an emphasis on research. No longer did American university scholars simply pass along knowledge gained in Europe; they began to make significant contributions themselves.

Another spectacular change began at about the same time. With the growth of science, agriculture—until then a relatively simple art—became increasingly complex. In the 1850's a number of institutions were founded to train people for it, but most of them failed to survive.

In 1862, however, in the darkest hours of the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln signed the Morrill Land-Grant Act, offering each state public lands and support for at least one college to teach agriculture and the mechanic arts. Thus was the foundation laid for the U. S. state-university system. "In all the annals of republics," said Andrew D. White, the first president of one institution founded under the act, Cornell University, "there is no more significant utterance of confidence in national destiny, out from the midst of national calamity."

NOW there was no stopping American higher education's growth, or the growth of its diversity. Optimistically America moved into the 1900's, and higher education moved with it. More and more Americans wanted to go to college and were able to do so. Public and private institutions were established and expanded. Tax dollars by the millions were appropriated, and philanthropists like Rockefeller and Carnegie and Stanford vied to support education on a large scale. Able teachers, now being graduated in numbers by America's own universities, joined their staffs.

In the universities' graduate and professional schools, research flourished. It reached outward to explore the universe, the world, and the creatures that inhabit it. Scholars examined the past, enlarged and tended man's cultural heritage, and pressed their great twentieth-century search for the secrets of life and matter.

Participating in the exploration were thousands of young Americans, poor and rich. As students they were acquiring skills and sometimes even wisdom. And, with their professors, they were building a uniquely American tradition of higher education which has continued to this day.

OUR aspirations, as a nation, have never been higher. Our need for educational excellence has never been greater. But never have the challenges been as sharp as they are in 1958.

Look at California, for one view of American education's problems and opportunities—and for a view of imaginative and daring action, as well.

Nowhere is the public appetite for higher education more avid, the need for highly trained men and women more clear, the pressure of population more acute. In a recent four-year period during which the country's population rose 7.5 per cent, California's rose some 17.6 per cent. Californians—with a resoluteness which is, unfortunately, not typical of the nation as a whole—have shown a remarkable determination to face and even to anticipate these facts.

They have decided that the state should build fifteen new junior colleges, thirteen new state colleges, and five new campuses for their university. (Already the state has 135 institutions of higher learning: sixty-three private establishments, sixty-one public junior colleges, ten state colleges, and the University of California with eight campuses. Nearly 40 cents of every tax dollar goes to support education on the state level.)

But California has recognized that providing new facilities is only part of the solution. New philosophies are needed, as well.

The students looking for classrooms, for example, vary tremendously, one from the other, in aptitudes, aims, and abilities. "If higher education is to meet the varied needs of students and also the diverse requirements of an increasingly complex society," a California report says, "there will have to be corresponding diversity among and within educational institutions. . . . It will not be sufficient for California—or any other state, for that matter—simply to provide enough places for the students who will seek college admission in future years. It will also have to supply, with reasonable economy and efficiency, a wide range of educational programs.”

Like all of the country, California and Californians have some big decisions to make.

DR. LEWIS H. CHRISMAN is a professor of English at West Virginia Wesleyan, a Methodist college near the town of Buckhannon. He accepted an appointment there in 1919, when it consisted of just five major buildings and a coeducational student body of 150. One of the main reasons he took the appointment, Dr. Chrisman said later, was that a new library was to be built “right away.”

Thirty years later the student body had jumped to 720. Nearly a hundred other students were taking extension and evening courses. The zooming postwar birth rate was already in the census statistics, in West Virginia as elsewhere.

But Dr. Chrisman was still waiting for that library. West Virginia Wesleyan had been plagued with problems. Not a single major building had gone up in thirty-five years. To catch up with its needs, the college would have to spend $500,000.

For a small college to raise a half million dollars is often as tough as for a state university to obtain perhaps ten times as much, if not tougher. But Wesleyan’s president, trustees, faculty, and alumni decided that if independent colleges, including church-related ones, were to be as significant a force in the times ahead as they had been in the past, they must try.

Now West Virginia Wesleyan has an eighty-thousand-volume library, three other buildings completed, a fifth to be ready this spring, and nine more on the agenda.

A group of people reached a hard decision, and then made it work. Dr. Chrisman’s hopes have been more than fulfilled.

So it goes, all over America. The U. S. Office of Education recently asked the colleges and universities how much they are spending on new construction this year.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

THE most serious shortage that higher education faces is in its teaching staffs. Many are underpaid, and not enough young people are entering the field. Here, left to right, are a Nobel Prizewinning chemist, a Bible historian, a heart surgeon, a physicist, and a poet.

WEST VIRGINIA WESLEYAN COLLEGE

Ninety per cent of them replied. In calendar 1958, they are spending $1.078 billion.

Purdue alone has $37 million worth of construction in process. Penn has embarked on twenty-two projects costing over $31 million. Wake Forest and Goucher and Colby Colleges, among others, have left their old campuses and moved to brand-new ones. Stanford is undergoing the greatest building boom since its founding. Everywhere in higher education, the bulldozer, advance agent of growth, is working to keep up with America's insatiable, irresistible demands.

BUILDING PROJECTS, however, are only the outward and visible signs of higher education's effort to stay geared to the times. And in many ways they are the easiest part of the solution to its problems. Others go deeper.

Not long ago the vice president of a large university was wondering aloud. "Perhaps," he said, "we have been thinking that by adding more schools and institutes as more knowledge seemed necessary to the world, we were serving the cause of learning. Many are now calling for a reconsideration of what the whole of the university is trying to do."

The problem is a very real one. In the course of her 200-year-plus history, the university had picked up so many schools, institutes, colleges, projects, and "centers" that almost no one man could name them all, much less give an accurate description of their functions. Other institutions are in the same quandary.

Why? One reason is suggested by the vice president's comment. Another is the number of demands which we as a nation have placed upon our institutions of higher learning.

We call upon them to give us space-age weapons and polio vaccine. We ask them to provide us with lumbermen and liberally educated PTA presidents, doctors and statesmen, business executives and poets, teachers and housewives. We expect the colleges to give us religious training, better fertilizers, extension courses in music appreciation, fresh ideas on city planning, classes in square dancing, an understanding of medieval literature, and basic research.

The nation does need many services, and higher education has never been shy about offering to provide a great portion of them. Now however, in the face of a multitude of pressures ranging from the population surge to the doubts many people have about the quality of American thought, there are those who are wondering if America is not in danger of over-extending its educational resources: if we haven't demanded, and if under the banner of higher education our colleges and universities haven't taken on, too much.

AMERICA has never been as ready to pay for its educational services as it has been to request them. A single statistic underlines the point. We spend about seven tenths of 1 per cent of our gross national product on higher education. (Not that we should look to the Russians to set our standards for us—but it is worth noting that they spend on higher education more than 2 per cent of their gross.)

As a result, this spring, many colleges and universities find themselves in a tightening vise. It is not only that prices have skyrocketed; the real cost of providing education has risen, too. As knowledge has broadened and deepened, for example, more complicated and costly equipment has become essential.

Feeling the financial squeeze most painfully are the faculty members. The average salary of a college or university teacher in America today is just over $5,000. The average salary of a full professor is just over $7,000.

It is a frequent occurrence on college campuses for a graduating senior, nowadays, to be offered a starting salary in industry that is higher than that paid to most of the faculty men who trained him.

On humane grounds alone, the problem is shocking. But it is not limited to a question of humaneness; there is a serious question of national welfare, also.

"Any institution that fails through inability or delinquency to attract and hold its share of the best academic minds of the nation is accepting one of two consequences," says President Cornelis W. de Kiewiet of the University of Rochester. "The first is a sentence of inferiority and decline, indeed an inferiority so much greater and a decline so much more intractable that trustees, alumni, and friends can only react in distress when they finally see the truth. . . .

"The second . . . is the heavy cost of rehabilitation once the damage has been done. In education as in business there is no economy more foolish than poor maintenance and upkeep. Staffs that have been poorly maintained can be rebuilt only at far greater cost. Since even less-qualified and inferior people are going to be in short supply, institutions content to jog along will be denied even the solace of doing a moderate job at a moderate cost. It is going to be disturbingly expensive to do even a bad job."

The effects of mediocrity in college and university teaching, if the country should permit it to come about, could only amount to a national disaster.

WITH the endless squeezes, economies, and crises it is experiencing, it would not be particularly remarkable if American higher education, this spring, were alternately reproaching its neglecters and struggling feebly against a desperate fate. By and large, it is doing nothing of the sort.

Instead, higher education is moving out to meet its problems and, even more significantly, looking beyond them. Its plans take into account that it may have twice as many students by 1970. It recognizes that it must not, in this struggle to accommodate quantity, lose sight of quality or turn into a molder of "mass minds." It is continuing to search for ways to improve its present teaching. It is charting new services to local communities, the nation, and vast constituencies overseas. It is entering new areas of research, so revolutionary that it must invent new names for them.

CONSIDER the question of maintaining quality amidst quantity. "How," educators ask themselves, "can you educate everyone who is ambitious and has the basic qualifications, and still have time, teachers, and money to spend on the unusual boy or girl? Are we being true to our belief in the individual if we put everyone into the same mold, ignoring human differences? Besides, let's be practical about it: doesn't this country need to develop every genius it has?"

There is one approach to the problem at an institution in eastern California, Deep Springs. The best way to get there is to go to Reno, Nevada, and then drive about five hours through the Sierras to a place called Big Pine. Deep Springs has four faculty members, is well endowed, selects its students carefully, and charges no tuition or fees. It cannot lose sight of its good students: its total enrollment is nineteen.

At another extreme, some institutions have had to devote their time and effort to training as many people as possible. The student with unusual talent has had to find it and develop it without help.

Other institutions are looking for the solution somewhere in between.

The University of Kansas, for example, like many other state universities, is legally bound to accept every graduate of an accredited state high school who applies, without examinations or other entrance requirements. "Until recently," says Dean George Waggoner of Kansas's College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, "many of us spent a great deal of our time trying to solve the problem of marginal students."

In the fall of 1955, the university announced a program designed especially for the "gifted student." Its objective: to make sure that exceptional young men and women would not be overlooked or under-exposed in a time of great student population and limited faculty.

Now Kansas uses state-wide examinations to spot these exceptional high-school boys and girls early. It invites high-school principals to nominate candidates for scholarships from the upper 5 per cent of their senior classes. It brings the promising high-school students to its Lawrence campus for further testing, screening, and selection.

When they arrive at the university as freshmen, the students find themselves in touch with a special faculty committee. It has the power to waive many academic rules for them. They are allowed to take as large a bite of education as they can swallow, and the usual course prerequisites do not apply; they may enter junior and senior-level courses if they can handle the work. They use the library with the same status as faculty members and graduate students, and some serve as short-term research associates for professors.

The force of the program has been felt beyond the students and the faculty members who are immediately involved. It has sent a current throughout the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. All students on the dean's honor roll, for example, no longer face a strict limit in the number of courses they may take. Departments have strengthened their honor sections or, in some cases, established them for the first time. The value of the program reaches down into the high schools, too, stimulating teachers and attracting to the university strong students who might otherwise be lost to Kansas.

Across the country, there has been an attack on the problem of the bright student's boredom during his early months in college. (Too often he can do nothing but fidget restlessly as teachers gear their courses to students less talented than he.) Now, significantly large numbers are being admitted to college before they have finished high school; experiments with new curricula and opportunities for small discussion groups, fresh focus, and independent study are found in many schools. Foundations, so influential in many areas of higher education today, are giving their support.

The "quality vs. quantity" issue has other ramifications. "Education's problem of the future," says President Eldon L. Johnson of the University of New Hampshire, "is the relation of mind and mass. . . . The challenge is to reach numbers without mass treatment and the creation of mass men. . . . It is in this setting and this philosophy that the state university finds its place."

And, one might add, the independent institution as well. For the old idea that the public school is concerned with quantity and the private school with quality is a false one. All of American higher education, in its diversity, must meet the twin needs of extraordinary persons and a better educated, more thoughtful citizenry.

WHAT is a better educated, more thoughtful citizenry? And how do we get one? If America's colleges and universities thought they had the perfect answers, a pleasant complacency might spread across the land.

In the offices of those who are responsible for laying out programs of education, however, there is anything but complacency. Ever since they stopped being content with a simple curriculum of theology, philosophy, Latin, Greek, and math, the colleges and universities have been searching for better ways of educating their students in breadth as well as depth. And they are still hunting.

Take the efforts at Amherst, as an example of what many are doing. Since its founding Amherst has developed and refined its curriculum constantly. Once it offered a free elective system: students chose the courses they wanted. Next it tried specialization: students selected a major field of study in their last two years. Next, to make sure that they got at least a taste of many different fields, Amherst worked out a system for balancing the elective courses that its students were permitted to select.

But by World War II, even this last refinement seemed inadequate. Amherst began—again—a re-evaluation.

When the self-testing was over, Amherst's students began taking three sets of required courses in their freshman and sophomore years: one each in science, history, and the humanities. The courses were designed to build the groundwork for responsible lives: they sought to help students form an integrated picture of civilization's issues and processes. (But they were not "surveys"—or what Philosophy Professor Gail Kennedy, chairman of the faculty committee that developed the program, calls "those superficial omnibus affairs.")

How did the student body react? Angrily. When Professor Arnold B. Arons first gave his course in physical science and mathematics, a wave of resentment arose. It culminated at a mid-year dance. The music stopped, conversations ceased, and the students observed a solemn, two-minute silence. They called it a "Hate Arons Silence."

But at the end of the year they gave the professor a standing ovation. He had been rough. He had not provided his students with pat answers. He had forced them to think, and it had been a shock at first. But as they got used to it, the students found that thinking, among all of life's experiences, can sometimes be the most exhilarating.

TO TEACH them to think: that is the problem. It is impossible, today, for any school, undergraduate or professional, to equip its students with all the knowledge they will need to become competent engineers, doctors, farmers, or business men. On the other hand, it can provide its students with a chance to discover something with which, on their own, they can live an extraordinary life: their ability to think.

THUS, in the midst of its planning for swollen enrollments, enlarged campuses, balanced budgets, and faculty-procurement crises, higher education gives deep thought to the effectiveness of its programs. When the swollen enrollments do come and the shortage of teachers does become acute, higher education hopes it can maintain its vitality.

BAYLOR UNIVERSITY

TO IMPROVE the effectiveness of their teaching, colleges and universities are experimenting with new techniques like recordings of plays (above) and television, which (left) can bring medical students a closeup view of delicate experiments.

HARVARD UNIVERSITY

To stretch teaching resources without sacrificing (and, perhaps, even improving) their effectiveness, it is exploring such new techniques as microfilms, movies, and television. At Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, in Troy, New York, the exploration is unusually intense.

RPI calls its concerted study "Project Reward." How good, Project Reward asks, are movies, audio-visual aids, closed-circuit television? How can we set up really effective demonstrations in our science courses? How much more effective, if at all, is a small class than a big one? Which is better: lecture or discussion groups? Says Roland H. Trathen, associate head of Rensselaer's department of mechanics and a leader in the Project Reward enterprise, when he is asked about the future, "If creative contributions to teaching are recognized and rewarded in the same manner as creative contributions to research, we have nothing to fear."

The showman in a good professor comes to the fore when he is offered that new but dangerous tool of communication, television. Like many gadgets, television can be used merely to grind out more degree-holders, or—in the hands of imaginative, dedicated teachers—it can be a powerful instrument for improvement.

Experiments with television are going on all over the place. A man at the University of Oregon, this spring, can teach a course simultaneously on his own campus and three others in the state, thanks to an electronic link. Pennsylvania State experimented with the medium for three years and discovered that in some cases the TV students did better than their counterparts who saw their instructors in the flesh.

The dangers in assembly-line education are real. But with new knowledge about how people actually learn—and new devices to help them learn—interesting possibilities appear.

Even so, some institutions may cling to time-worn notions about teaching until they are torn loose by the current of the age. Others may adulterate the quality of their product by rushing into short-cut schemes. The reader can hope that his college, at least, will use the new tools wisely: with courage yet with caution. Most of all, he can hope that it will not be forced into adopting them in desperation, because of poverty or its inability to hold good teachers, but from a position of confidence and strength.

AERICAN higher education does not limit itself to college campuses or the basic function of educating the young. It has assumed responsibility for direct, active, specific community service, also.

"Democracy's Growing Edge," the Teacher's College of the University of Nebraska calls one such service project. Its sponsors are convinced that one of the basic functions of local schools is to improve their communities, and they are working through the local boards of education in Nebraska towns to demonstrate it.

Consider Mullen (pop. 750), in northwest Nebraska's sandhills area, the only town in its cattle-ranching county. The nearest hospital is ninety miles away. Mullen needs its own clinic; one was started six years ago, only to bog down. Under the university's auspices, with Mullen's school board coordinating the project and the Teacher's College furnishing a full-time associate coordinator, the citizens went to work. Mullen now has its clinical facilities.

Or consider Syracuse, in the southeast corner of the state, a trading center for some three thousand persons. It is concerned about its future because its young people are migrating to neighboring Lincoln and Omaha; to hold them, Syracuse needs new industry and recreational facilities. Again, through the university's program, townspeople have taken action, voting for a power contract that will assure sufficient electricity to attract industry and provide opportunities for youth.

Many other institutions currently are offering a variety of community projects—as many as seventy-eight at one state university this spring. Some samples:

The University of Dayton has tailored its research program to the needs of local industry and offers training programs for management. Ohio State has planted the nation's first poison plant garden to find out why some plants are poisonous to livestock when grown in some soils yet harmless in others. Northwestern's study of traffic problems has grown into a new transportation center. The University of Southern California encourages able high-school students to work in its scientific laboratories in the summer. Regis College runs a series of economics seminars for Boston professional women.

Community service takes the form of late-afternoon and evening colleges, also, which offer courses to school teachers and business men. Television is in the picture, too. Thousands of New Yorkers, for example, rise before dawn to catch New York University's "Sunrise Semester," a stiff and stimulating series of courses on WCBS-TV.

In California, San Bernardino Valley College has gone on radio. One night a week, members of more than seventy-five discussion groups gather in private homes and turn on their sets. For a half hour, they listen to a program such as "Great Men and Great Issues" or "The Ways of Mankind," a study of anthropology.

When the program is over (it is then 8:30), the living-room discussions start. People talk, argue, raise questions—and learn. One thousand of them are hard at it, all over the San Bernardino Valley area.

Then, at ten o'clock, they turn on the radio again. A panel of experts is on. Members of the discussion groups pick up their phones and ask questions about the night's topic. The panel gives its answers over the air.

Says one participant, "I learned that people who once seemed dull, uninteresting, and pedestrian had exciting things to say if I would keep my mouth shut and let them say it."

When it thinks of community services, American higher education does not limit itself to its own back yard.

Behind the new agricultural chemistry building at the University of the Philippines stand bare concrete columns which support nothing. The jungle has grown up around their bases. But you can still see the remains of buildings which once housed one of the most distinguished agricultural schools in the Far East, the university's College of Agriculture. When Filipinos returned to the campus after World War II, they found virtually nothing.

The needs of the Philippines' devastated lands for trained men were clear and immediate. The faculty began to put the broken pieces back together again, but it was plain that the rebuilding would take decades.

In 1952, Cornell University's New York State College of Agriculture formed a partnership with them. The objective: to help the Filipinos rebuild, not in a couple of generations, but in a few years. Twelve top faculty members from Cornell have spent a year or more as regular members of the staff. Filipinos have gone to New York to take part in programs there.

Now, Philippine agriculture has a new lease on life—and Filipinos say that the Cornell partnership should receive much of the credit. Farms are at last big enough to support their tenants. Weeds and insects are being brought under control. Grassland yields are up. And the college enrollment has leaped from little more than a hundred in 1945 to more than four thousand today.

In Peru, the North Carolina College of Agriculture and Engineering is helping to strengthen the country's agricultural research; North Carolina State College is helping to develop Peruvian research in textiles; and the University of North Carolina co-operates in a program of technical assistance in sanitary engineering. In Liberia, Prairie View A. and M. College of Texas (the Negro college of the Texas A. and M. system) is working with the Booker Washington Agricultural and Industrial Institute to expand vocational education. Syracuse University is producing audio-visual aids for the Middle East, particularly Iran. The University of Tennessee is providing home-economics specialists to assist in training similar specialists in India. The University of Oregon is working with Nepal in establishing an educational system where none existed before (only eleven persons in the entire country of 8.5 million had had any professional training in education). Harvard is providing technical advice and assistance to Latin American countries in developing and maintaining nutrition programs.

UNIVERSITY OF OKLAHOMA

IN ADDITION to teaching and conducting research, America's colleges and universities offer a wide range of community services. At the left are hundreds of curriculum materials available at one state university.

NONE of its services can function effectively unless higher education remains free. Freedom to pursue knowledge is the strongest attraction of college and university teaching.

THUS emerges a picture of American higher education, 1958. Its diversity, its hope that it can handle large numbers of students without losing sight of quality in the process, its willingness to extend its services far beyond its classrooms and even its home towns: all these things are true of America's colleges and universities today. They can be seen.

But not as visible, like a subsurface flaw in the earth's apparently solid crust, lie some facts that may alter the landscape considerably. Not enough young people, for instance, are currently working their way through the long process of preparation to become college and university teachers. Others, who had already embarked on faculty careers, are leaving the profession. Scholars and teachers are becoming one of the American economy's scarcest commodities.

Salary scales, as described earlier in this article, are largely responsible for the scarcity, but not entirely.

Three faculty members at the University of Oklahoma sat around a table not long ago and tried to explain why they are staying where they are. All are young. All are brilliant men who have turned down lucrative jobs in business or industry. All have been offered higher-paying posts at other universities.

EVERYWHERE—in business, government, the professions, the arts—college graduates are in demand. Thus society pays tribute to the college teacher. It relies upon him today as never before.

"It's the atmosphere, call it the teaching climate, that keeps me here," said one.

"Teachers want to know they are appreciated, that their ideas have a chance," said another. "I suppose you might say we like being a part of our institution, not members of a manpower pool."

"Oklahoma has made a real effort to provide an opportunity for our opinions to count," said the third. "Our advice may be asked on anything from hiring a new professor to suggesting salary increases."

The University of Oklahoma, like many other institutions but unlike many more, has a self-governing faculty. "The by-products of the university government," says Oklahoma's Professor Cortez A. M. Ewing, "may prove to be its most important feature. In spite of untoward conditions—heavy teaching loads, low salaries, and marginal physical and laboratory resources, to mention a few—the spirit of co-operation is exceeded only by the dedication of the faculty."

The professor worth his title must be free. He must be free to explore and probe and investigate. He must be free to pursue the truth, wherever the chase may take him. This, if the bread-and-butter necessities of salary scales can be met, is and will always be the great attraction of college and university teaching. We must take care that nothing be allowed to diminish it.

GONE is the old caricature of the absent-minded, impractical academician. The image of the college professor has changed, just as the image of the college boy and the college alumnus has changed. If fifty years ago a college graduate had to apologize for his education and even conceal it as he entered the business world, he does so no longer. Today society demands the educated man. Thus society gives its indirect respect to the man who taught him, and links a new reliance with that respect.

It is more than need which warrants this esteem and reliance. The professor is aware of his world and travels to its coldest, remotest corners to learn more about it. Nor does he overlook the pressing matters at the very edge of his campus. He takes part in the International Geophysical Year's study of the universe; he attacks the cancer in the human body and the human spirit; he nourishes the art of living more readily than the art of killing; he is the frontiersman everywhere. He builds and masters the most modern of tools from the cyclotron to the mechanical brain. He remembers the artist and the philosopher above the clamor of the machine.

The professor still has the color that his students recall, and he still gets his applause in the spring at the end of an inspiring semester or at the end of a dedicated career. But today there is a difference. It is on him that the nation depends more than ever. On him the free world relies—just as the enslaved world does, too.

DR. SELMAN A. WAKSMAN of Rutgers was not interested in a specific, useful topic. Rather, he was fascinated by the organisms that live in a spadeful of dirt.

A Russian emigrant, born in a thatched house in Priluka, ninety miles from the civilization of Kiev, he came to the United States at the age of seventeen and enrolled in Rutgers. Early in his undergraduate career he became interested in the fundamental aspects of living systems. And, as a student of the College of Agriculture, he looked to the soil. For his senior project he dug a number of trenches on the college farm and took soil samples in order to count the different colonies of bacteria.

But when he examined the samples under his microscope, Waksman saw some strange colonies, different from either bacteria or fungi. One of his professors said they were only “higher bacteria.” Another, however, identified them as little-known organisms usually called actinomycetes.

Waksman was graduated in 1915. As a research assistant in soil bacteriology, he began working toward a master’s degree. But he soon began to devote more and more time to soil fungi and the strange actinomycetes. He was forever testing soils, isolating cultures, transferring cultures, examining cultures, weighing, analyzing.

Studying for his Ph.D. at the University of California, he made one finding that interested him particularly. Several groups of microbes appeared to live in harmony, while others fed on their fellows or otherwise inhibited their growth. In 1918 Waksman returned to Rutgers as a microbiologist, to continue his research and teaching.

RUTGERS UNIVERSITY

SOME research by faculty members strikes people as “pointless.” It was one such pointless project that led Dr. Selman A. Waksman (left) to find streptomycin. Good basic research is a continuing need.

OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY

In 1923 one of his pupils, Rene Dubos, isolated tyrothricin and demonstrated that chemical substances from microbes found in the soil can kill disease-producing germs. In 1932 Waksman studied the fate of tuberculosis bacteria in the soil. In 1937 he published three papers on antagonistic relations among soil micro-organisms. He needed only a nudge to make him turn all his attention to what he was later to call "antibiotics."

The war provided that nudge. Waksman organized his laboratory staff for the campaign. He soon decided to focus on the organisms he had first met as an undergraduate almost thirty years before, the actinomycetes. The first antibiotic substance to be isolated was called actinomycin, but it was so toxic that it could have no clinical application; other antibiotics turned out to be the same. It was not until the summer of 1943 that the breakthrough came.

One day a soil sample from a heavily manured field was brought into the laboratory. The workers processed it as they had processed thousands of others before. But this culture showed remarkable antagonism to disease-producing bacteria. It was a strain—streptomyces griseus—that Waksman had puzzled over as a student. Clinical tests proved its effectiveness against some forms of pneumonia, gonorrhea, dysentery, whooping cough, syphilis, and, most spectacularly, TB.

Streptomycin went into production quickly. Along with the many other antibiotics that came from the soil, it was labeled a "miracle drug." Waksman received the Nobel Prize and the heartfelt praise of millions throughout the world.

In a sense, discoveries like Dr. Waksman's are accidents; they are unplanned and unprogrammed. They emerge from scholarly activity which, judged by appearances or practical yardsticks, is aimless. But mankind has had enough experience with such accidents to have learned, by now, that "pure research"—the pursuit of knowledge for the sake of knowledge alone—is its best assurance that accidents will continue to happen. When Chicago's still-active Emeritus Professor Herman Schlesinger got curious about the chemical linkage in a rare and explosive gas called diobrane, he took the first steps toward the development of a new kind of jet and rocket fuel—accidentally. When scientists at Harvard worked on the fractionization of blood, they were accidentally making possible the development of a substitute for whole blood which was so desperately needed in World War II.

But what about the University of Texas's Humanities Research Center, set up to integrate experiments in linguistics, criticism, and other fields? Or the Missouri expedition to Cyprus which excavated an Early-Bronze-

TO FIND the most promising young people of America and then provide them with exceptional educational opportunities: that is the challenge. Above, medical school professors vote on a candidate.

Age site at Episkopi three years ago and is planning to go back again this year? Or the research on folk ballads at the University of Arkansas? In an age of ICBM's, what is the value of this work?

If there is more to human destiny than easing our toils or enriching our pocketbooks, then such work is important. Whatever adds to man's knowledge will inevitably add to his stature, as well. To make sure that higher education can keep providing the opportunities for such research is one of 1958 man's best guarantees that human life will not sink to meaninglessness.

ALFRID NORTH WHITEHEAD once said, "In the conditions of modern life, the rule is absolute: the race which does not value trained intelligence is doomed."

In recent months, the American people have begun to re-learn the truth of Whitehead's statement. For years the nation has taken trained intelligence for granted—or, worse, sometimes shown contempt for it, or denied the conditions under which trained intelligence might flourish. That millions are now recognizing the mistake—and recognizing it before it is too late—is fortunate.

Knowing how to solve the problem, however, and knowing how to provide the means for solution, is more difficult.

But again America is fortunate. There is, among us, a group who not only have been ahead of the general public in recognizing the problem but who also have the understanding and the power, now, to solve it. That group is the college alumni and alumnae.

Years ago Dr. Hu Shih, the scholar who was then Chinese ambassador to the United States, said America's greatest contribution to education was its revolutionary concept of the alumnus: its concept of the former student as an understanding, responsible partner and champion.

Today, this partner and champion of American higher education has an opportunity for service unparalleled in our history. He recognizes, better than anyone, the essential truth in the statement to which millions, finally, now subscribe: that upon higher education depends, in large part, our society's physical and intellectual survival. He recognizes, better than anyone else, the truth in the statement that the race can attain even loftier goals ahead, by strengthening our system of higher education in all its parts. As an alumnus—first by understanding, and then by exercising his leadership—he holds within his own grasp the means of doing so.

Rarely has one group in our society—indeed, every member of the group—had the opportunity and the ability for such high service.

EDUCATION of high quality for as many as are qualified for it has been a cherished American dream. Today we are too close to realizing that dream not to intensify our striving for it.

Tuition Increase

Tuition at Bowdoin will go up from $800 to $1,050 a year, effective next September.

This $250 increase in tuition is drastic, but the Governing Boards reached their decision in February with the conviction that Bowdoin must provide more nearly adequate compensation for its faculty. They feel, and rightly so, that the time has come for a drastic attack upon the problems of faculty salaries, to return

By JOHN T. GOULD JR. '60

THE WINTER SPORTS SEASON has drawn to a close, and, from those people concerned with won and lost records, the Athletic Department has drawn the usual complaints. Yet, the season did not pass without a few high points. Each team had its moments of greatness which were easily remembered when the defeats seemed numerous and the victories few and far between.

Bob Miller and his swimming team were by far the greatest standouts for the season, winning six out of eight meets. Four pool records were broken, including Bob Plourde's tremendous swimming of the backstroke. Bob, captain of the team as a junior and an All-American swimmer for three years, refers to Miller as the greatest coach he has ever seen.

The hockey team, plagued by misfortune throughout the entire season, triumphed over Colby's icemen in one game 5 to 4, in spite of the overwhelming odds against them. The Bowdoin-Colby rivalry in hockey has become very keen, and the Bowdoin victory was some consolation for the season's endeavors — it even merited ringing the chapel bell. After losing three of the starting six through scholarship deficiencies, Coach Corey's team finished the season fighting, but with few chances of winning. The freshman squad will provide the varsity with another line next year, which may give the squad some extra strength.

Winter track, often overlooked because it is not a favorite spectator sport, had some outstanding men this season but lacked depth. Bill McWilliams returned for his senior year, after working last year, and again starred for the squad in the weights. Bill placed fourth in the IC4A meet in New York in March. Bob Packard was outstanding in the mile and two mile, and Larry Wilkins, captain-elect, was very successful in the dashes and the hurdles. Coach Frank Sabastanski deserves a great deal of credit, not only for the regular season, but also for the time he spent planning the interscholastic meet, which brought to the campus track teams from twenty-nine high schools and seven preparatory schools.

Bowdoin's only State Series win this winter was brought home by the ski team, coached and captained by Bruce Chalmers. Chalmers and John Christie led the squad to a close victory over a strong team from the University of Maine for the title.

Bob Donham, the newest addition to the coaching staff, brought to Bowdoin a more professional style of basketball. Captain Brud Stover — according to Colby Coach Lee Williams the greatest two-hand set shooter he saw this year in college basketball — wound up his career by setting four Bowdoin records.

Speaking of Donham, Bowdoin men can look forward with pleasure to meeting him at alumni meetings or here on the campus. This year his team came close to the all-time college record of 10 wins and 11 losses with a 9 and 12 record.

Bob will be spending the summer organizing and operating a basketball clinic camp at Casco with former teammate Bill Sharman of the Boston Celtics. Both men are excellent instructors, and the camp should be a terrific experience for New England boys from 10 to 18 years old.

Casey's Lit — if I may be so forward as to use the familiar title — has been mentioned recently by a group of students who are seeking to have a "Great Books Course" added to the curriculum. The course would concentrate on a few books — books taken from the great literature of many countries. President Sills' course started with the earliest writings known to man and finished up in June with the morning newspaper. The current suggestion does not follow a chronological outline but prefers to tap only the high spots of different cultures.

The Student Curriculum Committee has been influential in formulating the students' plans for the course and will be meeting with the President and the faculty this month, hoping to work out such an addition to the course offerings.

Commencement is June 14 this year. The Masque and Gown will present Volpone by Ben Jonson, a contemporary of Shakespeare. Several students have already checked, and Popham Beach has survived the winter, so it looks as though everything will be perfect for reunions. Be here?

Walter V. Wentworth

Many Bowdoin men may remember that there is an inscription on a path in back of Massachusetts Hall. Some may also have read and remembered the words of that inscription. They say, very simply, "Generous gifts of Walter V. Wentworth of the Class of 1886 are all about you."

Mr. Wentworth died at his home in Old Town on Saturday, March 8, 1958, at the age of 94. A retired Vice President of the Penobscot Chemical Fibre Company, he had been a member of Bowdoin's Board of Overseers since 1929 and was one of the College's most generous benefactors.

Speaking at a testimonial dinner for Mr. Wentworth in Bangor when he retired in 1952, the late President Kenneth Sills said, "I was much struck in the pamphlet circulated at the dinner tonight to find the short account of Mr. Wentworth's life headed by the phrase 'Pulp Manufacturer-Teacher.' That combination of the industrial and the academic should interest us all. Business owes much to our colleges, and our colleges gain much from the interest and support of business. And Mr. Wentworth is a living symbol of the combination.

"... he was an undergraduate in the first year of the administration of President Hyde and has thus known the College during the entire services of the past two presidents of Bowdoin. When one looks back over his life work, we at Bowdoin are glad to remember that his lifelong interest in chemistry began there.

"The Committee on Grounds and Buildings has had many able chairmen; but in the Scotch phrase — where MacGregor sits that is the head of the table — so wherever Mr. Wentworth sat has been with us the head of the table. In the academic world few men concern themselves with such mundane matters as lighting and heating. Here again Mr. Wentworth has been a shining exception. Due largely to his engineering training and experience he has induced his colleagues to put new boilers in the heating plant, new paths across the campus, new methods of saving costs in the operation of the College. And he also has contributed often and in large sums to the various activities of Bowdoin, the Alumni Fund and the Chemistry Building, where there is seen a Wentworth Laboratory."

In his will Mr. Wentworth left to the College a bequest of $350,000. In what this bequest may provide as well as in so many other ways, alumni, undergraduates, faculty, and friends of Bowdoin will always be proud to remember, with gratitude, that the generous gifts of Walter Vinton Wentworth are indeed all about them.

them to their purchasing power of 1940, and, hopefully, to provide for some enhancement of purchasing power such as has come to persons in almost all other walks of life.

Faculty salaries at Bowdoin have 23% less purchasing power today than they did in 1940, despite The Ford Foundation's gift in 1955 of $707,500. This Ford grant was not conceived as a solution to the generally low level of teachers' pay, but rather as an encouragement to essential action on the part of colleges. Bowdoin is now taking a long stride toward that essential action. By 1968 Bowdoin ought to double faculty salaries.

During the current year undergraduates are paying but 43% of the total cost of providing instruction and services for them. Thus each student is being subsidized to the extent of approximately $1,075 (the figure is even higher for the 225 students receiving scholarship aid).

No undergraduate with good academic performance will have to leave the College for financial reasons. This has long been Bowdoin's policy, and the policy will continue. In general, students already on scholarship will receive increases in grants roughly equal to the increase in tuition. Others currently barely able to meet their term bills will be able to apply for scholarship assistance on this basis with assurance that it will be granted.

To help undergraduates and their families to meet the growing expenses of a college education, the Boards also voted that beginning in September tuition payments may be made in twelve monthly installments each year, rather than the present four. In addition, studies leading to the extension of loan programs are under way.

In a statement to students, President Coles cautioned that with sharply rising college costs, "every undergraduate must do his best to profit from the educational opportunities offered by the College." "To do otherwise," he said, "means that not only the student's time and money but also the resources of the College are being unwisely invested."

$3500 For Charity

The 1958 Campus Chest Weekend, held March 21 and 22, established a new record for gross receipts, with something over $3500 raised.

The weekend featured an octet concert, a basketball game between the "Faculty Flashes" (coached by "Red Pants" Dane, more formally known as Professor of Classics Nathan Dane '37), and the "Fraternity All-Stars," and a combined glee club concert.

Sixteen charities and other worthy causes shared in the proceeds. They are World University Service, American Friends Service Committee, Trustees of Athens College, Foster Parents, Committee on Friendly Relations Among Foreign Students, National Scholarship Service and Fund for Negroes, Salvation Army, American Red Cross.

Also Maine Cancer Society, Maine Heart Association, Cumberland County Tuberculosis Association, Pine Tree Society, Brunswick-Topsham Boy and Girl Scouts, Brunswick Humane Society, Brunswick High School Scholarship Fund, and Sweetser Children's Home.

Sloan Awards

Bowdoin is one of six New England colleges which will share in the 1958-59 scholarship program of the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation. Two members of the Class of 1962 will be designated Alfred P. Sloan National Scholars. There are no geographical restrictions on the awards.

The Sloan scholarships will go to men who "have established a record of high character, leadership potential, and scholarly promise." A scholarship may be renewed each year during the regular undergraduate course provided that the recipient continues to meet the necessary requirements. The institutions themselves have complete responsibility for selecting the recipients.

In all, thirty-two institutions throughout the country will participate in the Sloan program next year.

Spring Tour

The Glee Club left on Friday, March 28, on its annual spring vacation tour, including this year five concerts in as many days, beginning at Wheelock College in Boston and continuing on successive days with four New York state appearances, in Albany, Pulaski, Buffalo, and Syracuse.

Bowdoin Browsing

This "Bowdoin Browsing" column has been written by Leighton van Nort, Assistant Professor of Sociology at Bowdoin and Acting Chairman of the Department of Sociology during the spring semester while Dr. Burton W. Taylor is on sabbatical leave.

Professor van Nort joined the Bowdoin faculty in 1955. A native of Philadelphia, he is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and received a master of arts degree from Princeton University.

what it must have been like to live in a city which seemed completely surrounded by the darkness of outer barbarism.

The same fascination of time and survival and a kind of gallantry is found in Loren C. Eiseley's book, The Immense Journey, a series of essays on man's long evolutionary history, its false starts, its blind alleys, its great moments, and — above all — in inexplicable accidents. It is sometimes said that science has taken the mystery out of the world. Only for the uninitiated or the too easily impressed, Eiseley's book seems to say, for the deeper we make our way into the uncharted regions of man's past, the more profound the enigmas which are disclosed, the more imponderable a future which can be foreseen only on the basis of our knowledge of the past. Eiseley is not only a distinguished anthropologist but a fine prose stylist, and a man deeply sensitive to the nuances of human experience.

One of the best detective stories I have encountered is J. S. Weiner's The Piltdown Forgery. The famous skull, "discovered" at Piltdown, England, by Charles Dawson and named eoanthropus dawsoni after the finder, has recently proved to be an extremely clever forgery. Weiner, who played a crucial part in exposing the hoax, tells the story of the intricate detective work which went into its unmasking and makes some deductions about the circumstances of the half-century-old forgery worthy of the great tradition of English thrillers.

The mystery of Piltdown and its solution brings me naturally to the recent re-issue by Dover of Martin Gardner's Fads and Fallacies in the Name of Science, a delightful catalogue of scientific and pseudo-scientific eccentricities and eccentrics. I found I learned quite a lot about science in the process, too. I learned even more from the Dover edition of Schrödinger's Science Theory and Man, which discusses some of the fundamental indeterminacies in modern physics. The most imaginative philosophizing being done today is probably to be found in the work of modern physicists.

The imagination is strained, although in a way which is scarcely pleasant, by Olga Lengyel's macabre account of Auschwitz concentration camp in Five Chimneys. (The chimneys were the smokestacks of the crematorium.) The bravery of which human beings are capable under the most incredible conditions leaves an unforgettable impression.

Despite my announced theme of non-fiction, many of the foregoing themes of man's capacity for survival, his helplessness before the forces of chance, the heights of intellect and the depths of degradation of which he is capable seem to be summed up in the title story of a recent collection of pure fantasy — The Circus of Dr. Lao and Other Incredible Stories, edited by Ray Bradbury. The Circus of Dr. Lao, first published some years ago, shows man's capacity as myth-maker as perhaps his best instrument for integrating his diverse experiences, and the force of this fact is not weakened by the satirical use of mythological material. One wonders what would happen if Dr. Lao's fabulous circus visited Brunswick, Maine, or Haddonfield, New Jersey.

Finally, I should like to mention the portrayal of man as artist in Maurice Grosser's The Painter's Eye. Since I know very little about art, I was intrigued by this book on the development of painting from a painter's point of view. Perhaps my colleagues in the Art Department would look down on this laymen's guide, but I found it fun. I also found myself looking at paintings with a good deal more imagination.

BUFFALO

On Friday, January 31, members of the Bowdoin Club of Buffalo joined alumni of Bates, Colby, and the University of Maine for a dinner meeting at the Brookfield Country Club. The dinner featured clam chowder and broiled lobster which had been flown in from Damariscotta for the occasion. More than half of the seventy persons present were identified as Maine natives.

Mr. Charles Whitehouse of the Maine Department of Economic Development spoke on what is being done to attract new industry to the State. Coach Hal Westerman and Jack Small, a recent U. of M. stalwart, were also guests, but plans to show football movies went awry when the projector was discovered to be inoperative.

In addition to bachelor Ron Straight '54, the following alumni were present with their wives: Leslie Stetson '14, George Craighead '25, Vaughan Clay '30, Donald Cockcroft '31, Ed Milner '31, Homer Fay '49, Russ Kellerman '52, and Convener Morgan Heussler '46.

CHICAGO

Club Secretary Harold Fish '25 reports that thirty-eight alumni, wives, and guests

MUCH of the literature of fantasy that used to fascinate me as a child now seems hopelessly humdrum beside the real possibilities of our world as we explore it through time and space. Escape from parochialism is to be found not only in the creative imaginations of the great writers of fiction but in the equally creative imaginations of scientists and scholars, some of them very good writers indeed. Accordingly, I propose to devote this column to some recent non-fiction I have enjoyed because, in one way or another, it opens new vistas for a spirit of speculation which is akin to fantasy.

One of the fantastic features of history, at least for me, is described in the beautifully printed and illustrated Rutgers translation of Charles Diehl's Byzantium: Greatness and Decline, an extended essay on the city and the civilization which flourished on the banks of the Bosphorus and which we are coming to see as the real metropolis of our own civilization in the early Middle Ages. In an age trembling on the brink of atomic destruction there is something very appealing about a society which gallantly faced imminent destruction again and again and yet survived to build and create anew. Harold Lamb's Constantinople: Birth of an Empire is a more popular treatment of the same theme, although limited to the era of Justinian. Both books lead me to speculate on turned out to hear Professor Herbert Brown on February 7. The meeting was well publicized through the efforts of the able publicity committee chairman, Al Clarke '40. Accounts of it appeared in each of the Chicago papers and in several of the weekly papers in the surrounding suburbs.

Professor Brown lived up to his reputation as a speaker with his delightful descriptions of Bowdoin, past, present, and future.

Professor Alfred Newcombe '14 was the senior alumnus present; he had come all the way from Galesburg to attend the meeting.

The group is developing plans for at least one more meeting before the end of the club year.

CLEVELAND

The Bowdoin Club of Cleveland held its annual dinner meeting at the University Club on Thursday, February 6. Alumni and wives attended. Special Bowdoin guest of the evening was Professor Herbert R. Brown, who delighted his audience in his usual manner with an entertaining and informative account of current affairs at the College.

NEW YORK

The Bowdoin Club of New York held its annual dinner meeting on Friday evening, January 24, at the Manhattan Club. About 125 alumni turned out to greet President Coles, the principal speaker of the evening. Other guests from the campus were Vice President Bela Norton '18, Professor George Quinby '23, and Peter Barnard '50 of the Alumni Office.

Retiring club president Edward Fuller '28 did a fine job as toastmaster. He was emphatic in his praise of Secretary George Griggs jr. '44, who had been so vigorous in organizing the meeting and contacting the club members.

Benjamin Shute '31 was elected President for 1958-59, and George Griggs and Stevens Frost '42 were re-elected as Secretary and Council Member, respectively.

Following a showing of Bowdoin color slides by Pete Barnard, President Coles delivered a talk entitled "Gladly Wolde He Lerne and Gladly Teche," in which he told for the first time of the handsome Chase-Johnson bequest to the College.

PHILADELPHIA

On January 25, at the Merion Cricket Club in Haverford, the Bowdoin Club of Philadelphia held its annual dinner meeting. About seventy people, including alumni, wives, and seven subfreshmen, attended.

Retiring President Richard Bechtel '36 presided at a brief business session in which Assistant Treasurer Delbert Nash '50 and Council Member Arthur Orne '30 delivered reports. President Bechtel introduced three Bowdoin men who had been honored by the College in recent years with honorary degrees: John Halford '07, John Leydon '07, and Edward Snow '14. John Pickard '22 was also introduced as the representative of a generous Bowdoin family, the most recent of whose gifts to the College is Coleman Hall, the new dormitory which has been given by Mrs. Jane Coleman Pickard.

Peter Barnard '50 of the Alumni Office showed a group of color slides of the campus

RHODE ISLAND

Five interested alumni and three representatives from the College met in the home of Dana Swan '29 on February 26 to talk to ten subfreshmen who are interested in Bowdoin. Other alumni present were club president Herb Hanson '43, club secretary Walt Donahue '44, Don Murphy '52, and Bob Arwezon '53. The admissions candidates, who came from a number of schools in the area, had been invited to the meeting through the combined efforts of the Admissions Office and these local alumni.

Representing the College were Coach Adam Walsh, Assistant Director of Admissions Bob Glover '56, and Pete Barnard '50 of the Alumni Office. Color slides of the campus were shown, and informal discussions and conversations ensued, during which the applicants had a chance to get answers to their questions and to find out more about the College. Those who were genuinely interested and well qualified were encouraged to visit the campus. Everyone seemed very pleased by this good meeting, which was a co-operative effort on the part of interested alumni, the Admissions Office, and the coaching staff.

ST. PETERSBURG

The Bowdoin Club of St. Petersburg held another luncheon meeting in February. Secretary Charles S. F. Lincoln '91 reports that the members "turned out 17 strong, plus one outsider, Mr. Beal (Maine '07), who came with Henry Marston and seemed to enjoy our society. Three new men were on hand: Bill Norton '05, Lawrence Cockburn '25, and Fred Wish '13, who came over from Lakeland, a distance of sixty miles. In addition there were the old stalwarts: Cos Smith '90, Fred Fessenden '95, Dr. Marston '99, Webster '10, Haley and Pike '07, Brummett and Dr. Pope '11, Elden Barbour '12, Col. Fogg and Col. Tarbox '14, Kennedy '13, and the Secretary."

SPRINGFIELD

The Bowdoin Club of Springfield held a luncheon meeting at the Highland Hotel on Monday, January 27. In attendance were club president Bob Fleischer '39, secretary Bob Kemp '51, George Chisholm '36, Lou Doherty '19, Jim Hunter '39, Bill Hyde '38, Howard Miller '38, Bob Spooner '51, and Reg Swett '28. Pete Barnard '50 was on hand to represent the College.

The meal was accompanied and followed by a lively discussion in which current problems of local alumni interest and club plans and organization were aired. Some club members showed real interest in instituting monthly luncheons, and hope was expressed that enough interest would be generated for a larger evening meeting late in the spring.

Springfield alumni are greatly interested in the matter of admissions and getting good local candidates interested in the College. Admissions problems in this age of multiple applications and keener competition were discussed. Features of possible alumni activity at the local level in stimulating interest among qualified subfreshmen were thoroughly gone over in an initial effort to make some plans and begin work.

Necrology

1886 WALTER VINTON WENTWORTH, a member of the Board of Overseers since 1929 and a retired Vice President of the Penobscot Chemical Fibre Company, died at his home in Old Town on March 8, 1958, at the age of 94. One of the College's most generous benefactors throughout his lifetime, he added generously to his many benefactions with a bequest of $350,000.

Born in Rockland on December 11, 1863, Mr. Wentworth prepared at Rockland High School and at Bowdoin was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, won the Smyth Mathematical Prize, was managing editor of the Orient, and was class president. The year following his graduation he served as an assistant in chemistry at Bowdoin. He then went to Ticonderoga, N. Y., where he soon became superintendent of the Ticonderoga Pulp and Paper Company. He joined Penobscot Chemical Fibre Company as superintendent in 1898 and later served for thirty-seven years as Manager of Mills, following his promotion to that position in 1915.

Surviving are two step-daughters, Mrs. William Wray of Bangor and Mrs. Maurice Goodwin of Old Town, and two cousins. His fraternity was Zeta Psi. (See page 40.)

1890 EDGAR FRANCIS CONANT, M.D., died on February 7, 1958, in Denver, Colo. Born on June 26, 1867, in Skowhegan, he prepared at Lewiston High School and spent his freshman year at Bates. Following his graduation from Bowdoin he taught grade school in Hanover, Conn., for a year before entering George Washington University Medical School, from which he received his M.D. degree in 1894. He interned at Bridgeport (Conn.) General Hospital and the City of New York Lying-in Hospital and practiced general medicine in Lewiston from 1896 until 1904. He then determined to take up the specialty of eye, ear, nose, and throat and for five months took courses at the New York City Eye and Ear Infirmary, followed by a year in Vienna, Berlin, and London. He practiced his specialties in Denver from November 1, 1905, until his retirement in December of 1949. For many years president of the Rocky Mountain Bowdoin Club, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Erna Christina Conant; three children by a former wife; and three grandchildren. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Alpha Delta Phi.

1895 EDWARD SWEET LOVEJOY, a retired woodenware broker, died in Melrose, Mass., on February 4, 1958. Born in Augusta on February 18, 1872, he prepared at Cony High School and following his graduation magna cum laude in 1895 taught school for five years in Forney and San Antonio, Texas. During 1902-03 he was principal of Megunticook High School in Camden and for the next four years taught in Pennsylvania. He then returned to Melrose and became a woodenware broker, representing fourteen factories in New England, part of Canada, and much of the South. Surviving are three brothers, Charles H. of Wayne, Frank P. of Wiscasset, and Arthur G. of Melrose.

1898 CHARLES SUMNER PETTENGILL died at his home in Augusta on March 21, 1958. Born in Dexter on December 17, 1875, he prepared at Cony High School in Augusta and following his graduation from Bowdoin was principal of the high school in Milbridge for a year and from 1899 until 1901 was principal of the Village School District of Augusta. Since 1902 he had been associated with investment firms, including Charles Gilman Company of Portland and Coffin and Burr of Boston. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Florence Priest Pettengill; two daughters, Mrs. Ruth Farrell of Framingham Center, Mass., and Mrs. William P. Alexander jr. of Honolulu, Hawaii; a brother, Ray W. '05; and four grandchildren. His fraternity was Delta Kappa Epsilon.

1899 ROYAL SENTER CLEAVES, retired president of Dunlaevy, Cleaves and Burnham Insurance Company, died at his home in Elizabeth, N. J., on January 14, 1958. Born on February 24, 1877, in Bridgton, he prepared for Bowdoin at Bridgton Academy and following his graduation in 1899 became a fire insurance inspector in Boston. In 1905 he moved to New Jersey, where he was a fire protection engineer. In 1918 he organized a general insurance business known as Jennings and Cleaves, Inc., the foundation for a later association known as Dunlaevy, Cleaves, and Burnham, founded in 1933. He retired in 1951. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Clara Graham Cleaves, whom he married in Elizabeth in 1907; a daughter, Mrs. William V. Schomp; and three sons, Robert A. '35, Graham, and Royal S. jr. His fraternity was Theta Delta Chi.

1900 RALPH ISAAH MORSE died on January 31, 1957, according to word recently received in the Alumni Office. Born on January 12, 1876, in Liberty, he prepared at Maine Central Institute and attended Bowdoin for part of one year before transferring to Bates, from which he was graduated in 1900. He settled in Belfast, where he was a member of the law firm of Dunton and Morse and served as president of the Belfast Home for Aged Women. He was a member of the Maine House of Representatives for two terms and of the Senate for one term. A 32nd degree Mason, he was Waldo County Attorney from 1919 to 1925. His fraternity was Zeta Psi.

1901 DONALD FRANCIS SNOW, editor of Tales of Bowdoin, and from 1929 to 1933 United States Representative from the old Fourth Maine District, died on February 12, 1958, at his home in Gorham. Born on September 7, 1877, in Bangor, he prepared at the local high school and following his graduation from Bowdoin entered the University of Maine Law School, receiving a bachelor of laws degree in 1903 and a master of laws degree in 1904. He was a lawyer in Bangor until his election to Congress. In recent years he had been secretary for the E. C. Jones Insurance Company of Portland.

A member of the Alumni Council from 1915 to 1919, Mr. Snow was also an Overseer of the College for three years, from 1930 until 1933. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Christine Pennell Snow, whom he married in Brunswick on October 3, 1906, and a son, William P. '29. His fraternity was Delta Kappa Epsilon.

1902 HARRY OSCAR WOOD died in Pasadena, Calif., on February 5, 1958. Born on July 28, 1879, in Gardiner, he prepared at the local high school and attended Bowdoin for a year before transferring to Harvard, from which he was graduated in 1902. He also received an M.A. from Harvard in 1904, then served for eight years as an instructor in mineralogy and geology at the University of California. From 1912 until 1917 he was a research associate at the Hawaiian Volcano Observatory. During World War I he was a captain in the Army Engineer Corps and from 1919 until 1921 served as acting assistant secretary of the National Research Council in Washington. For the next twenty years he was a research associate in seismology of the Carnegie Institution of Washington in Pasadena, retiring in 1942. At one time he served as Vice President and a Director of the Seismological Society of America.

1910 FRED PATTERSON WEBSTER, M.D., a pediatrician in Portland for more than fifty years, died at his home in that city on February 26, 1958. Born in Somerville, Mass., on April 18, 1878, he prepared at the Boston English High School and was graduated from Harvard Medical School in 1901. He was house physician at the Massachusetts General Hospital and the Boston Children's Hospital before setting up his practice in Portland in 1904. He became a member of the Maine Medical School faculty in 1905 and in 1907 enrolled as an undergraduate at Bowdoin. He was graduated in 1910 summa cum laude.

Dr. Webster was a pediatrician at the Maine Eye and Ear Infirmary and the Maine General Hospital. Until 1918 he was Professor of Pediatrics at the Medical School. A member of the American Academy of Pediatrics, the Portland Club, and the Portland Country Club, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Helen Parsons Webster; two daughters, Mrs. R. William Brown jr. of Lunenburg, Mass., and Mrs. Richard K. Gould of Newport Beach, Calif.; and two sons, Scott M. of Van Nuys, Calif., and Eliot C. '32 of Plainville, Conn. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Psi Upsilon.

Dr. John F. Fulton, Professor of the History of Medicine at Yale, and Dr. Oliver S. Hayward of New London, N. H., are collaborating in a biography of Dr. Nathan Smith (1762-1829), who for five years taught a course in the theory and practice of medicine at the Maine Medical School at Bowdoin.

Many of Dr. Smith's letters have never been found, and Dr. Fulton and Dr. Hayward hope that because of his connection with the Medical School some Bowdoin alumni may possess some of them. They would be grateful to learn of any letters, written either to or by Dr. Smith.

He is survived by four daughters, two sons, and nine grandchildren.

1911 CORNELIUS JOHN TAYLOR, M.D., a physician in Bangor for more than forty years, died at his home in that city on February 18, 1958. Born in Bangor on December 19, 1887, he prepared at the local high school and following his graduation from the Medical School interned at the Eastern Maine General Hospital before setting up his practice in Orono. He moved back to Bangor several years later. One of the state's first medical examiners, he held the position until 1954. He was for three years Bangor City Physician and served in World War I as a first lieutenant in the Army Medical Corps. His fraternity was Delta Upsilon.

1920 BERNARD ABRAHAM MARGLIS, M.D., founder and president of the Bridgeport (Conn.) Ear, Nose, and Throat Hospital, died in Miami Beach, Fla., on March 8, 1958. A native of Odessa, Russia, he was graduated from the Medical School in 1920 and interned at St. Vincent's Hospital. In 1921 he set up his practice in Bridgeport and later studied his specialty in European medical schools. He established the first ear, nose, and throat hospital in Connecticut in 1935. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Elsie Weber Marglis; a son, Dr. Malcolm Marglis of Pacific Palisades, Calif.; a daughter, Mrs. Jack Ladenheim of Elmhurst, Ill.; a brother, four sisters, and four grandchildren.

Commencement Preview

Last year's experiment, the Alumni Institute, was well received and will again be a part of the Commencement program. At 9:30 a.m. on Friday, June 13, Professor Philip C. Beam will speak on "Architecture As an Art and As a Profession" at the Walker Art Building. At 2:00 p.m. in the Smith Auditorium, Professor James M. Moulton will lecture on "Animal Sounds of the Sea." If alumni interest in these Institute lectures grows, the College is willing to expand the series.

Class reunions, as usual, will bring many alumni back. Family gatherings appear increasingly popular and several classes are to hold informal off-year assemblies.

Professor Moulton

William R. Crowley, ably abetted by Rufus E. Stetson and Carl M. Robinson, has the Fifty-year class reunion well underway. Headquarters for 1908 will be at Room No. 20 in Hyde Hall and in Conference Room B at Moulton Union. Friday's dinner will be at the Eagle Hotel.

1913's Forty-fifth will center around the Lookout Point House in Harpswell with campus gathering spots at No. 19 Hyde Hall and Conference Room A in the Union. Rex Conant is reunion chairman with Chet Abbott his assistant. Families will be housed at the Lookout Point House and Friday's dinner will be held there.

Bela Norton and Brick Hanson are the steering committee for 1918's Fortieth. Campus headquarters are at No. 1 South Appleton Hall. On Friday class members and guests gather at Sebasco Estates.

The Thirty-five-year class has campus headquarters in South Moore Hall. Chairman Fat Hill has arranged Friday's outing and dinner at Seguin Lodge at Georgetown.

Don Parks is the 1928 Chairman. Campus headquarters are in North Moore Hall and Friday's dinner at Sebasco Estates.

The big Twenty-fifth party centers at the Pickard Field House. Co-chairmen Dick Boyd and John Milliken have a full program outlined for three days. Housing for unaccompanied class members will be provided in North Appleton Hall. Family accommodations will be in a nearby motel. Friday's big doings are scheduled for the Auburn Colony in Harpswell.

Geof Stanwood reports that 1938 will gather in South Maine and migrate on Friday to the Bath Country Club.

The Fifteen-year class has headquarters in North Maine Hall and will dine on Friday at the newly remodeled Stowe House on Federal Street.

Steve Monaghan and Bert Moore with Cab Easton's help have lined up a record-making Tenth Reunion for 1948. Already over seventy members say they will be on hand. Campus headquarters in South Winthrop Hall and a lobster feed on Friday at Ray Swift's summer home on Orr's Island.

Bob Linnell reports that 1953's Fifth will be celebrated at North Winthrop Hall and at the Simon Gurnet Restaurant.

1910 usually holds a reunion each year but details are not available at this writing. 1929 has accepted the invitation to join with 1928 at Sebasco Estates. Members of 1950, Bowdoin's largest class, will again stage an off-year reunion, with campus headquarters in No. 17 South Appleton and a dinner party yet to be decided upon.

As always, the Society of Bowdoin Women will maintain open house at their headquarters in Gibson Hall, where all Bowdoin ladies and their friends are welcome. The Society will sponsor the customary Friday and Saturday luncheons.

Notice was given in the ballot mailing that the Friday luncheons for both the men and the women will feature a chicken barbecue prepared and served by the Nichols Barbecue Service of Exeter, New Hampshire.

There is ample evidence that the attendance at Bowdoin's 153rd Commencement will be large.

Bowdoin Is In Her Sons

Approximately 175 men will receive bachelor of arts degrees on June 14 at Bowdoin's 153rd Commencement exercises. Included are some of the most capable and distinguished undergraduates in the history of the College.

Take Bob Plourde of Pawtucket, R. I., for example. An All-American swimmer for three consecutive years, he is one of the top four or five backstrokers in the country. He holds the New England record in the 200 yard backstroke, he won the Easterns, and he finished fifth in the Nationals.

Or take Brud Stover of Bath, who was named to the All-Maine football and basketball teams this year and almost made the All-Maine baseball team. He is one of the finest athletes in Bowdoin's history and is without question the best basketball player ever to attend the College.

Or Allan Wooley of East Peru, who compiled almost a straight "A" record in his courses and still found time to win two varsity letters as a diver on the swimming team.

Bill McWilliams of Dorchester, Mass., two years ago was the top hammer thrower in the country in collegiate circles. He stayed out of school for a year to work and to help his family, got married, and now has a family of his own. Although he held an outside job, he still scored sixteen points in the State Meet and during his three years of competition amassed the amazing record of nine firsts and three seconds in that traditional event, for a grand total of fifty-four points.

Nick Kostis of Sanford was awarded both a Fulbright Scholarship and a Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship this spring. He chose the Fulbright and will study at the University of Nancy in France.

Plourde, Stover, Wooley, and Kostis all entered Bowdoin in the fall of 1954 as Alumni Fund Scholars. McWilliams was the first recipient of the Adriel U. Bird Scholarship. It is significant that prematriculation scholarship men have gone on to become some of the most outstanding men in their class. This is true each year.

Of course, the graduating class also includes such non-scholarship men as Roger Howell jr. of Baltimore, Md., who has compiled a straight "A" record for four years at Bowdoin and who will read in the Honor School of Modern History at St. John's College, Oxford University, during the next two years as a Rhodes Scholar.

Then there is Pete Potter of Portland, who has already made two highly successful appearances on Arthur Godfrey's television and radio programs and who last fall made his first record album.

More than one hundred years ago, back in 1855, someone said, "Bowdoin is in her sons. There is no Bowdoin without them. They have made her what she is, and they constitute good and sufficient reasons why she should be sustained."

These seniors are only a few of the many living, breathing reasons why Bowdoin men are proud to be sons of the College.

THE COVER

This picture of the Presidents' Gateway, the main entrance to the campus from Bath Street, was taken some years ago by Stephen E. Merrill '35 of Brunswick. The Gateway was erected in 1932 as the gift of the Class of 1907 in memory of President Hyde "as a mark of the enduring regard of all Bowdoin men for the leadership of their Presidents." Keen-memory alumni may recall seeing a somewhat similar picture on the cover of the November, 1948, ALUMNUS.

Bowdoin in the News

Associate Justice Harold H. Burton '09 of the United States Supreme Court will receive the Bowdoin Prize for 1958 at a special convocation to be held on September 25.

The selection of Justice Burton was made by a committee consisting of the Presidents of Harvard and Yale Universities and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court of Maine.

A summa cum laude graduate of Bowdoin in 1909, Justice Burton was Mayor of Cleveland from 1935 until 1940 and then served in the United States Senate until President Harry Truman appointed him to the Supreme Court in 1945. He has been a member of the Bowdoin Board of Overseers since 1936.

The Bowdoin Prize is awarded not oftener than "once in each five years to that graduate or former member of Bowdoin College, or member of its Faculty at the time of the award, who shall have made during the period the most distinctive contribution in any field of human endeavor. The Prize shall be awarded only to one who shall, in the judgment of the Committee of Award, be recognized as having won national and not merely local distinction, or who, in the judgment of the committee, is fairly entitled to be so recognized."

The Prize amounts to four-fifths of the total income of a fund now amounting to $25,500, established as a memorial to William J. Curtis '75 by Mrs. Curtis and her children in 1928. This year's award will be worth $4700.

Professor Thomas A. Riley '28 of the Department of German has been awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship for 1958-59. He will leave the United States in June and spend the year in Germany, largely in Marburg and partly in Munich, working on the problem of the relationship among religion, philosophy, and literature. He and Mrs. Riley will return in June of 1959.

This year will mark Professor Riley's sixth year of work at German universities, either as a student or as a faculty member. He feels that periodic return to Europe is essential for all professors of foreign languages and literature, thus refreshing their contact with the foreign world which it is their duty to introduce to American students.

"The great expense of foreign study," he commented, "can be met only by such foundations as the Fulbright Commission and the Guggenheim Foundation."

The Guggenheim Memorial Foundation is granting a total of more than $1,400,000 this year to 322 scholars and artists. Fellowships are granted to persons who have demonstrated the highest capacity for original scholarly research and artistic creation.

The Oakes Center of Bowdoin College at Bar Harbor, given to the College last December by Lady Eunice Oakes, will be the location of a six-weeks' Speech Workshop for Teachers this summer. Professor Albert R. Thayer '22 will serve as director of the program.

Twenty teachers or teachers-in-training will be chosen to study at the Speech Workshop between July 7 and August 15 and to live at The Oakes Center. In addition, non-resident students will be enrolled. Among the visiting lecturers will be Dr. Louise Ames, Director of Research at the Gesell Institute of Child Development in New Haven, Conn., and Dr. Peter W. Bowman, Superintendent of the Pineland Hospital and Training Center at Pownal.

Two courses will be offered at the Speech Workshop for Teachers, each providing three semester hours of academic credit. One is "Speech Development, Normal and Abnormal," and the other, "Speech Research and Program Building."

Lady Oakes' husband, the late Sir Harry Oakes, Bart., was graduated from Bowdoin in 1896. The Oakes Center occupies the property formerly known as "The Willows."

Novelist Charles Mergendahl '41 has gone to Hollywood to write the screen script for the movie version of his new volume, The Bramble Bush, which is scheduled for publication next fall both in this country and in England.

Warner Brothers has bought the screen rights to The Bramble Bush, the story of a doctor who commits a mercy killing, tries to convince himself that he did it completely unselfishly, then begins to realize that he had ulterior motives, which he would not admit to himself. The story takes place in the Cape Cod area of Massachusetts.

Mr. Mergendahl has left his position as script editor of the television dramatic show "Suspicion." A native of Lynn, Mass., he grew up in Newton and was graduated from Newton High School and Phillips Exeter Academy. At Bowdoin he wrote several plays, including a full-length one entitled Me and Harry, which was later produced in Boston and New York.

He has also written five earlier novels and a great many short stories. During World War II he was a Navy lieutenant and served as a boat officer in landings at North Africa, Sicily, Tarawa, Kwajalein, Leyte Gulf, and Guam. He was awarded the Bronze Star for his part in the action at Tarawa.

Mr. Mergendahl is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Mergendahl of Brunswick. His father was for many years head of the mathematics department at Newton High School in Massachusetts and is now Lecturer in Mathematics at Bowdoin.

The 1957-58 Alumni Fund

The appended tabulation is a portrayal of the Alumni Fund as of May 15, 1958, with the comparative standing of classes in the Cup competition.

The participation objective is Sixty Per Cent of all Bowdoin men, and each class is asked to register as contributors Sixty Per Cent of its members. Varying dollar objectives are assigned; the sum of them equals the $160,000 overall objective.

Chairman Jotham D. Pierce '39 asks every alumnus to scan the tabulation carefully and to act promptly, as he is able, to help improve the standing of his own class.

Letters To The Editor

This issue of the ALUMNUS sees the inauguration of what we hope will become a regular feature—letters from readers. The Editors reserve the right to decide what letters shall appear and also to select portions of letters to be printed.

Sloppy Craftsmanship?

Any new publishing venture tingles the imagination of people involved in publishing, writing, and reading. This is especially true when a Bowdoin man working for a publisher reads a Bowdoin column discussing publishing. I would like to offer my comment on "Bowdoin Browsing," which appeared on page 9 of the February ALUMNUS.

The message of the piece, if I rightly sense it, is that publishers are bad men. Their motivation is profit, and they are not doing their job in the best possible manner. Perhaps this is true. Yet there appear to be strong arguments that Madison Avenue is putting out more good books per capita, per day, or per dollar than any other portion of the publishing industry in history. However, Professor Hall is entitled to his opinion. I have other things in mind.

Any writer who throws stones at publishers invites criticism of his throwing arm. What about the writing of this piece?

It lacks structure and is full of long, hard-to-read sentences. It begins without making its purpose plain, rambles with no apparent sense of direction, and ends with a silly pun that has no connection with the subject.

It is full of half-sentences. One can be awfully stuffy about the omission of a verb, but a fifty-word ramble without one does not make for easy reading. Moreover, confusion for the sake of confusion isn't funny. I refer to the half-sentence, "In other words, the sort of stuff a man who likes to think about what he's read likes to kick around with those who also like to kick around what they've been pleased to think about what they've read."

Among the names that come to my mind when people say "Bowdoin" are Longfellow, Hawthorne, and Herbert Ross Brown. Here are men capable of grand thoughts and clear expression of them. Professor Hall writes in the company of greatness.

But I find no grandeur in his writing. If he is qualified to speak, he does not demonstrate it. If he has constructive criticism, he does not offer it. He attacks the standards of others without demonstrating high standards of his own. Worst of all, he demonstrates to readers of the ALUMNUS that Bowdoin students are learning English from people who cannot use it well themselves.

The New York Times of March 29 quotes Dean Howard E. Wilson of the University of California in Los Angeles as asserting that, "A tradition of 'sloppy craftsmanship' extends through American society." Here is a powerful example of real importance to readers of the ALUMNUS and letters from the Alumni Office.

Three Cheers For "Browsing"

Three cheers for "Bowdoin Browsing" and may my cheers be one noise among many. I had Dr. Hall in English 2 in 1946. He was a good man in the classroom then, and obviously an accomplished wit with a typewriter now.

While the confused publishers are in for Knopf examinations (would top-Knopf be too terrible?) let me disagree with Dr. Hall and Mr. Knopf in their statement (for the former assented to the latter's confession) that "the taste of the reading public is better than that of us who cater to it." I am convinced that Mr. Knopf's standards don't lack confidence so much as his market analysts lack perspicacity, proper sampling or what have you. That is to say, a book publisher who wants to stay solvent joins Marshall Field's in giving the lady (or man or child for that matter) what she wants and joins her in enthusing over it. In short, I think Mr. Knopf's opinions will never offend the public. Not his public utterances at any rate. Consequently, any book that sells well is ipso facto a good one. Poor sellers may or may not be good, but that good sellers may be trash — Horrors! Hence the fiction about good taste.

So far as I can determine from the excerpts reprinted in "Bowdoin Browsing," Mr. Knopf is quite clear in getting this "quality" judgment across.

As an experiment it might be interesting to ask a publisher of a successful book what he really thinks of it. I would be very surprised if he thought other than highly of it.

Blue Pencil Class Notes

I liked the April issue very much. I wish every issue could contain an essay of the merit of President Coles' and also other articles of a scholarly nature. Of course we could hope to see only occasionally such pieces as the 32-page "Special Report."

I feel that too much space has been given in the past to "Class Notes." Considerable cutting could be done in that section to eliminate the inconsequential. Specifically, some of the "news" with which I have been supplied about men of my vintage could well have been omitted or drastically blue-pencilled.

A Visit With Bowdoin

This letter is written to make my comments in regard to the April issue of the ALUMNUS. My personal enjoyment of the magazine has been to read about Bowdoin, Bowdoin happenings, and Bowdoin people. Ever since I have been reading the ALUMNUS, which is now quite a few years, it has been more or less like having a visit with Bowdoin people and hearing about Bowdoin things. I usually have read the ALUMNUS from cover to cover, as you have done a wonderful job, in my opinion, over the years to keep Bowdoin men informed of the things that they should know about the College.

I frankly was somewhat disappointed, therefore, to find in this April issue the long article on "American Higher Education 1958." Although I most certainly like to keep abreast of education and I realize that Bowdoin now has no means of expressing thoughts on matters such as this except through the ALUMNUS, I had a let-down feeling when I saw the lack of any information on the classes. In fact, my let-down was sufficient that I got very little out of the lecture on American Higher Education because I think unintentionally I rather resented something being put in that was not directly "Bowdoin."

These are strictly my own personal opinions, but I have to read so many articles in the course of my business that I have always looked at the ALUMNUS as well as the Orient, of which I get each issue, as a form of relaxation or diversion.

THE MIND OF THE SOUTH

The 1958 Institute

The Mind of the South was the subject of the 1958 Institute Lecture Series, held from April 10 to 17. Each of the six speakers considered some aspect of the South today. The complete program was as follows:

- April 10 Professor C. Vann Woodward, Department of History, Johns Hopkins University. "The New South: Social and Cultural Changes."
- April 11 Pleas Looney, Director of the Planning and Industrial Development Board of the State of Alabama. "The Industrial and Economic Development of the South."
- April 14 Mrs. Hodding Carter, Greenville, Miss. "The Current Political Situation in the South."
- April 15 Professor E. Franklin Frazier, Department of Sociology, Howard University. "The Current Status of the Negro in the South."
- April 16 Professor Donald Davidson, Department of English, Vanderbilt University. "The New South and the Conservative Tradition."
- April 17 Professor Allen Tate, Department of English, University of Minnesota. "Contemporary Southern Literature."

Some most interesting statements came out of the lectures themselves and also out of the question and answer periods held both following the lectures in the evening and at the Moulton Union with undergraduates the next morning over coffee.

Professor Woodward stated that "the only thing about the South that has not changed is its history, the collective experience of its people. In that experience the distinctiveness of the Southern heritage remains secure. It confronts the national experience of abundance and opulence with a long Southern experience of poverty. It opposes the national legend of success and invincibility with a regional experience of defeat and frustration. It confronts the American myth of innocence and social felicity with a Southern experience of evil and tragedy."

The following night Mr. Looney pointed out that the goal of the Southern states is one thousand new manufacturing plants each year through 1965. In 1900 the South was producing only 9% of the manufacturing output of the United States. Today it is producing about 24%.

Mr. Looney concluded by summing up what he called "the sentiments of the South and of all the areas" in the words of Daniel Webster, who said, "When my eyes for the last time behold the sun in the Heavens, may they rest upon the glorious ensign of this republic, still full high advanced, its arms and trophies streaming in original lustre, not a star obscured or a stripe effaced, but everything blazing in characters of living light all over its ample folds as they wave over land and sea, and in every wind under heaven, that sentiment dear to every American heart, liberty and union now and forever, one and inseparable."

Mrs. Betty Carter, the wife of Pulitzer Prize newspaperman Hodding Carter '27, declared that the Republican party has once again become "the party of the Federal bayonet" as far as the South is concerned. "A conventional two-party system in the South," she stated, "is again a remote possibility as the issue returns to the old one of white solidarity against the outside."

"The longer-range picture does, however, envision the possibility of massive political realignments in the South with the transformation of the area from a predominantly agricultural society to an industrial society and with the inevitable enfranchisement of the Negro masses. Certainly such realignment is not too far distant in the upper South (Virginia and North Carolina), in the southwest (Texas), and in certain local areas within all the Southern states."

Professor Frazier pointed out that industrialization and urbanization are bringing a new Negro into existence in the South — a Negro who has "a new conception of himself and of his rights as an American citizen. . . . Nearly two-thirds of the Negro farmers in the South are tenants and the majority of the tenants are still share croppers who represent one of the lowest income groups in the United States. However, as the result of urbanization a new Negro middle class about one-half as large relatively as the Negro middle class in the North has emerged in the South."

"The movement to cities," Dr. Frazier continued, "has emancipated Negroes from their former semi-feudal status and from the traditional social controls which have maintained their subordination. In the mobility and anonymity of the urban environment Negroes are developing a different relationship with whites. As the result of their greater freedom, Negroes are developing a new sense of personal worth in their struggle for full citizenship in the urban industrial society which is coming into existence in the South."

Professor Davidson set forth his opinion that "By judicial process, under our present Leviathan government, the schools of certain Southern communities have already been converted into Federal jails, in which the pupils, both white and Negro, are in effect prisoners; and the teachers are converted into prison guards."

"The wise and prudent course," he continued, "is to study the present sectional quarrel in the light of the larger context in order to discover where the actual North and the actual South can find common ground. The first important step is to revive the old American conviction that a government which is not firmly kept in the position of a servant of society will inevitably become a tyrant over society."

"A judicial decision that has the force of social legislation is the most tyrannical of all governmental acts," according to Dr. Davidson, "for the simple reasons that (1) the will of the millions of people concerned was not previously ascertained through free public discussion, ballot, and action in Congress; and (2) once the mistaken decision has been made, it is not easily revocable."

"It is as peremptory as blackmail or threat to murder. That is the heart of the South's present ground of resistance to the Supreme Court."

"Through the use of injunctions and contempt-of-court proceedings, a Federal District judge on very thin excuse can throw citizens into jail for peaceful protest, can try and sentence them, in some cases, without a jury trial. He can, in effect, end the rights of assembly and free speech guaranteed under the First Amendment. He can do this as long as he holds a school desegregation case under his jurisdiction, as the Supreme Court has empowered and directed him to do; and that may be for years."

Poet and critic Allen Tate, in the sixth and final Institute lecture, stated that "the new Southern literature is now the center of American literature." The new literature in the South after 1920, he said, was made possible by a change in the Southern mode of discourse from rhetoric to dialecticism. "William Faulkner would not have been possible without a whole school of writers who rose with him."

ADMISSIONS AT BOWDOIN: Facts and Factors

AS THE ACADEMIC YEAR draws to a close and the new freshman class takes shape, alumni, faculty, and staff members are once more enmeshed in hundreds of questions, answers, and opinions about admissions at Bowdoin — policy, procedure, and practice.

Perhaps the best way to begin this commentary is by listing the factors which are considered for each applicant. Simply stated, these are:

1. secondary school academic record, from ninth grade through the first half of the senior year (inclusive);
2. results of standardized tests, including College Board Examinations;
3. a confidential statement by the proper school official;
4. information about personal qualifications from other sources, including alumni, friends, and teachers;
5. a personal interview, whenever possible (preferably at the College);
6. record of participation in significant school and community affairs.

An examination of all of these factors renders a total impression of the candidate's performance to date and his promise of achievement for the future.

The question of early admissions arises again and again. In answer to it, Director of Admissions Hubert S. Shaw '36 says, "When a candidate appears to be clearly qualified, with no question, the interested applicant is promised admission." This has been part of the practice at Bowdoin for the last ten years. Furthermore, the practice will continue to be employed in each instance that warrants it. It should be pointed out, however, that in the majority of cases, the factors on which an early decision might be based are either absent or inconclusive; hence a decision must be made at a later date when the records are complete and all the factors can be fairly weighed and compared.

Subfreshmen are encouraged to visit Bowdoin whenever possible. The best time for such visits is when the College is in session, when the subfreshmen can see the College in action, visit classes and athletic events, meet members of the faculty, and be entertained and guided around the campus by the undergraduates. During the current year, three winter weekends were specifically used for the entertainment of groups of admissions candidates. These boys had been invited to the College because they seemed to be potentially good prospects. Not only were they entertained in a fine, impressive, and straightforward manner by the undergraduates, but they were also given an opportunity to be interviewed, to talk to members of the faculty and staff, to attend classes, and to visit and inspect Bowdoin's buildings and campus. To be effective, such visits and interviews should take place no later than the first of April.

Approximately 175 schools were visited during the year by members of the faculty and staff. Mr. Shaw and Mr. Glover made the majority of these visits. President Coles, Professor Herbert R. Brown, and Mr. Barnard were among other members of the College community who talked to sub-freshmen at their various schools about colleges, admissions, and Bowdoin in particular.

Bowdoin alumni will be interested to know that fifty-one sons of alumni applied for admission to next September's entering class. Of that number thirty-six have been admitted.

The program of prematriculation scholarships continues to be an important aspect of Bowdoin admissions. This April, seventy-nine candidates were tendered awards; it is expected that approximately fifty-five of these awards will be accepted and held by members of the Class of 1962. The awards range in amount from $400 to $1500, and the prematriculation scholarships will total about $55,000. Of this amount a large percentage will stem from the Alumni Fund, the Directors of the Alumni Fund having recommended that the Governing Boards allocate about $30,000 from next year's Fund for Alumni Fund Prematriculation Scholarships. The Fund Directors are also recommending that another $25,000 of the Fund proceeds be allocated for other scholarship purposes.

More than fifty per cent of the freshman class will come to Bowdoin in the fall as a result of significant alumni help and interest. Alumni groups which have made worthwhile efforts this year include the Bowdoin Clubs of Albany, Boston, Central New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Connecticut, Kennebec Valley, Knox-Lincoln-Waldo, New Jersey, North Shore, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Rhode Island, and Worcester. Numerous individual alumni have also been of inestimable assistance in co-operating with the Admissions Office. Often working quietly and without public fanfare, singly or in small groups of two or three, many alumni have been instrumental in telling qualified youngsters about the College — and in telling the College about these good prospective candidates.

Bowdoin alumni who have specific questions or suggestions are invited to bring them to the attention of the Director of Admissions. Genuinely interested alumni who keep themselves informed are among the best and most forceful ambassadors the College can ever have.

W. Stephen Piper, son of William S. Piper jr. '31, has been awarded one of the newly created Sloan Scholarships. Now a senior at Worcester Academy, he will enter Bowdoin in September as a member of the Class of 1962.

This article has been prepared by Peter C. Barnard '50, Administrative Assistant in the Alumni Office, in cooperation with the Admissions Office. The ALUMNUS will carry other articles on admissions as often as practicable, in the knowledge that alumni are always interested in this vital aspect of the College, which has become increasingly complex since World War II.

On The Campus

Eugene A. Waters '59 of Westbrook, captain-elect of the 1958 varsity football team, was awarded the "Wooden Spoon" on Ivy Day as the most popular man in the junior class, continuing the tradition begun back in 1874.

Waters entered Bowdoin in the fall of 1955 as the recipient of an Alumni Fund Scholarship. A member of Psi Upsilon fraternity, he played both fullback and halfback last fall and averaged 4.43 yards per attempt in forty-nine carries. He was also a defensive standout.

Nicholas P. Kostis '58 of Sanford has been awarded a Fulbright Scholarship to the University of Nancy in France, where he will specialize in French literature, beginning next fall. During the summer he will study French at the university in Grenoble, in the French Alps, and will also tour France.

Earlier this spring Kostis was awarded a Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship. Since the two awards may not be held simultaneously, he was appointed an honorary Woodrow Wilson Fellow.

A graduate of Sanford High School, Kostis entered Bowdoin in the fall of 1954 as the recipient of an Alumni Fund Scholarship. He was elected to Phi Beta Kappa last June and has been a James Bowdoin Scholar for three consecutive years. He is a member of Delta Sigma fraternity.

Cameron D. Bailey '58 of Portland, has been awarded a fellowship by Wesleyan University, where he will study for the next two years in the Master of Arts in Teaching Program. He will specialize in the field of social sciences at Wesleyan. During one semester he will teach in a public school in Connecticut.

Like both Waters and Kostis, Bailey entered Bowdoin as the recipient of an Alumni Fund Scholarship. He is a member of Zeta Psi fraternity, has been a James Bowdoin Scholar, and has been active in music and dramatics. He was married last August.

Roland L. O'Neal '59 of North Conway, N. H., received the Franklin Delano Roosevelt Cup on April 30 as the member of the three lower classes whose "vision, humanity, and courage most contribute to making Bowdoin a better college."

O'Neal entered college as the recipient of a Bowdoin Scholarship. A graduate of Kennett High School in Conway, he served as chairman of the Campus Chest Committee, which in March directed the annual Campus Chest Weekend. The various events this year produced more than $3500 for seventeen charities.

A member of Alpha Delta Phi fraternity, O'Neal is managing editor of the Orient, is a member of the Student Council, and is on the Dean's List. He is one of the best skiers in college but missed most of the 1958 season with a broken leg, suffered in Vermont.

Ralph A. Westwig '58 of South Portland received Honorable Mention in the National Science Foundation's predoctoral fellowship program for 1958-59. Another pre-matriculation scholarship winner, Westwig received a competitive State of Maine Scholarship four years ago. He is a member of Psi Upsilon fraternity and a graduate of South Portland High School.

An Apple For The Teacher

"An apple for the teacher" turned out to be inscribed cuff links and tie clasps for the professors when sixteen Maine high school science teachers gave concrete evidence of their appreciation of Bowdoin's In-Service Institute on Modern Physics at their final class early in May.

The sixteen teachers, who had been meeting at the College one night a week since last September, with extra sessions during school vacations, decided that they wanted to express their gratitude to their four instructors. So they purchased cuff links and tie clasps, had them inscribed "P.S.S.C. (Physical Science Study Committee) 1957-58," and presented them to Bowdoin Professors Noel C. Little, Myron A. Jeppesen, Dan E. Christie, and Elroy O. LaCasce jr.

The Bowdoin In-Service Institute was supported by a grant from the National Science Foundation. Under the program the secondary school science teachers met at the College every Monday night for thirty weeks, with all expenses paid. Bowdoin and Brown University were the only New England institutions which received in-service grants for the academic year 1957-58.

All of the teachers received credit at the graduate level. And all of the members of the Physics Department received the academic profession's equivalent of "an apple for the teacher" — inscribed cuff links and tie clasps.

Dramatics

Director of Dramatics George H. Quinby '23 reports that the Masque and Gown season has been unusually well balanced in its offerings. Starting with the delicately sensitive Tea and Sympathy, which championed the cause of the "off-horse" student in an American educational community, the season went on to the witty satirization of war and international misunderstandings in a modern-dress version of the Giraudoux-Fry Tiger at The Gates.

The Masque and Gown continued with four thoughtful and effective student-written one-act plays — so evenly produced that prizes for authors, directors, and actor were distributed across the board.

For the undergraduate audience the season reached a climax in the ever-popular Mister Roberts, played with delightful vigor, understanding, and humor by a cast drawn from nine of the fraternities on campus.

Ben Jonson's Volpone is to be shown at Commencement to conclude the work of the year. It is hoped that many alumni will take advantage of this opportunity to see how the Pickard Theater in Memorial Hall helps improve the acting and production levels at Bowdoin.

The Masque and Gown's Executive Committee plans to select before Commencement a tentative program of plays for 1958-59, in order to permit an effective schedule and more careful budgeting of men and money. The membership list has grown during the past year, but production men are scarce and production materials are increasingly costly.

Two of the one-act plays in this year's contest were written by Ben Priest, the retiring president of the Masque and Gown, who received the prize for directing. In Priest's plays Richard Kennedy won the acting prize in two contrasting roles. The winning playwrights, David Kranes and Floyd Barbour, promise fine competition in the future since they are a junior and a sophomore respectively. The one-acts uncovered new talent in acting and design, and two of the plays were directed by students other than the authors.

The Masque and Gown was particularly fortunate this year in the talented playing of leading roles. Ben Priest and Don Perkins in Tea and Sympathy, John Swierzynski in Tiger at the Gates, and Ron Desjardin in Mister Roberts were all excellent. Guy Davis's designs for Tiger at the Gates and for the prize-winning one-act also deserve special mention.

Art Ambassador

The Bowdoin Museum of Fine Arts was the only Maine gallery to be represented at the thirtieth anniversary celebration of the University of Kansas Museum of Art, held from February 22 to March 30. A total of forty-two American colleges and universities loaned works of art for the exhibition.

Bowdoin was represented by the sepia ink drawing "Waltersburg," drawn more than four hundred years ago by Pieter Brueghel the Elder of Flanders (1525-1569). This drawing is considered to be the masterpiece of the collection of one hundred and forty-two drawings bequeathed to the College in 1811 by the Honorable James Bowdoin III.

Union Art Show

Undergraduates, faculty and staff members, and faculty wives were included in the seventeen artists whose work was shown in the Moulton Union dining room this spring, under the auspices of the Student Union Committee.

The faculty and staff were represented by the work of President James S. Coles, Professors Myron A. Jeppesen and Philip

PRESIDENTIAL QUOTES

President James S. Coles has had many speaking engagements throughout the year. These few quotations, supplied by the Office of Vice President Bela W. Norton '18, have been taken from some of these many talks.

"To attempt to keep others from learning the laws of nature by the imposition of secrecy is like an ostrich attempting to hide from a pursuer by burying its head in the sand."

"If we can spend more on alcohol and tobacco than we spend on all of education, any deficiency in education we have is not because we don't have enough money to do a good job. It is rather because we don't want to do a good job."

"Mathematics can be well taught as easily as it is poorly taught — to the same child in the same schoolroom with the same blackboard and the same chalk."

"If the quality of our education is to be enhanced, and if we are concerned with something other than mere quantity, the profession of college teaching must achieve a height which it has never before reached in this nation."

"Those of us who are from Maine, joined as we are with many from New England, where independence is still a virtue, are reluctant to subscribe to the philosophy of Federal aid to independent higher education. Federal aid can never be received without entailing some measure of Federal direction and Federal control."

C. Beam, and Assistant Superintendent of Grounds and Buildings Andre R. Warren.

Two faculty wives, Mrs. Edward S. Hammond and Mrs. John E. Frey, also had examples of their work on exhibit, as did eleven undergraduates.

Craighead Gift

George V. Craighead '25 of Buffalo, N. Y., has given an X-ray table to the Dudley Coe Memorial Infirmary in memory of his cousin, the late John Hodge Eisaman of Van Nuys, Calif. With the enlarged and improved facilities presently being established in the Infirmary, the gift is both timely and helpful.

Senior Dinner

The Alumni Council sponsored a dinner for the 162 members of the graduating class on April 28 in the Moulton Union. President Coles spoke for the College and the faculty, Leonard A. Pierce '05 of Portland for the Board of Trustees, and Chester G. Abbott '13 of Cumberland Center for the Board of Overseers.

Louis Bernstein '22 of Portland presided and spoke for the Alumni Council, of which he is President. Other speakers included Alumni Secretary Seward J. Marsh '12 and C. Martin Roop jr. of Millinocket, President of the Class of 1958.

Sports

Colby posted the top record in 1957-58 State Series competition by winning or tying for the championship in five sports. The Mules won the basketball, tennis, and baseball titles outright and tied for first in football and golf. However, they failed to score a point in the State Track Meet on May 10.

In all, 63 dual State Series contests were played during the past year, with Colby posting a 25 and 7 mark. Maine had a 16-14 record, Bates was third with 12-19, and Bowdoin won 10 contests and lost 23.

The Polar Bears were fourth in football and basketball, third in track and baseball, tied for second in tennis, and tied for third in golf. However, on the brighter side, they won first places in skiing and sailing.

The College has received a gift of $100,000 from the late Guy P. Estes '09. The income from four-fifths of this amount is to be used for scholarship assistance, and the income from the remaining one-fifth is to aid in the teaching of municipal government at the College.

All former football letter winners at Bowdoin are eligible to join the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame. Any alumnus who is interested should write directly to Harvey Harman, Executive Secretary, The National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame, New Brunswick, N. J.

Three Bowdoin players were named to the All-State Series team selected by the four baseball coaches. They were pitcher Ron Woods '59, third baseman Bren Teeling '59, and catcher Tony Berlandi '59. Berlandi hit .406 in State Series competition and Teeling .345, while Woods won all four Bowdoin victories and dropped only one decision. In addition, he led the league in strikeouts with 48 and gave up only 11 bases on balls in 46 innings for the best control mark among the hurlers who saw considerable action.

During the season as a whole Coach Danny MacFayden's nine won 10 games and lost 9. What hurt was a general batting slump following the spring vacation southern trip, on which the team won 4 out of 5 games. The slump continued most of the year for last season's three top batters.

The top individual performances of the spring came from Coach Frank Sabasteanski's track team, particularly Bill McWilliams '57 and Larry Wilkins '59, captain-elect for next year. At the Interfraternity Meet on March 7 McWilliams won the weight, shot, and discus, was second in the pole vault, placed third in the broad jump, and ran on the second-place Zete relay team. He received the John J. Magee Trophy as the meet's outstanding performer.

McWilliams averaged close to 15 points per meet throughout the indoor and outdoor seasons, except for the New Englands. At the Easterns on May 17 he captured the hammer and the shot and placed second in the discus for 14 points. In the State Meet on May 10 he won the hammer and the discus and placed second in both the javelin and the shot for 16 points. At the New Englands on May 24 he took second in the hammer and fifth in the shot.

Although McWilliams' efforts were not up to his best marks of two years ago, he did an amazing job when one considers that he stayed out of school during 1956-57 to work.

Wilkins won the 40, 440, and high and low hurdles in the Interfraternity Meet, scored 10 points in the State Meet, and was on his way to a new meet mark in the 220 yard low hurdles in the New Englands when he hit a hurdle and fell. In the State Meet he tied the low hurdle record of 23.8 seconds, set by Dick Getchell '53, took a close second in the 100 yard dash and came back fifteen minutes after the final in the hurdles for a fourth in the 220. At the Easterns he took a first in the hurdles, a third in the 100, and a fourth in the 220.

Wilkins is another of those terrific track men — first made famous in Jack Magee's day — who "never had a track shoe on" until they came to Bowdoin.

Bob Packard of Jefferson, an excellent miler and two-miler, won the Hutchinson Trophy at the Interfraternity Meet. This award is made each year to a member of

An "A" For Ingenuity

Jack Dalton '37, Director of Public Relations at Centenary College for Women in Hackettstown, N. J., reports that even though his students are all of the fair sex he takes advantage of every opportunity to put in a good word for Bowdoin. That he is telling the story effectively is illustrated by a recent campus incident related to him by H. Graham DuBois, who teaches the class in American Literature. After completing his series of lectures on Hawthorne, he proceeded to take up Longfellow. After describing the poet's college days he asked, "What other person do we know who attended Bowdoin?" He had barely finished the question when one young thing, who hoped to make a good grade, replied, "Mr. Dalton."

Dr. DuBois gave the young lady an "A."

the varsity track squad for "high conduct both on and off the field of sport."

Nels Corey '39 coached the lacrosse team this spring and reports that his thirty charges "showed good interest in the sport, with lots of enthusiasm." The Polar Bears defeated Lowell Textile, coached by former Bates coach Dave Morey, 17 to 2 and lost to Holy Cross 8 to 4 in their two regular games this season. In two scrimmages they were defeated by M.I.T. 8 to 3 and Tufts 12 to 4.

Eight undergraduates entered the Maine State A.A.U. Weightlifting Championships, held, believe it or not, on the stage of the Smith Auditorium on May 23. Three of them won titles. They were featherweight Lyman Cousens '61, middleweight Ken Judson '59, and super-heavyweight Gerard Haviland '61. Cousens also placed second in the Eastern Collegiate Championships.

One final note about Bowdoin's best swimmer of all time — Bob Plourde, who will be graduated in June after three times being named to the All-American squad. At the Easterns on March 14 and 15 he took a first in the 100 yard backstroke and a second in the 200 yard event. In the Nationals late in March at the University of Michigan, he finished fifth in the 100 backstroke to give Bowdoin two points.

More Matching Plans

In addition to the matching-gift programs listed in the October and December issues of the ALUMNUS, we have received word that the following companies also have similar plans in operation:

ACME SHEAR COMPANY
CONNECTICUT LIGHT & POWER COMPANY
COOK FOUNDATION
LATTA BROOK CORPORATION
MCGRAW-HILL PUBLISHING COMPANY
PHELPS DODGE
RUSSELL, BURDSALL & WARD BOLT & NUT COMPANY

Mason Bequest

Bowdoin has received a bequest of $40,000 from the estate of the late Miss Jane Graham Mason of Germantown, Pa., which establishes the Richard S. Mason Fund in memory of her father. Income from the fund will be used to increase faculty salaries and to provide both undergraduate and graduate scholarships.

Art Gifts

Bowdoin has recently received the gift of two oil paintings. Mr. Stephen M. Etnier of South Harpswell gave "Captain's Pier" by William J. Glackens, and Mrs. Charles F. Chillingworth of Washington, D. C., Mr. Etnier's sister, gave "Into the Sun" by Rockwell Kent.

New Phi Betes

Phi Beta Kappa elected five new members in February. They are Edward L. Baxter of Rockland, Daniel N. Loeb of Forest Hills, N. Y., Robert W. Packard of Jefferson, James H. Turner of Skowhegan, and Gordon L. Weil of Hempstead, N. Y. All but Turner will be graduated in June. He transferred to M.I.T. last September under the Combined Plan. In 1960 he will receive three degrees, a bachelor of arts degree from Bowdoin and both bachelor of science and master of science degrees from M.I.T., where he is studying as an International Nickel Company Scholar.

A Distinguished List

President James S. Coles received an honorary doctor of science degree at the University of New Brunswick's Encenia Exercises in Fredericton, N. B., on May 15, along with cartoonist David Low of London, J. Herbert Smith, President of Canadian General Electric Company; and the premiers of Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, and Prince Edward Island.

Alumni Invited

During the afternoon of July 23, the College will hold an Open House honoring William Zorach, well-known sculptor and painter from Brooklyn, New York.

Volume 30 of Who's Who in America carries the names of eleven alumni as new biographees. They are John L. Baxter '16, Stephen R. Deane '34, M. Gordon Gay '26, Luther G. Holbrook '34, Hugh Nixon '21, Frederick P. Perkins '25, John A. Pidgeon '49, Ralph A. Powers '13, John W. Riley jr. '30, Hartley F. Simpson '22, and Donald W. Webber '27.

Representative examples of Mr. Zorach's work will be shown in the Walker Art Building. Bartlett H. Hayes jr., Director of the Addison Gallery of American Art at the Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., will present a special lecture on American Art in the Pickard Theater in Memorial Hall. A reception will follow.

Mr. Zorach's sculpture and paintings have been purchased by many important museums and by private collectors. He has a summer residence at Robinhood, near Bath.

Alumni are invited to attend this event with their families and friends. If you have friends who you think might like to receive invitations to such programs, please send their names to Vice President Bela W. Norton.

The student guide this summer will be David P. Lovell '60 of Brunswick, whose services are available without charge for those who wish an escorted tour around the campus. He can be contacted at the Information Desk in Massachusetts Hall from June 16 until Labor Day.

Bowdoin Browsing

By Arthur W. Wang '40

Arthur W. Wang '40 has been in the publishing business in New York City since his graduation. In February, 1956, he joined an associate in the publishing house of A. A. Wyn to form Hill and Wang, which took over a large part of Wyn's backlist. Their first publications, in August of 1956, were six Dramabooks, paper-covered reprints of the famous Mermaid Series, originally edited by Havellock Ellis and now re-edited under Eric Bentley. Seventeen more have followed, with many valuable items from outside the Mermaid dramatists. The best work of such writers as Marlowe, Congreve, Jonson, Goldsmith, Sheridan, and Dryden has been included.

Hill and Wang have also published some of the Dramabooks in hard covers, as well as a considerable number of books in other fields, representing more than half of their total output. They plan to extend their publications to fiction and history.

its purpose to enlighten and to entertain. Reading along I found the author of the first article, Lawrence Hall, concerned with "saying something about what gets published." I was interested. Mr. Hall continued: "I would like to give you a very incomplete but all live look into the neurotic minds and behavior of publishers, at whose mercy both readers and writers are." My interest flagged and turned to disappointment as Mr. Hall, who proceeded to discuss an article by Alfred Knopf in last December's Atlantic Monthly, wasted little time in belying the purpose of his column. He wasn't browsing through books and publishing; he was hellbent on attacking publishers in general and Alfred Knopf in particular. But most surprising, his attack wasn't based on reason or fact. It was frenzied, bitter, and, I regret to say, in rather bad taste. Would it be in good taste to start an article about higher education and Bowdoin by labeling the president and faculty neurotic and then go on to elaborate on the charge?

Before continuing perhaps I should mention that, having been in the publishing business for more than sixteen years, I'm no longer starry-eyed on the subject. Furthermore, just fifteen years ago I worked for Alfred Knopf and, to be perfectly frank, he fired me. Now one might suppose that with sixteen years in publishing and a record of having been fired by Alfred Knopf, I might be expected to see eye to eye with Mr. Hall — if not about publishing, at least about Alfred Knopf. But I don't. For although I have permitted myself to feel that Alfred Knopf was disastrously wrong about firing me, he remains, without question, one of the most distinguished publishers in this country.

However, there's no reason why Alfred Knopf and publishing aren't fair game for rational criticism. Unfortunately, Mr. Hall seems to have tackled the job in a rather irrational fashion. Early in his article he gave himself away: "In five to eight-hundred words you can't worry about proof or reputation, or even about your transitions too much." Now any English teacher should know that a writer who sets out with such flimsy standards is headed for trouble. Mr. Hall is no exception. Since he had cast reputation and proof to the winds, he had only to say that Alfred Knopf is neurotic. Mr. Hall wrote: "But this is not the limit of the pathological self-pity in which Mr. Knopf flounders." He continued: "Publishers [and by direct implication, Alfred Knopf] are confused. . . . They vacillate . . . they

When I received the February ALUMNUS and glanced through it, I noticed with interest the new feature "Bowdoin Browsing." The title and the editor's note suggested that the column's subject would be books; lack confidence in their judgments." Lastly, Alfred Knopf is called garrulous.

Now I know Alfred Knopf only slightly. He does wear colorful shirts and the last time I saw him he was sporting a cane. He is certainly not garrulous. He does not vacillate and flounder and, most assuredly, he is not a victim of pathological self-pity. Mr. Hall stated that he was not concerned with reputation or proof. This lack of concern — coupled with name calling — seems a bit irresponsible for one who represents a great college.

Mr. Hall wrote in his introductory remarks that he wasn't planning to be complete. Perhaps, for this reason, he failed to mention Knopf's highly respected position in the publishing world; to point out that his insistence on good design and excellence of book manufacture has raised the standards of the entire industry; or to list some of the outstanding authors published by his firm — such writers, for example, as Brooks Adams, German Arceniegas, Charles Beard, Carl Becker, S. F. Bemis, Elizabeth Bowen, Carl Bridenbaugh, D. W. Brogan, Albert Camus, Willa Cather, Miguel Covarrubias, Walter de la Mare, Ford Madox Ford, E. M. Forster, André Gide, Eric Goldman, Knut Hamsun, Joseph Hergesheimer, John Hersey, Melville Herskovits, William Hesseltine, Robert Hillyer, Richard Hofstadter, W. H. Hudson, Randall Jarrell, Franz Kafka, Louis Kronenberger, F. R. Leavis, Thomas Mann, Katherine Mansfield, F. O. Matthiessen, H. L. Mencken, S. E. Morison, George Jean Nathan, Ernest Newman, P. D. Ouspensky, V. S. Pritchett, Conrad Richter, Jules Romain, Jean-Paul Sartre, Frederick L. Schuman, Oswald Spengler, Wallace Stevens, Sigrid Undset, and Paul Valery.

In his bitter castigation of publishers for allegedly placing readers and writers at their mercy, Mr. Hall brought forth no solid facts. His "real-life inside evidence" consisted of what two publishers' readers wrote about two different manuscripts.

Does Mr. Hall really mean that the reading public and writers are at the mercy of publishers? Does Mr. Hall mean that all publishers are neurotic — and even if they are is it at all pertinent? Does Mr. Hall mean that publishers, who make their reputation and their living by issuing good books, have it in for authors? What does Mr. Hall mean?

The weekend of weekends, IVY, came and went with the regular number of activities scheduled and the usual number of class cuts taken. The Bowdoin Club of Boston, with the aid of Tilly, staged the usual show at the Boston Pops — an event well worth the time for Bowdoin and non-Bowdoin people alike. Pete Potter '58 charmed the audience by his baritone solos with the Pops Orchestra, Glee Club and Meddies. The biggest audience response, however, came from a solo by Dick Downes '60 in the Glee Club's version of "Pore Jud" from Oklahoma. Dick delivers a funeral elegy for Jud which is funnier than anything TV has. The elegy is spoken in Dick's idea of a Maine accent which, among other things, compares Jud to "a lobster potcher." One gentleman in the audience was still laughing at Dick's performance when the Meddies were singing "I Hear Music."

Another interesting reaction came when the Pops played "Dancing Through the Years." The piece was made up of various songs, each representing a certain type of dance. The last dance was a "rock-and-roll" song which gave the drummers a chance to show their talent, made the bass players hop over the tops of their instruments, and caused Arthur Fiedler to jump up and down on the podium in such a way as to make Elvis Presley look stationary. Everyone present applauded heartily and remarked how versatile the concert was. This all took place the same week Alan Freed, a New York disc jockey, was arrested in Boston for disturbing the peace with his rock-and-roll music. Will Fiedler be next?

With the abolition of hazing last semester, it was expected that a great deal of discussing and planning would take place to start a new orientation plan. Yet the main differences of opinions came over rushing and a pre-matriculation week. Looking back, it is hard to tell just what everyone wanted, for none of the parties involved was careful enough to communicate his plan to anyone else. Dr. David Russell, Director of Student Counseling, and his committee, which acted in an advisory capacity for the President, favored a two or three-day program, where the freshmen would be on campus alone and be introduced to the College by the administration and the faculty.

The Student Council, the organization which had abolished the hazing program and had promised to create a new system, took a definite stand against any program which would give rushing a secondary position. Since President Coles was to make the final decision, the Council and the senior class officers talked with him, trying to explain the student feelings toward the delaying of rushing for a few days.

The final plan calls for the freshmen to arrive on the campus on Friday and to be in residence by noon. In the afternoon, following a luncheon, they will have a two or three-hour orientation period, at which men representing the various divisions of the curriculum will explain the freshman courses. It was originally planned that the freshmen might be given examinations during this time, but this was put off until after rushing. At five o'clock Friday afternoon the rushing program will start, with the freshmen being invited to the various houses for dinner. Rushing will continue until Sunday night.

At the start of the next week, the usual battery of examinations will be given, plus a more extensive college orientation program. As in the past, classes will start on Thursday.

During the closing weeks of classes this semester, Dr. Russell met with the orientation chairmen from the fraternities and planned a program of orientation for the six weeks leading up to Alumni Day. Freshmen will still be expected to wear beanies and small signs of identification and will spend a few hours a week working for the fraternity to which they have pledged. Furthermore, the freshmen will have to learn the usual college and fraternity lore before they are initiated. These points, however, are the only phases of the former hazing system which have been kept.

The program as it appears on paper is a good one. The various parts of the College, including the Class of 1962, will have to work together to make the program successful. And if it is successful, it should help the College in many ways.

This may be construed as an obituary, but it is meant more as a mention of a Bowdoin tradition which has almost passed from the college scene this year. Do not misunderstand, for the building of Coleman Hall is greatly appreciated and Bowdoin has for a long time needed a new dormitory. But the building of Coleman will eliminate the off-campus apartment. Each year, as the room list was drawn up, there were several men who could not be accommodated in the dormitories. These men received special permission from the College to room in a private home near the campus.

To these men the term "room" meant more than just so many dollars a week. Rooming in a home gave a student a chance to become better acquainted with Brunswick citizens and to understand the problems a small town has when a college is in its midst. In a way it is too bad that more men will not have a chance to live in some of Brunswick's private homes.

Books

CHARLES H. LIVINGSTON, Skein-winding Reels — Studies in word history and etymology. University of Michigan Publications, Language and Literature, Volume XXIX. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 1957; pp. xi and 221.

In addition to brilliantly thorough analysis of word histories and etymologies, Skein-winding Reels makes a distinguished and precious contribution to knowledge of mediaeval craftsmanship, including many items from reels to torture-machines, wine-working, trawlers, and just plain toil. Even purring cats and ladies "trolling angry eyes on every side" are not spared.

Far from confining his years of investigation to the rich field of France alone, Professor Livingston has assembled a treasure-trove from all of western Europe and the British Isles. The twenty well selected illustrations, incidentally, take in even an eighteenth-century niddy-noddy (stick reel) from Scarborough, Maine.

At the centre of Livingston's vast canvas is the word travail, the origins of which have been defying the attacks of specialists for a good hundred years. Historians of romance languages and of English will surely accept his late-Latin trapaculum* (originally a "kind of block with tackle used in the hoisting and lowering of a sail") as the definitive and only admissible source form. There are always those who rise above philology with a so-what shrug, but anyone with common-sense eyes for etymological story will realize that Livingston's discovery could result only from intense erudition, abetted by the soundest of critical imagination and semantic judgement.

By the early Middle Ages, trapaculum had come to designate a hand reel, and thence the name of the rotary or wheel-shaped reel. "Through the associative process," continues Livingston, "by which the name of a reel was given to a winch, trapaculum* 'rotary reel' communicated its name to the winch or winder of the early torture-machine and eventually became the name of the torture-machine itself." The supporting arguments for this conclusion include in particular numerous grisly details about slow and "winding" torments in mediaeval Europe. In whatever context, as might be expected, the "winding" always carries the notion of an action "continuing": the extension to the meaning of "continuing effort" and of work in general is quickly inferred here, but borne out in Livingston's book by a demonstration which is as skilfully co-ordinated as it is massive.

Outgrowths from trapaculum, during and since mediaeval times, have taken a variety of directions, among them the idea of continuous movement to and fro. A pleasant English example in metrics of about 1440: "Seven curnels of a pynappul do In oon sester (oon sester, says Cotgrave, equals eight pints) of wyn that is impure And travayle hit a time to and fro And after suffre hit to reste go." Another outgrowth is English travel, which lost the meaning "to work" four or five centuries ago. Closely related, even etymologically, are trail, trawl, troll — words which yield rewarding, and at times exciting, reading.

Skein-winding Reels concludes with several important chapters about English and romance words closely related to travail but only in terms of changing meanings. A few examples hint at a bit of the story. "Yet said he therwith one thyng that could not stand therwith; and therby may ye see that he began to reele. . . Quhen with a quhisk she quihirlis about hir quheill, Rude is that rattill running with a reill (pronounce this one fast: it will help) . . . Ye never saw green cheese but your e'en ('eyes') reel'd. . . How pleasant on the banks of Styx to troll it in a coach and six. . . Let them trowle the bowles upon the green; Ile trowle the bowles in the buttery."

So much, then, for an amateur's-eye view of a volume of admirable authority. Within the next year or two, professional journals will be publishing learned appraisals, an anthology of which is planned for passing along to the ALUMNUS. Bowdoin will continue to have renewed cause for pride in one of this country's great romance-language scholars.

EDWARD B. HAM

C. WILBERT SNOW, Sonnets to Steve: Exposition Press, Inc., New York, 1957; pp. 55; $2.50.

Wilbert Snow's recent volume of poetry, Sonnets to Steve, has one irrefutable quality which reflects itself in each line. This quality is poetic honesty. At no point does the reader suspect that the ingeniousness of an image, the delight of a clever rhyme scheme, or the sophistication of an unusual metrical pattern has been allowed to detract from the basic intent of the poem.

The collection is divided into two parts. The first consists of seventeen sonnets written to his son, Stephen Snow, who died as a boy in 1943. Some of these poems recall the interests and qualities of the boy during his life. We move from descriptive passages enumerating the qualities of young Steve, virtues such as gaiety, humor, and thoughtfulness, to his stoicism at the end. Others are concerned with the reactions of the poet to the bewildering, illogical pattern of death. The intent of each sonnet is clear, and sentiment is communicated to the reader without gloss.

The second part offers great variety in length, treatment, and subject matter. Some, like "November Interlude," are purely descriptive, catching the qualities of the New England seasons, landscapes, and seascapes. Others, like "Aunt Delia and the Alabama Claims," combine characterization, humor, and a broad implication concerning human nature. All are well rooted in the substance of reality; all have the hallmark of sincerity and poetic honesty.

In addition, the volume vividly illustrates Dr. Snow's view of what a poem should be, of what a poet's role should be. Clearly every poet selects, either consciously or unconsciously, a point between two poles. At one extreme lies the style which communicates a complex cluster of feelings and thoughts to a necessarily small group of readers. At the other, the poet sacrifices breadth of statement for breadth of his following. Few poets select the extremes; most compromise. Wilbert Snow's compromise is in the general direction of the second approach.

The advantages of his style are clear. He avoids the danger of ambiguity and the charge of obscurity. When, in his second sonnet, he opens with the lines "Why should a cell go wrong within the brain/ Of such an innocent and lovely lad?" there is no question as to the degree and cause of the poet's agony. And the direction of the poem is clearly implied. Again, when he begins his poem "Return to New England" with the lines "I love the old New England ways,/ The vanishing New England speech," no reader can mumble that poetry is the language of a literary elite.

But there are limitations to this approach as well. The primary one is that the intent of the poem is likely to be so carefully defined that the overtones, the implications, and the applications are too often limited. In "Return to New England," for example, the imagination of the reader is fixed on the specifics of the New England scene; one longs to extend these reactions beyond the limits of geography. A good example of this process of extension is seen in Robert Frost's popular "Mending Walls." Here Frost is also saying, by implication, "I love the old New England ways." But, in addition, his description of a New England custom is extended to a commentary on New England attitudes and, further, to an insight into one of man's basic conflicts: the desire to wall himself off from others and the inner voice which rebels against these very barriers.

Only some of Snow's poems reach this level of extension. They stand out from the rest. In the second sonnet, for example, he not only concerns himself with the immediate situation, the tragic death of a child, but extends the statement to curse the very pattern of death. He reaches back in time to the Aztec priests who selected the finest of the tribe for sacrifice; he then moves to our own century and describes our own selection of the finest for sacrifice in modern war; and then in the final couplet he writes: "Earth plucks her roses soon, but lets her weeds/ Bloom on and on and multiply their seeds." This is not just a lament for one boy; it is a strong cry against a brutally illogical pattern of man's behavior and, further, of nature herself. The poem stands out because of its poetic reverberations.

Sonnets to Steve, then, has two great attributes: sincerity and clarity of intention. The only qualification would come from those who feel that the reverberations or overtones of poetry are as important as statement.

STEPHEN MINOT

E. ESTYN EVANS, Irish Folk Ways: Routledge and Kegan Paul, London, 1957; pp. 306; 35 shillings.

This reviewer has never had the pleasure of sitting on a three-legged creeper near the hearth under a snug, thatched roof in Ireland, nor of walking the Irish countryside and smelling peat fires burning, nor of attending fairs, wakes, weddings or other gatherings with the Irish People. I do not feel that such experiences have escaped me completely, however, for I have just finished reading Irish Folk Ways by E. Estyn Evans and feel that I have sampled the flavor of Irish Folk life. This reaction is not intended to suggest that Irish Folk Ways is one of the emotional, nostalgic, popular accounts written by a homesick Irishman. Nothing could be further from the truth, for here we have a first class ethnographic monograph written by an anthropologist and geographer who knows his subject well.

Dr. Evans has constructed his treatment of Irish Folk Ways around the fact that in Ireland we have a marginal, peripheral area of Europe where we can find, in the historic literature, language, social organization, folk lore and customs of the people, survival of archaic elements of the ancient Indo-European world. The fact that Ireland retained longer than her neighbors many of the attributes of a peasant society is the key to the survival of the folk ways which are discussed in the book. Many of their folk ways are disappearing rapidly. This, Dr. Evans points out, is more than just a disappearance of the picturesque; it is also the disappearance of an important opportunity we have to look into the past.

After presenting the general picture of Ireland as a geographical and cultural outpost of prehistoric and medieval Europe, Dr. Evans discusses in succeeding chapters such elements of Irish material culture as the thatched house, the hearth as the center and heart of the house, furniture and fittings, farmyards and fences, ploughs and spades, homecrafts, and boats and fishing. Throughout the book interesting and possibly significant parallels, in both form and function, are shown between some of these relics of the material culture of the European past and similar elements in the culture of simpler and primitive societies in distant parts of the world. In this way Dr. Evans directs the attention of the comparative ethnographer to such people as the pastoral nomads of Mongolia, the California Indians, and even the Bushmen of South Africa in order to reach a fuller understanding of Irish Folk Ways. Such a cross-cultural approach to the study of the folk life of any people is rewarding as a method and important in its contribution to what we are just beginning to learn about the dynamics of human societal and cultural behavior.

It is not only the material folk-life of Ireland which Dr. Evans utilizes to throw light on the past and on the evolution of society in Britain and western Europe, but also the non-material and spiritual folk-life as well. In chapters dealing with such topics as fairs and gatherings, fixed festivals, weddings and wakes and with witchery and fairy-lore, many practices are seen to have their origin in magic.

Dr. Evans makes it clear that he studies regional social evolution as a continuous interaction between people and their environment. In Irish Folk Ways he has been eminently successful in showing how interwoven geographical, historical, social and cultural factors have conspired to bring Irish Society and Culture from its root system in the past to what it is today. All this, with the help of many fine plates and figures and rich documentation, is presented to the reader in an engaging and admirably authoritative manner.

RICHARD G. EMERICK

MARY ELLEN CHASE, The Edge of Darkness: W. W. Norton Co., 1957; pp. 235; $3.50.

The Edge of Darkness is an account of the death and burial of the oldest inhabitant of a tiny, isolated fishing village on the coast of Maine. Sarah Holt, the woman who died at the age of ninety, was born on an island just off the village, now deserted but then a prosperous shipbuilding community. She had married a sea captain thirty years her senior and had sailed with him all over the world until steam drove sail from the seas and set to rot the docks of dozens of small Maine harbors. Mrs. Holt provided the villagers with a link between the past, when Maine was closer to the Orient than to the Middle West, and the present, when ship captains had turned into fishermen and life had become little but a battle against loneliness and the elements. To the more perceptive of the villagers, she was a symbol of courage, dignity, wisdom, and wider experience. The book, the bulk of which is a series of chapters defining successively the character, history, and present state of each of the village families, culminates in an account of the funeral itself where all the individuals whom the reader has come to know separately are joined. Out of a static subject, a single event, Miss Chase has made a beautifully constructed short novel, not lacking in suspense, in which the heroine (who is the storekeeper's wife and the dead woman's closest friend) regains a sense of the worth of her own narrow existence and that of her neighbors.

Although the book has a strong feeling of nostalgia for the past (the sea captain's name, for instance, was Thomas Jefferson Alexander Hamilton Holt, "for he had actually been born when those names still meant a great deal in history"), all the characters are or could be happy. Their condition is not hopeless. Isolation increases the appreciation of companionship; man can perhaps be less alone among few than among many. Neither is the book, written by a native and lifelong lover of Maine, an uncritical encomium of that state. The disadvantages of isolation and relative poverty, the beauty-less, frontier-like architecture in the village, the lack of opportunities for travel and education, the hardships of winter are not glossed over.

The characters, all interesting and fully outlined in spite of the brevity of the book, nevertheless vary in quality. Mrs. Holt, probably because the reader meets her only through the memories of the villagers, seems somewhat too idealized to be entirely convincing. Not enough is said about the son, an aging failure who lived with her, for the reader to understand him. Most vivid is Drusilla West, a girl of easy virtue deserted by her husband, totally out of place in her environment, neglecting her son, becoming a dipsomaniac, but sympathetically observed by Miss Chase as feeling better after cleaning up her house than after a nip of gin and as looking pretty in spite of her miserable existence.

Drusilla's letter to her husband ("One of these shacks is no better than any other in this dump where you dumped me and that stinks more every day") shows the breadth of Miss Chase's comprehension and powers of creation. From the storekeeper's wife, who cleverly and inconspicuously helps her husband overcome his paralyzing diffidence, to the fisherman's wife, who, "secure in the Scriptural decrees that each is responsible for the sins and shortcomings of his brethren," occupies her mind with the problems of a nearby evangelical church, the women, whose lives are so similar, are clearly differentiated from each other and are subtly rounded personalities in themselves. The children, pathetically close to adults in sensitivity and acceptance of responsibility rather than merely cute, are excellent.

A splendid feeling for weather pervades the book. The unexpected beauty of the day of the funeral, following upon a terrifying, depressing, omnipresent fog, wonderfully described, conditions the minds of all the characters and of the reader. The flowers, the brightly painted small chairs made by Mrs. Holt's son for the children who visited her, the orange, blue, yellow, black, and white lobster buoys which spike up the low-keyed landscape show an artist's awareness of color.

One would like to learn more about the place and the people.

JANE SCHWARTZ BENJAMIN

ROY A. GALLANT, Exploring the Weather: Garden City Books, New York, 1957; pp. 64; $2.50.

There was once a small boy who, in a discussion with his parents at bedtime, told them that he knew who was watching over us and was making the world go around — the rooster on the weathervane. To children it must seem as if the weather rules the world in which we live. Consider the weather and you have a subject that is of interest to everyone.

Although familiar sayings about weather prediction are old, the science of meteorology is fairly new. Like all new sciences it has a great many mysteries to unravel. Here is a book that shows the breadth as well as the limitations of the weatherman's knowledge of the atmosphere and the weather throughout it.

You catch a glimpse of a new and strange world in the air above as you see what the work of a meteorologist is, where his work takes him, and what the tools of his profession are. Throughout this book there are numerous and colorful pictures and diagrams by Lowell Hess which add greatly to the attractiveness of the text.

Exploring the Weather acquaints us with the "Ocean of air" surrounding our earth. The blue sky above us does not look like the many-layered blanket (300 to 700 miles thick) that it is. This blanket of gases protects us from the burning heat of the sun and from the extreme cold which would otherwise make our planet uninhabitable. It provides us with sound communication, with light, clouds, and sunsets, and with weather. To the meteorologist the atmosphere is a series of stages on which the weather has its act. If all that worried a weatherman was the conditions in the troposphere or in the layer of atmosphere in which we live, his predictions for tomorrow's weather would be much simpler as well as much surer. Weather predictions are complicated by the fact that each layer of the atmosphere has its own weather, winds, and temperatures. As the distance away from the earth increases, the meteorologist knows less and less about atmospheric conditions. The weatherman does know that weather from higher reaches can influence our own weather patterns and most unpredictably. (I sense that this is a subtle plea to go easy on the weather forecaster!)

This book tells in a readily understood fashion where our weather has its origin; what weather conditions give us rain, snow, fog, sleet, hail, hurricanes, tornados, and thunderstorms. It tells us why we have sea and land breezes, cold fronts, and warm fronts. We learn why we have our seasons and why different cloud formations bring us different kinds of weather. Here is a book that will make us all dabblers in weather forecasting. And here is a book that will leave us better equipped for living.

JEANNETTE STEELE CROSS

JOHN F. MAGEE, Production Planning and Inventory Control: McGraw-Hill Book Company, Inc., 1958; pp. 333+xi; $7.50.

Here in well-organized and clearly written form are descriptions and explanations of the methods of inventory control and production planning best calculated to provide an optimal combination of cost minimization and flexibility. John F. Magee has been a member of the Operations Research Group of Arthur D. Little, Inc., since 1950, and has frequently been engaged in this capacity in the design and installation of planning and control systems for widely varying industrial firms. His present book reflects both this experience and a broad familiarity with professional literature in the fields of both management science and economics.

The basic problems of inventory planning and production control involve an advantageous adaption by the business firm to two basic factors. On one side lies the market demand for the output of the firm. On the other, the firm faces certain costs and delays in securing inputs: materials, labor, and so on. The complexity of the problem stems in large part from the fact that the firm's estimates of both input and output factors involve uncertainty. The firm must, therefore, adapt its inventory position and its production schedules to seasonally and cyclically fluctuating sales, and to time-lags in materials deliveries, in such a way that costs of holding inventory and costs of changing from one level of inventory or production to another level are kept within bounds even in the eventuality of deviations of input and output factors from their statistically expected levels.

Magee's discussion of "The Influence of Uncertainty" in Chapter Five presents the heart of the problem of control. Here the reader finds a penetrating discussion of the role of uncertainty, the need for "safety stocks," the risk of run-outs or service failure, and the applicability of servo-mechanism theory to periodic re-ordering and production control. In subsequent chapters, the author analyzes in detail the problems of forecasting, production scheduling, and distribution.

A member of a team of top managers, worried about his ability to handle analyses requiring a good command of matrix algebra and modern statistical methods, should not run away from this valuable book. In Chapters One through Three, which outline

"functions of inventories and planning, and policies and costs bearing on these," and in Chapter Eleven on system design, the author, having such persons in mind, presents his material in relatively non-technical form. The technically trained industrial engineer, on the other hand, will find much red meat in the remaining chapters and in two technical appendices.

PAUL G. DARLING

ROY A. FOULKE, Practical Financial Statement Analysis, 4th edition: McGraw-Hill Book Company, Inc., 1957; pp. xx, 712; $10.00.

Anyone familiar with Mr. Foulke's book will welcome the publication of this latest edition and will find that the usual high standard has been maintained. Others who are not acquainted with the work of Mr. Foulke but who have a basic knowledge of accounting and are interested in the analysis and interpretation of financial statements will find this volume indispensable.

The general organization of the book is unchanged. Chapters on the background of analysis are followed by a discussion of the analysis of small enterprises — the 82% of all business concerns with a tangible net worth of $35,000 or less. Then there are chapters dealing with the internal and comparative analysis of the Balance Sheet, Income Statement, and the surplus accounts. In each of these chapters the theory behind an important financial ratio is discussed and then illustrated by sets of comparative figures. Finally in most chapters there are included schedules which show the typical ratios for various lines of business for the years 1951-1955. An appendix lists the 1955 interquartile range of fourteen ratios for seventy-two lines of business activity. The wealth of case material in the various chapters and the publication of so many significant ratios continue to be valuable features of the book.

Throughout the book, and especially in the final chapter on recent evolution in accounting theory and practice, the author has incorporated the latest views of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, the American Accounting Association, and the Securities and Exchange Commission. While Mr. Foulke points out the importance of accounting figures in the management of business, he emphasizes that all financial statements reflect opinion as well as fact. He recognizes that, important as ratio analysis is, additional information must sometimes be obtained if a sound judgment is to be reached.

Any business man, investor, or student will be better able to understand and appraise financial statements after a careful reading of this book.

PHILIP M. BROWN

WENZEL BROWN, They Died in the Chair: Popular Library, New York, 1958; pp. 191; thirty-five cents. Teen-Age Terror: Fawcett Publications, Inc., New York, 1958; pp. 208; thirty-five cents.

The format of these books may mark a new departure in the presentation of pleas for judicial and social reform; the form, however, seems to be the case-study method adapted for the mass media market. The approach and style seem to derive from newspaper, movie, and television efforts in dealing with such subjects and are effective although devoid both of literary grace and of logical analysis.

They Died in the Chair explores the personalities of six women who were sentenced to death for murder in New York; their crimes are reconstructed and, in a postscript, the author raises some questions about the advisability of capital punishment. These women hardly emerge as evil or hardened criminals; rather they appear pathetic and their lives sordid but even in their fate uninteresting except in a sensational way. At best this effort is less a plea against capital punishment per se than an indictment of the judiciary for failure to amend procedures in light of the fuller knowledge of motivation provided by the behavioral sciences. The real culprits tend to be sensationalism both at the trials and in the press; but apart from certain legal aspects of one case, it is hard to see that justice was ill-served. The structure of our legal system may need to be overhauled; from the rehearsal of these cases, however, it does not necessarily follow that "the chair" should be done away with. The limitation of this study to women is strange; perhaps the over-Freudian interpretation of a woman's death struggle as having "symbolic sex significance" is to be taken as the thesis of the book. The author shows a curious ambivalence at this point; he comes out for public knowledge of the details of electrocution, condemning the squeamish for not wishing "any knowledge of the act that they had wrought," yet he indicates that such knowledge is provocative of "violent sex crimes."

The questions raised by Teen-Age Terror are of wider scope and import; in this volume, after various aspects of juvenile delinquency are examined, some suggestions are made as to possible cures. What was once a big city slum problem is rapidly spreading to all sectors of the population, and, according to Mr. Brown, organized crime on the teen-age level flourishes on a nation-wide scale. The wide range of social and economic backgrounds found among the delinquents indicates that we have here not a temporary outbreak in a healthy society which if it heeds the wise counseling of the psychiatrists can cope with the menace; but rather this wide range confirms the analyses of more profound observers that the malcontents of the present age involve a veritable shaking of the foundations. The disturbances among the youth here chronicled are entangled with those of the adult population; in fact, in this work, the juvenile horde often appears to be hopelessly caught in a world not of its own making, and its often violent protest appears to be a pathetic attempt to escape from it.

Certainly society has lost much of its former cohesiveness and many of its forms of discipline — home, school, court — have little resiliency to absorb the shock. Surveys, analyses, and reports abound, yet they are ineffective, though well-meaning, since often, as in the present case, a grasp and understanding of the power structures which determine our social and individual well-being are lacking. "Society" and the "individual" are played off against each other in a superficial way and each in turn is the norm of behavior. There is little probing into the subtle and complex relation between a person's individual and social behavior and the role of society in moulding them. Also, little if any attention is paid to the economic problems of our society while it is hammered home that many of the problems of our juveniles have economic origins.

A "tout comprendre, c'est tout pardonner" attitude which underlies much of this volume runs into a dangerous sentimentalism at times; and this is paralleled by a belief that the rationalities of the past are still able to maintain effective control over the vast areas of human behavior of which the irrational is master. A more realistic assessment of human nature would be less ready to see environmental factors as determinative on the one hand, and more ready to question the soundness of the patterns of the past on the other.

It is well that the extent of juvenile unrest is recognized and the deep roots of the malaise pointed out; however, the depth of the problems is not matched by the equal depth of the solutions here proffered. It is strange and a bit frightening that such cultural discontents and national crises are still "solved" in local and individualistic terms. The need for a radical reorientation of American culture and the transformation of the structure of our society in terms of supplying new forms which utilize the drives and energies of our young people and direct them into creative channels is still with us; until such a time, we may well pray, "From the ghosties and beasties and things that go bump in the night, Good Lord, deliver us."

VICTOR FORD

HENRY S. MAXFIELD, Legacy of a Spy: Harper & Brothers, New York; pp. 248; $3.50.

If you have no pressing demands upon your time in the immediate future, get a copy of Henry Maxfield's Legacy of a Spy, hang out the "Do not Disturb" sign, and start reading. You will more than likely stay in the Swiss Alps for some two hundred fifty pages.

World War II service in the air arms of the Navy and the Army came between the author's stays on the Bowdoin campus. Shot down over Germany, confined for months in a prison camp, he emerged at war's end wearing a Purple Heart and possessed of a wealth of facts concerning people and places of central Europe.

Those facts, coupled with his own creative abilities, Henry Maxfield has woven skillfully into an intensely interesting yarn. A carefully written, absorbing story of espionage and counter-espionage, involving believable people moving swiftly against accurately drawn background, Legacy of a Spy will challenge your solving powers to the last chapter.

Authors

CHARLES H. LIVINGSTON, Longfellow Professor of Romance Languages, Emeritus, is leading a very active life of retirement in his study on the second floor of Hubbard Hall.

C. WILBERT SNOW '07, Professor Emeritus of English at Wesleyan and former Lieutenant-Governor and Governor of Connecticut, is the author of five previously published books of poetry.

E. ESTYN EVANS, Sc.D. (Bowdoin '49), a former Tallman Professor, is at present Professor of Geography at Queen's University, Belfast, Ireland. Dr. Evans is a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries. He helped to found and for a time was editor of the Ulster Journal of Archaeology. Among his many publications are France — a Geographical Introduction, Irish Heritage, and North Ireland — a Portrait.

MARY ELLEN CHASE, Litt.D. (Bowdoin '33), Professor of English Literature at Smith College, is one of America's best loved teachers and writers. The Edge of Darkness returns to the scene of Miss Chase's previous novels, Mary Peters, Windswept, and Silas Crockett.

ROY A. GALLANT '50 is associated with Doubleday and Company, New York City. Two of his books, Exploring the Moon and Exploring the Universe, were reviewed in the ALUMNUS last December.

JOHN F. MAGEE '47, a graduate of the Harvard Business School, has since 1950 been a member of the Operations Research Group of Arthur D. Little, Inc.

ROY A. FOULKE '19, who, next to the late Robert P. T. Coffin, has appeared more frequently in the Books Section than any other Bowdoin author, needs no further introduction to readers of the ALUMNUS.

WENZELL BROWN '32 is the author of fifteen books as well as more than one hundred magazine articles which deal with as far removed fields as criminology and American history. He is probably best known for his studies of juvenile delinquency and his active work with young drug addicts and gangs.

HENRY S. MAXFIELD '45 also writes television plays (Money in the Bank, The Brookfield Murder, and The Theory of Mabel) and sells real estate in and around Wolfeboro, N. H., which he calls "God's pocket."

Reviewers

EDWARD B. HAM '22, L.H.D. (Bowdoin '32), Professor of French at the University of Michigan, is on leave this year at the University of California. Dr. Ham is a recognized authority in the field of Romance Philology. Among his publications are Givart de Rossillon, Textual Criticism and Jehan le Venelais, and Renart le Bestougné.

STEPHEN MINOT, a graduate of Harvard College, is Assistant Professor of English at Bowdoin and editorial adviser to Manuscript. Mr. Minot has completed the writing of one novel and is now working on a second.

RICHARD G. EMERICK, Instructor in Sociology at Bowdoin, is replacing Professor Burton W. Taylor, who is on sabbatical leave during the spring semester. Mr. Emerick is a graduate of Syracuse University and has carried on research work in such varied fields as Arizona, the Caroline Islands in the Pacific, and the Northern Fox Basin Area of the Canadian Arctic.

JANE SCHWARTZ BENJAMIN is a graduate of Smith College and received her doctorate in history from Yale University. Mrs. Benjamin is the wife of Edwin B. Benjamin '37, Assistant Professor of English at Bowdoin.

JEANNETTE STEELE CROSS, the wife of Robert M. Cross '45, Administrative Assistant, made her debut in the Books Section of the ALUMNUS in the August 1951 issue.

PAUL G. DARLING, A.B. (Yale), Ph.D. (Columbia), was appointed Associate Professor of Economics at Bowdoin in 1956. Before World War II, in which he served as a first lieutenant, Dr. Darling had been associated with the Title Guarantee and Trust Company of New York. From 1945 to 1949 he was a member of the faculty of Rutgers University, and for the seven subsequent years Assistant Professor of Economics at Carnegie Institute of Technology.

PHILIP M. BROWN, Professor of Economics at Bowdoin, has been over the years our most obliging expert on the works of Roy Foulke.

VICTOR FORD, a graduate of Harvard College and Harvard Divinity School, is Assistant Pastor of the First Parish Church of Brunswick, where much of his work is devoted to youth groups of the community and the College.

SEWARD J. MARSH '12, as most Bowdoin men must know, has been Alumni Secretary at the College since 1942. He sometimes finds time in his busy life of working for Bowdoin to write a review for the ALUMNUS, of which he is Editor.

Notes

President J. Seelye Bixler H'52 of Colby College will review in the August issue of the ALUMNUS Platonism in Recent Religious Thought by Professor William D. Geoghegan.

Walter Houston Clark, Dean and Professor of Psychology at Hartford Seminary and formerly a member of the Bowdoin faculty, is the author of The Psychology of Religion: an Introduction to Religious Experience and Behavior, published in April by Macmillan.

Willis Barnstone '48, at present studying for the doctorate in Comparative Literature at Yale, will in the near future have two books published: a translation, Eighty Poems of Antonio Machado with an introduction by John Dos Passos, and a collection of Barnstone's own poems, From This White Island.

The Insurance Law Journal for March, 1958, contains an article by Edward J. Hudon '37 entitled "Insuring and Exclusion Clauses in Individual Accident and Health Policies." Mr. Hudon is Assistant Librarian at the Supreme Court Library in Washington.

Land in Our National Economy and Financial Statements for the Years 1952-56 by Roy A. Foulke '19 have recently been published in pamphlet form by Dun and Bradstreet, Inc.

Mrs. Marie Peary Stafford H'49 is the author of an article entitled "Admiral Peary and the 'Roosevelt'" which appeared in the May, 1958, issue of Down East magazine. It concerns her famous father, the Arctic explorer and discoverer of the North Pole, Admiral Robert E. Peary '77.

Professor Stephen Minot is the author of an article entitled "Teaching the Essay," which will appear in a forthcoming issue of College English.

William Frost '38 is the author of an article entitled "Shakespeare's Rituals and the Opening of King Lear," which appeared in The Hudson Review, Vol. X, No. 4, Winter, 1958.

Professor Kevin Herbert of the Classics Department is the author of an article entitled "Myth out of Ritual: A Review Essay," which appeared in the February, 1958, issue of The Classical Bulletin.

Professor Edward Pols of the Department of Philosophy is the author of an article entitled "To Live at Ease Ever After," a critical study of the analytic movement in English-speaking philosophy, which appeared in the spring issue of The Sewanee Review.

An article by Gerard J. Brault, entitled "Le Mythe de 'la Langue de Louis XIV,'" dealing with certain problems of Franco-American French, appeared in the Winter issue, 1957-58, of The Assumption School Alumnus. Dr. Brault is an instructor in French at Bowdoin.

Let not Bowdoin authors be dismayed if some of them see no tribute paid to their latest publications! Several books have reached us too late to be reviewed in this issue of the ALUMNUS.

Alumni Clubs

BOSTON

The Bowdoin Club of Boston held its annual dinner on April 10 at the University Club, with President James S. Coles and Mr. and Mrs. Seward J. Marsh '12 as special guests.

At the meeting, past presidents of the group were honored. President Coles traced the history of Bowdoin's offer to college men and the problems for the years to come. In an effort to avoid direct Federal aid to education and still help the finances of independent colleges, the President suggested a direct Federal income tax deduction for contributions to colleges and universities.

Color slides of the College were shown by Alumni Secretary Marsh, who gave a commentary on them. Ladies were in attendance for the first time in the club's history.

The annual elections were conducted by retiring President Everett P. Pope '41, with these results: Frederick A. Moore '49, President; Robert L. Bell '42, First Vice President; John C. Gazlay jr. '34, Second Vice President; John B. Morrell '52, Secretary; Donald N. Lukens '46, Treasurer; and William W. Curtis '20, Alumni Council Member. Retiring President Pope was presented a humidor by the club members as a token of appreciation for his dedicated service.

The club is making plans for the future. "Bowdoin Night at the Pops" occurred on May 8, with the arrangements being capably handled by Don Lukens. Tentative plans are being worked out for the chartering of either a special railroad car or a plane for transporting Boston area alumni to the campus for Alumni Day in the fall. A late summer mailing will cover the details of the trip.

BUFFALO

The Buffalo Bowdoin Club had the pleasure of hearing the Glee Club when it visited suburban East Aurora on March 31 on its annual spring tour. The Vaughan Clays '30 and the Ed Milners '31 entertained before the concert. There were forty-nine alumni and members of their families present. The Glee Club gave a superb performance, which was received with much enthusiasm by an overflow audience.

CENTRAL NEW YORK

The Bowdoin Club of Central New York held a dinner at the Corinthian Club in Syracuse on April 1, after which alumni, wives, and friends attended a concert by the Bowdoin Glee Club at the Lincoln Auditorium.

Those present at the dinner included Arthur Chapman '17, Edward Hildreth '18, Charles Sawyer '28, Donald Larrabee '43, Jack O'Donnell '37, Daniel Healy '37, George Fogg '43, Robert Bryant '47, Leroy Knight '50, Thomas Chapman '50, Robert Merrill '50, Robert Edwards '43, Edward Lyons '53, and Raymond Little '53, as well as 14 guests. This number was swelled by Richard O'Shea '45, Gordon Hoyt '50, and Richard Herrick '50, who joined the group at the concert.

Following the concert there was an informal get-together at the Liederkrantz Club, which was attended by alumni, wives, and Glee Club members.

The group plans to hold an informal party late in the summer. Date and place will be announced later. Tentative hopes are high for the importation of some real Maine lobster.

CHICAGO

The Bowdoin Club of Chicago held its final meeting of the year at Barney's Market Club on April 11.

The usual social hour and dinner were followed by an informal session, sparked by the remarks of Vice President Bela W. Norton '18, special guest from the campus. Mr. Norton's remarks were completely informal and invited continuous comment and discussion. In addition to telling something of current happenings at the College, the Vice President discussed the Development Program that is being organized and directed by his office.

The evening was concluded by the holding of annual elections. The following were duly chosen for office: President, Harold S. Fish '25; Vice President, Thomas S. V. Bartlett '45; Secretary-Treasurer, George W. Hutchings '43; Recording Secretary, Thomas H. Lathrop '53; Publicity Committee Chairman, Albert A. Clarke jr. '40; Prospective Students Committee Chairman, Donald A. Buckingham '53; and Executive Committee, Professor Alfred W. Newcombe '14, A. Shirley Gray '18, Jay R. Sheesley '23, Howard E. Kroll '25, and Maurice E. Graves '28. Plans are being formulated for another series of successful meetings, beginning in the late summer or early fall.

CONNECTICUT

The annual meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Connecticut was held on Thursday evening, April 10, in the Egyptian Room of the Hotel Bond in Hartford. Eighty-six people attended, including alumni, wives, and other guests, some of whom were sub-freshmen.

Dr. Edward Platz '40, Chairman of the Nominating Committee, submitted the following slate of officers: Dr. Benjamin B. Whitcomb '30, President; Dr. Charles M. Barbour '33, Vice President; Charles D. Scoville '52, Secretary-Treasurer; Dr. W. Holbrook Lowell '33, Council Member; and Dr. John F. S. Reed '37, Alternate Council Member. They were elected.

President Whitcomb introduced the speakers. Nels Corey '39, Coach of Hockey and Lacrosse and Assistant Coach of Football, reported on athletics at the College, with emphasis on the rise of lacrosse as a minor sport, as well as a commentary on the success of hockey and the new Arena. Professor Nathan Dane '37 of the Classics Department spoke on the role of Bowdoin in developing and maturing the minds and personalities of students as individuals.

The meeting was adjourned at 10:30 p.m.

LOS ANGELES

The Bowdoin Club of Los Angeles held its annual meeting on March 28 at the University Club. The occasion was the visit of Vice President Bela W. Norton '18, who was making an extended trip through the South, West, and North Central areas, visiting individual alumni and alumni groups. The Vice President described his office at the College, its development, organization, and plans for the future.

Twenty-three alumni were present: Dr. Ralph Bucknam M'95, George Wheeler '01, Bill Spinney '13, Don Hight '16, Herb Foster '16, Clifford Foster '17, Dr. Plimpton Guptill '20, Herbert Webb '23, Lee Paul '29, Alexander Kazutoff '31, Al Jenkins '31, Michael Lo-Cicero '31; Paul Sullivan '35, Bob Allen '41, Pat Koughan '43, Jim Hedges '44, Dr. Ken Senter '45, Taylor Cole '45, Dave Smith '46, Terry Dunning '49, Marty Levine '53, Donald Westman '54, and Burns Hovey '55.

Elections were held with these results: George Wheeler '01, President; Lee Paul '29, Vice President; Paul Sullivan '35, Treasurer; David Smith '46, Secretary; and Herb Webb '23, Council Member.

Six alumni met for lunch at the Terrace Room of the Hotel Statler on April 22. The meeting was such a success that it was decided that similar get-togethers will occur every fourth Tuesday, at the Statler at noon, starting in June. Plans are also going forward for a meeting on Sunday, September 14, at the home of Terry Dunning '49 in Pasadena. It will be an afternoon and evening affair for alumni and their ladies. Each guest will furnish his own main course.

MERRIMACK VALLEY

The Merrimack Valley Bowdoin Club held its annual dinner meeting at the Andover Inn on April 9. Fifty people attended, including alumni and wives. President James S. Coles and Mr. and Mrs. Seward J. Marsh '12 were special guests from the campus.

Club President Mel Weiner introduced President Coles, who spoke on educational problems and opportunities and appealed for individual interest and participation on the local level.

Alumni Secretary Marsh showed color slides of the College, and several club members offered to donate slides to the College's collection.

A special vote of thanks for the good hospitality at the Andover Inn goes to Bob Frazer '44, who is Treadway's manager there.

NORTH SHORE

President Charles Shulman '37 greeted over 100 members, ladies, and guests at the annual meeting of the North Shore Bowdoin Club on the evening of Thursday, April 24.

Following a sumptuous buffet at the Kernwood Country Club (Salem, Mass.), a brief business meeting was held. Secretary Sheldon Caras '48 and Treasurer Bill Ratcliff '27 rendered amusing and gratifying reports which indicated that a benevolent autocracy is keeping the club on a sound keel and steady course.

Nominations Committee Chairman Harry Simon '24 presented the following slate of officers for 1958-59: President, Howard Ryan '28; Vice President, Leland Howe '50; Secretary, Robert Porter '41; Treasurer, William Ratcliff '27; and Council Member, Harry Simon '24. The nominees were unanimously elected. The doings of the Alumni Council were reported by Richard Thayer '28.

The President asked Wesley Bevins '40 to introduce the guest speakers. After brief remarks by the Alumni Secretary, Professor A. LeRoy Greason gave an interesting and informative report of what a Bowdoin freshman does in English. Among his comments on campus happenings, Professor Greason mentioned the student abolishment of hazing as the "most significant educational event at Bowdoin during the past year."

President Ryan expressed hope that future club meetings would be attended by the ladies, thanked all for their active in-

NEW HAMPSHIRE — Friday evening, June 6 (Laconia).

ROCKY MOUNTAIN (Denver) — All day social meeting — (Alumni, wives, and children) — Lake Edith home of Dr. Robert Chandler '41 — Saturday, July 12.

CENTRAL NEW YORK — Informal picnic — Oneida home of John O'Donnell '37 — Saturday, August 30 — 6 p.m. terest in the welfare of the College, and adjourned the exceptionally pleasant gathering at 10:00 p.m.

PITTSBURGH

On March 14 the Bowdoin Club of Pittsburgh held its annual dinner at the University Club, with alumni, wives, and parents of undergraduates present.

Following the dinner, there was an address by President Coles and a showing of color slides of the campus.

President Coles had arrived early in the morning from Washington, D. C., and had then been driven to Shady Side Academy, where he was greeted by Headmaster Follansbee and Assistant Headmaster Lowell Innes H'55. A special chapel group was convened, and he addressed the entire student body of the school.

ST. LOUIS

The Bowdoin Club of St. Louis met on May 1 in the home of Earl Rosen '45 to greet Philip S. Wilder '23, Assistant to the President, as special guest from the campus. Convener Wallace C. Philoon '45 reports that the following alumni and wives attended the meeting: Dr. and Mrs. Herman Dreer '10, Paul Laidley '05, Thomas Downs '27, Fred Morecombe '43, Mr. and Mrs. James Higgins '44, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Rosen '45, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Philoon '45, and Mr. and Mrs. Jay Carson '53.

Mr. Wilder showed a series of color slides of the campus and undergraduate activity, giving a commentary and answering questions as he went along.

ST. PETERSBURG

Dr. Charles S. F. Lincoln '91 convened twenty at the March 20 meeting of the Bowdoin Club of St. Petersburg. Many had returned north by April 26, but a small loyal group met for the club's final luncheon gathering of the year. H. Tobey Mooers '18 talked of his experiences in the consulate service.

SAN FRANCISCO

Secretary Allen Wright '54 reports several recent meetings of the Bowdoin Club of San Francisco. In January twelve alumni gathered for lunch at the Olympic Club. The recently-elected officers gave reports of their progress in organizing club affairs since the previous autumn meeting.

On April 8 a luncheon meeting was held at the Commercial Club to greet Vice President Bela Norton '18, who was in the middle of a cross-country business trip for the College. Those who attended were Austin MacCormick '15, Edward Ham '22, Donald MacKinnon '25, Raymond Deston '30, Donald Sands '44, Bruce Alden '49, John Mullane '50, and Allen Wright '54.

Mr. Norton reported on the current state of the College and told about the workings of his office in running the Development Program.

A ladies' night was held on April 26 at the Olympic Club. In attendance were Austin '42, Sands '44, Alden '49, Mullane '50, Blake '51, Carman '52, Wright '54, and DuBrule '56, and their wives and dates.

Newly-arrived Bowdoin men are invited to contact Secretary Wright at 257 San Carlos, Sausalito.

WASHINGTON

The Bowdoin Club of Washington held its annual dinner on March 13 at the Continental Hotel. Retiring President Rufus E. Stetson jr. '42 presided, and U. S. Representative Robert Hale '10 served as toastmaster.

President James S. Coles delivered the principal address. He suggested that there be an amendment to the Internal Revenue law which would provide that "an individual's contribution to a recognized college or university could be taken as a credit against income tax owed."

Merton G. Henry '50, chairman of the nominating committee, presented the following slate, which was duly elected: William F. Johnson '30, President; Robert L. McCarty '41, Vice President; Prescott H. Pardoe '50, Secretary; David A. Dickson '48, Treasurer; David M. Marsh '51, Program Committee Chairman; and Edward C. Hudon '37, Alumni Council Representative.

WILMINGTON

The "Wilmington Branch" of the Bowdoin Club of Philadelphia held a ladies' night on April 24 at the University Club in Wilmington. Frank Evans '10 presided at a meeting attended by over sixty people, including alumni, wives, parents of Bowdoin undergraduates, four of next fall's freshmen, and several of their parents.

Following a social hour and dinner, Dean Nathaniel Kendrick reported on the state of the College. It was a most congenial gathering, and everyone enjoyed himself completely.

WORCESTER

About forty alumni and their ladies gathered at the Worcester Country Club on April 17 to welcome Mr. and Mrs. Robert Donham as special guests from the campus.

Following a social hour and dinner, a short business meeting was held, and two committees were appointed, one to work on improving attendance at club functions, and the other to work with the College and prospective admissions candidates.

Bob Donham, Coach of Basketball at Bowdoin, gave an informal talk in which he discussed professional basketball, basketball at the College, and some of his personal impressions on what alumni can do to help interest good students in coming to Bowdoin.

Looking

Edmund Flagg, a graduate of the College in the Class of 1835, in writing to the Orient from Virginia his recollections of Bowdoin, which he had not visited since his graduation, ended by saying that "it was easier to enter Bowdoin in 1835 than in 1887." Seventy years later the requirements in 1887 seem anything but stiff. The College wasn't turning them away in those days. Graduates of three favored fitting schools could enter on certificate; other applicants, by passing an examination. In requiring an examination of most applicants Bowdoin was almost unique in New England; but all one had to do was to pass it. And once in college few left. Most freshmen graduated as seniors and the few that dropped out were often offset by those entering on advance standing, particularly from the Bangor Theological Seminary.

Chapel exercises during a large part of the winter and spring of 1888 were held in Memorial Hall and so were the services of the First Parish Church, which was being thoroughly renovated. There was a distinct though temporary increase in religious activity during the year. There were thirty-one "conversions" and evangelistic services were held twice a week for several weeks.

Perhaps the lack of activities outside the curriculum during the winter and spring was partly responsible. Reading through the Orient for that period, one finds few references to lectures, music, or drama. Except for occasional visits to the Town Hall of a "Tom Show," the students had to go to Portland or Lewiston for drama. The actors in the "Tom Shows" stayed at the hotel on Maine Street near the railroad which is now a barber shop. The billboard on the south end of the Riley Block carried lurid pictures of the forthcoming shows and the small boys lined up behind the show's handyman as he exercised on leash on Maine Street sidewalks two sleek and peaceful looking dogs — greyhounds or Doberman pinschers. Additional items in the repertoire of the "Tom Shows" were "East Lynne," "The Two Orphans," and a play of which the principal scene depicted on the billboard was a heroine lashed to a log about to take its course through the sawmill.

In a symposium of letters from college presidents in the New York Evening Post President Hyde said that federal aid would be fatal to common school education. In another letter to the Boston Globe President Hyde concluded that college athletics had very little effect on inducing boys to go to college — "Going to college is earnest, thoughtful, and serious business to all except an insignificant fraction of students."

Dr. Young, secretary of the state board of health, apparently did not examine the sanitary condition of the college buildings while inspecting the schoolhouses of Brunswick. (There weren't any sanitary facilities on the campus in those days.) He pronounced the new school building on Powder House Hill to be "as near a model schoolhouse as any yet visited." It's still in use.

All Bowdoin men took great pride in the selection by President Cleaveland of a graduate of the College, Melville W. Fuller, to be Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. In the issue announcing the appointment the Orient printed an appreciative poem by the new Chief Justice on General U. S. Grant, whose political opinions were, of course, anathema to the new appointee.

A new chapel organ was presented by Oliver Crocker Stevens of the Class of 1876 and his wife. The stipulation was made that it be played by a student who should receive all or a portion of his tuition therefor and that students should be allowed to practice on it. The cost was $1200. The occasion of its installation is remembered by one who was a small boy at that time from the fact that many of the pipes of the discarded and dismantled organ stacked for discard were salvaged by his associates and were tooted merrily up and down the streets of the town. The organ was dedicated on Sunday afternoon, May 26th, with Hermann Kotzschmar of Portland as the organist and with the glee club participating.

An alumnus gave the Orient the history of the previous organ. It was acquired in 1832 by funds contributed by students and faculty and was first installed in the old wooden chapel which stood facing west near the board walk leading from the present chapel to Maine Street.

The Ivy oration by John M. Phelan on charity organization took a modern view. The poem was by George T. Files, later for many years Professor of German. The Ivy exercises were preceded by field day contests at the Topsham Fair grounds. Except for throwing the baseball and the hop, skip and jump, the program of events was much the same as today and the winning time of 22 4/5 seconds in the 220 yard dash was notable. It was within a fraction of a second of the then-world record. The 100 yard dash was won by Freeman '89 in 10 3/5 seconds. Other winning scores seem old-fashioned.

The boat race on the river between Cow Island and the bridge was won by the sophomore crew of four, one member of which, George B. Sears, was to be police court judge in Lynn, Massachusetts, for over half a century.

The Commencement Orient was obviously issued after Commencement Week so that a full account appears instead of the manufactured preview which in recent years has come out at Commencement time. The Class Day exercises, scheduled to take place under the Thorndike Oak, were adjourned because of rain to Memorial Hall and the Class Day dance necessarily took place in the Town Hall. This year it was not even scheduled as a dance on the green because of the rainy experiences of some recent years. Under the circumstances the Orient editorial deploring the change of scene was not too pertinent.

All the business of the College was apparently transacted in meetings of the boards on Wednesday morning. The only significant action was to turn over to its present use as a storeroom and carpenter shop the building which had been successively a commons hall and a chemistry laboratory.

Messrs. Johnson, Moody, and Hutchins were elected professors of modern languages, mathematics, and physics respectively.

At the Commencement exercises the salutatory on "The Spirit of English Literature" was given by A. W. Tolman. Degrees of LL.D. were conferred on the recently appointed Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller '53 and General Oliver Otis Howard '50.

Three hundred fifty alumni took part in the Commencement dinner in Memorial Hall with Chief Justice Fuller as the principal speaker followed by a long line of speakers representing practically every five-year class from 1838 down.

Music for Commencement was furnished as usual by the Salem Cadet Band, whose members were by this time well acquainted in Brunswick and popular. Wednesday evening, as was customary, was devoted to fraternity reunions.

As a sort of postscript to the Commencement issue the Orient computed that six of the faculty wore full beards, one a mustache and goatee, and one a goatee alone. Only two were plain-faced.

A special meeting of the trustees and overseers of the College removed technical difficulties in the way of admitting Bowdoin to the benefit of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, and the alumni succeeded in raising $50,000 to secure $200,000 from the Foundation. A fund of $50,000 known as the Stone Professorship of Mental and Moral Philosophy had to be paid over to the Andover Theological Seminary because of the denominational restrictions in the original gift.

Under the Carnegie Plan retirement allowances were at first granted on the basis of age and length of service on reaching retirement age after sufficient long-time service. For the original Carnegie Plan there had eventually to be substituted a more comprehensive system based on actuarial figures and carried on by a mutual insurance organization sponsored by the Carnegie Foundation.

The chief beneficiaries of this original Carnegie Plan were to be widows of the group of professors who had for so many years been the nucleus of Bowdoin's faculty. Almost all of these men during this and the next following years passed on. The first to go was Professor Leslie A. Lee, who died in May, 1908, at Portland. Professor Lee or "Pinkie," as he was affectionately called, was a whole-souled, genial man always popular with the students. The accident which took the life of his only son in the summer of 1907 was a blow from which he never recovered.

Fencing was an active sport during the winter and spring. In its very first fencing match the Bowdoin team won over the Pianelli Club of Augusta.

The editor-in-chief of the Orient, Arthur L. Robinson '08, started in the paper a campaign for an undergraduate council. A public meeting was held, a committee was appointed, and the council was set up. It was a definite step toward the present Student Council, which accomplishes many of the purposes which were then visualized although it was some years before the council was able to establish its effectiveness by making changes in its organization based on trial and error.

A special train was run to Lewiston for Maude Adams in "The Jesters." The many who went will never forget the occasion.

High water flooded the campus during the spring thaws. Two pumps with two men in charge were necessary to keep the basement of North Appleton from flooding. The perennial drainage proposition was again under discussion, and Professor Hastings staked out the campus in front of the Art Building in preparation for designing a drainage system. It was to be many years before the object was accomplished.

Drilling five hundred feet without obtaining water in the Maine Central Railroad station discouraged suggestions that the College obtain its water supply from an artesian well.

On its southern trip the baseball team beat Princeton 5 to 2. The team was defeated in most of its out-of-state games but went on to win the state championship. The track team won the state meet. Having won the football championship in the previous fall and the tennis championship in doubles, the College this year stood athletically at the top in Maine. At the New England Intercollegiate track meet Bowdoin was narrowly defeated for first place by Dartmouth, the nearest that the College had come to first place since the famous track victory of 1899. Dartmouth was out of the class of the other competing colleges and soon withdrew from the N.E.I.A.A.

An eating club named The Octopus Club was formed early in the year by eight unmarried men: K. C. M. Sills, A. M. Edwards, R. B. Stone, G. A. Howe, C. T. Burnett, G. G. Wilder, H. B. Hastings and H. A. Jump. Two were married during the year, the other six did not long delay in following their example, and the club dissolved.

During the spring term a notable visitor lectured on "The Medieval Gentleman" — Professor William Allan Neilson of Harvard, soon to become president of Smith.

A somewhat different address was given a few days earlier by Judge B. B. Lindsay of Denver, Colorado, founder of the famous juvenile court and tagged with a supposed advocacy of trial marriages. The perennial subject of juvenile delinquency was his topic. He was a pioneer advocate of the theory that juvenile delinquency is cured not by law books but by bettering the economic and social conditions which are the cause.

One of the vacant panels in the Chapel was filled with a reproduction of the youthful David returning with the head of Goliath. The painting was done by Kahill of Portland and was given by Dr. Frederick H. Gerrish '66. Youthful visitors to the Chapel had always preferred to sit on the north side so as to look obliquely at Adam and Eve. Now they were able to move further west and look more openly at the bloody head of David. The view from the south bank of seats has never offered any such exciting eyeful.

A Good Government Club was organized during the spring in connection with the presidential campaign. Like its present successor it brought to the College speakers of both parties, its first speaker being the Honorable Charles F. Johnson '79, then a member of the legislature but later to become United States senator. He favored the initiative and referendum. At the next subsequent meeting under the auspices of the club George W. Wood, editor of the Lewiston Sun, spoke in opposition to the proposition.

Ivy Day was celebrated in the traditional way. The oration by William M. Harris on "Bowdoin Spirit" harked back to the eloquence of Elijah Kellogg and "Spartacus to the Gladiators."

Harrison Atwood was the popular man. The baseball win over Bates in the morning clinched the championship.

Commencement is again reported in full after and not before the event. On Class Day Robinson was the orator, taking as his subject "Seargent Prentiss of the Class of 1826," who became distinguished as a southern statesman. Pennell was the poet; Files had the opening address; Davis was chaplain and historian; Ham had the closing address, and Lee was the marshal. All the addresses are given in full in the Orient. The "Commencement Hop" was in Memorial Hall. From the list of "invited guests" (not yet called "dates"), given in full, one can deduce that matrimonially speaking college dances vied with co-education.

Wednesday was as usual "the least important day of the week" and the rain which "laid the dust" was welcomed. The traditional features of that day were carried on: medical school graduation, Phi Beta Kappa initiations, and fraternity reunions.

At the Commencement exercises on Thursday the six senior speakers were Hyde, Ham, Gray, Yeaton, A. L. Robinson, and C. M. Robinson, the last mentioned of whom received the prize. His subject: "Kipling, the Young Man's Poet."

Degrees of LL.D. were granted to Professor Henry L. Chapman, F. H. Appleton '64, and Frederic Dodge; Litt.D. to Frank L. Dingley '61 of the Lewiston Sun-Journal. The principal speaker was General Chamberlain, who "reviewed in brief in a perfect speech the varied career of his life especially the fifty-odd years during which time he has always been in some official capacity connected with the College."

The boring practice of speeches by representatives of each five-year class was given up and only five reunion classes were represented. The Reunion Trophy went to the Class of 1858, which had seven out of its thirteen members present.

The sixth of the Bowdoin Institutes was held during the second semester. The subject: Modern Literature. The three Institutes on this subject in 1925, 1933, and 1950 were of more general interest and attracted a larger audience than any of the other Institutes.

The distinguished speakers brought to Bowdoin during the Institute of 1933 were William Butler Yeats, the Irish poet; John Masefield, poet laureate of England; Theodore Dreiser, novelist; T. S. Eliot, "the high priest of the younger English poets and essayists;" Elmer Rice, the dramatist; Norman Foerster, philosopher; Dorothy Canfield Fisher, novelist; Marc Connelly, Pulitzer Prize-winning dramatist; and Carl Van Doren, author and essayist — certainly a distinguished galaxy. No subsequent Institute series has yet come up to this 1933 program. All the speakers caused their listeners to sit up and listen, but perhaps the most startling statement was T. S. Eliot's defense of nonsense poetry in his discussion of Edward Lear. Marc Connelly was mildly apprehensive that "talkies" might put drama out of business but was not so much concerned over such sad future possibilities as was Elmer Rice. Marc read an unused part of "Green Pastures." TV was yet in the future as far as either speaker was concerned.

Another distinguished speaker during the period was Felix Frankfurter, then professor at Harvard Law School and soon to be a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. As the Annie Talbot Cole lecturer he took as his topic "Problems of Today and the Law." He discerned the need for a new organization of production and distribution to bring recovery from the current depression and prevent a recurrence, showed a distrust of the capitalistic system, and urged a curtailment of the luxury trade. His position was definitely to the left of the prevailing conservatism of his auditors but fell short of communism, and he is well to the right of center today.

Donald MacMillan '98 lectured to a capacity audience in Memorial Hall before leaving for a three months' trip to investigate bird life in northern Labrador. Professor Andre Morize of Harvard lectured in French on "Modern French Literature." Sir Frederick Whyte, formerly president of the Indian legislative assembly, discussed the influence of western world culture in bringing home rule to India but didn't foresee the freedom that was to come to India within a few years. The Delta Upsilon speaker was James P. Baxter, then professor of history at Harvard, soon to become president of Williams. He spoke on "Naval Disarmament."

Musical events during the semester included the Curtis String Quartet, which established its popularity so that it became a frequent visitor during the next twenty-five years, three of the quartet remaining unchanged during the period.

Continuing his spectacular career as a skier, John S. Holden '35 placed third in the down-hill ski race at the International Intercollegiate Sport Championship. McLaughlin and Good, the Bowdoin star hurdlers, placed third and fourth in the National AAU Championships.

Maine won the state track meet notwithstanding the establishing of new records by several Bowdoin stars. Maine won because its larger team took the second and third places. Bowdoin's team of stars, however, won second in the New England meet for the second consecutive year, Boston College taking first with a margin of 9 points.

In April Bowdoin debaters won a 2-1 decision over Maine debaters on the subject of "Commercial Advertising." The team: Leo '32 and Redman '34. No decision was made in a debate with Colby on "Inter-Allied War Debts." The Bowdoin team in addition to the two who debated at Maine: Singer '33.

The passing of dividends on the College's 6,000 shares of the Curtis Publishing Company stock caused the omission of the annual faculty bonus.

The '68 prize speaking was won by Albert Samuel Davis, Jr. on the subject of "Red Saturday." He feared that the plight of working men during the depression might cause them to turn toward communism.

Just before the spring vacation the Orient came out with an issue which did not as in past years substitute "Occident" for "Orient" as the title but spoofed everything. Coming on this issue without warning in the bound volume, a reader is startled with the headline that the "Institute denounces six world famous writers." Like most such publications, the Orient tried too hard to be funny and the burlesque becomes boring before the first page is finished.

President Sills summarized in chapel the impression made on him by the religious conference held at the College, deploring the juvenility and immaturity of the student body not only in their religious attitude but also in college life generally. He criticized the practice of referring to the College as "school."

A bit of mild hazing was blown up by the Boston Post into a sensational article purporting to describe a parade of nude college students on Maine Street.

Interviewed by the Orient, President Sills said that he would not like to run the College without the assistance of the Student Council but felt that it should be more in touch with the Alumni Council. Dean Nixon, similarly interviewed, believed that the work of the Council would be improved if it became an interfraternity council instead of a small group elected by the students. The Orient submitted a plan combining fraternity with elected representatives. The plan was withdrawn as premature, a new council under the existing plan having just been selected. The suggestion that the new Student Council should set up a committee to discuss the matter was substituted. Meanwhile Charles W. Allen '34, who was captain of track and a member of the athletic council, was elected to the presidency, "generally conceded to be the highest honor a Bowdoin man can have," following Ray McLaughlin '33, who had held the same three offices. The students overwhelmingly approved the Orient's suggestion for the appointment of a committee.

The Ivy Day literary exercises were held informally on the chapel steps with the members of the class and their "dates" seated on the grass in front; "no caps and gowns." Everything focused on the Ivy dance, and preliminary talk was concerned particularly over which band should be selected. Options were taken on two colored bands — Noble Sissle and Claud Hopkins. Sissle was first selected and then discarded for Hopkins. Most of the fraternities had name bands for the Thursday night dances. The Sissle band played at the Beta House. Twelve bands and two hundred and twenty-five guests made Ivy Day lively.

Colby and Bates were in the black for the current fiscal year; Bowdoin and Maine in the red.

One cannot depend alone on the synthetic Commencement issue of the Orient for accuracy as to what happened at Commencement, but, checking with other sources, it can be reported that the Bowdoin Prize, awarded not oftener than once in five years, was granted to Dr. Fred H. Albee '99, distinguished orthopedic surgeon.

Professor Mitchell was feted by the faculty just before Commencement in honor of his 40 years of service. Governor Brann, Sir Francis J. Wylie, and Professor Hutchins spoke at the Commencement dinner in addition to the representatives of three reunion classes. An LL.D. was granted to Frederick W. Pickard '94; D.D. to the Reverend John C. Schroeder of Portland; L.H.D. to Sir Francis J. Wylie; Litt.D. to Mary Ellen Chase of Smith College, and A.M. to Katherine Curtis Pierce of New York.

Class Day managed to hang on to indoor exercises — followed by smoking the pipe of peace and cheering the halls and the Class Day dance. Don Redman's Ethiopian band furnished the music.

Hoyt A. Moore '95 was elected to the board of trustees to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Cyrus H. K. Curtis. Over the next two decades, as chairman of the visiting committee, he became a tremendous influence in the growth and development of the College.

Necrology

1902 ERNEST WOODBURY FILES, M.D., well known Portland surgeon and gynecologist, died at his home in that city on April 10, 1958. Born in Gorham on September 24, 1881, he prepared at the local high school and following his graduation in 1902 entered the Maine Medical School, from which he received his M.D. in 1905. He interned at the Maine General Hospital in Portland and became director of the Dr. King Hospital and later the State Street Hospital. From 1928 until 1945 he was chief of the gynecological service at the Maine General. A Fellow of the American College of Surgeons, he was interested in dairy farming and operated a large farm at West Gorham, where he raised pure-bred Jersey cattle. He was a deacon of the Williston Congregational Church and a fifty-year member of the Masons. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mabel Haskell Files, whom he married in Westbrook on June 19, 1912; a daughter, Mrs. K. Alexander Laughlin of Cumberland Foreside; three grandsons; and a nephew, Dr. Ernest H. Files '38. His fraternity was Kappa Sigma.

1904 MYRTON ANDREW BRYANT, founder and past president of the Bryant Teachers Bureau in Philadelphia, died on April 14, 1958, at his home in Haddonfield, N. J. Born on April 11, 1880, in Harrison, he prepared at Westbrook High School and after his graduation summa cum laude from Bowdoin served as principal of Gorham (N. H.) High School for a year. From 1905 until 1918 he was with Ginn and Company in the educational publishing business in New York and Philadelphia. He became a leading educational placement adviser as founder and co-manager of the Bryant Teachers Bureau from 1918 until his retirement in 1952. He was an elder in the Presbyterian Church and a past president of the National Association of Teachers Agencies. For many years after the death of his wife he lived with his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Roberts, in Haddonfield, where he continued his lifelong interest in floriculture. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Theta Delta Chi.

1904 PHILIP MACLEAN CLARK, for many years with the United States Bureau of Internal Revenue, died on April 11, 1958, in St. Petersburg, Fla., where he had retired four years ago and bought a home. Born on October 15, 1883, in Portland, he prepared at Portland High School and following his graduation magna cum laude in 1904 entered Harvard Law School. He received his bachelor of laws degree in 1907 and became a lawyer in Boston, where he practiced until 1923, when he joined the Bureau of Internal Revenue in Washington, D. C. Later he was special assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury and for many years was engaged in trying cases before the Board of Tax Appeals. In 1938 he was transferred to Detroit and in 1948 to Cincinnati, where he became Assistant Appellate Counsel. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Pearl Henley Clark, whom he married in Kansas City, Mo., on September 4, 1928; a daughter, Mrs. Margaret Bennett of Silver Spring, Md.; and two sons, Major Chesley K. Clark of Warren Air Force Base, Wyom., and Philip M. Clark jr. of Bloomfield Hills, Mich. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Zeta Psi.

1907 RICHARD IRVING CARNEY, for forty-seven years a chemist with W. F. Schrafft & Sons Company, died at his home in Melrose, Mass., on May 1, 1958. Born on November 21, 1884, in Sheepscot, he prepared at Lincoln Academy and attended the University of Maine for a year before transferring to Bowdoin. Following his graduation in 1907 he taught for two years at the Stearns School in Mount Vernon, N. H., spent a year as an assistant in chemical research with Carnegie Institution of Washington's Boston Laboratory, and in 1911 joined W. F. Schrafft and Sons in Boston. Since 1919 he had been a vice president and director of the Boston Federal Savings and Loan Association. He was a member of the American Chemical Society, the Institute of Food Technologists, and the Institute of Candy Technologists. He organized the laboratory at the Schrafft Company.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Gretchen Horst-meyer Carney, whom he married in North Attleboro, Mass., on September 4, 1918; three sons, Franklin W., Richard I. jr., and Otis W., all of Melrose; one grandson, and six sisters. His fraternity was Kappa Sigma.

1909 GUY PARKHURST ESTES, for many years First Reader in the largest Christian Science Church in New York City, died on March 24, 1958, in Charlestown, N. H. Born in Skowhegan on May 28, 1886, he prepared at Skowhegan High School and Bloomfield Academy and following his graduation from Bowdoin became a Christian Science practitioner in Winsted, Conn. He became First Reader for the Fifth Church of Christ, Scientist, in New York and was chairman of the building committee for the erection of that group's skyscraper church building on East 43rd Street, seating more than 2000 people. Several years ago he established the Foundation for Biblical Research and Preservation of Primitive Christianity in Charlestown. He was a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity.

1913 JOHN SWASEY CHILDS, who served in two world wars and attained the rank of major, died on April 3, 1958, at his home in West Hollywood, Fla. Born on January 5, 1889, in Canton, he prepared at Lewiston High School and attended Bowdoin for one year. He was for some time associated with his father in the Standard Box Company in Auburn. During World War I he served overseas with the 56th Infantry as a first lieutenant. He was with the Maine National Guard for twenty years and served for four years in World War II as a major, with duty in Scotland. He was superintendent of the Norwich Knitting Company in New York at the time of his retirement in 1954. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mary McKenney Childs; two daughters by a former marriage; a step-daughter; a brother, Harry L. '06, and four grandchildren. He was a member of Alpha Delta Phi fraternity.

1913 NEIL AUGUSTUS FOGG, M.D., former chief of staff of the Knox County General Hospital in Rockland, died in Portland on April 27, 1958. Born on November 25, 1889, in Freeport, he prepared at the local high school and following his graduation from Bowdoin attended Harvard Medical School. He received his M.D. in 1916 and served in World War I as a first lieutenant with the Massachusetts General Hospital unit in France. A member of the American College of Surgeons and the American Legion, he was a past president of the Rockland Rotary Club and a Mason. He served in the Maine House of Representatives in 1934. He had retired four years ago and had moved from Rockland to Freeport. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Doris Perry Fogg, whom he married on December 29, 1922, in Rockland; two sons, Neil A. and Donald W., both of Rockland; two sisters, Mrs. Neal Randall of Freeport and Miss May P. Fogg of Boston; and three grandchildren. His fraternity was Theta Delta Chi.

1913 WILLIAM BENEDICT McMAHON, who was planning to retire in May from the United States Immigration Service, died on March 27, 1958, in Chateaugay, N. Y. Born in Brunswick on May 18, 1888, he prepared at the local high school and following his graduation in 1913 went into sales work in Boston, where he remained for eight years. He was later in Washington, D. C., for three years before entering the Immigration Service in 1924. Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Joseph Terry, Brushton, N. Y., and Mrs. Robert Crosser, Washington, D. C.; six grandchildren, and two sisters, Misses Mary and Katherine McMahon of Brunswick. He was a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity.

1917 LOYALL FARRAGUT SEWALL, a retired investment banker, died in New York City on April 6, 1958. Born in Bath on September 13, 1894, he prepared at the Westminster School and attended Bowdoin briefly before World War I. He served in France with the American Ambulance Corps before the United States entered the war and was later a Tank Corps captain in France. During World War II he was a major in the Military Police and served as Provost Marshal in Northern England. Later in the war he was attached to General George Patton's Third Army staff. He was for some years in the investment banking business in New York City and in 1928 founded Overseas Homes, Inc., a worldwide travel service. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Jane S. Sewall; one son, Loyall F. jr., a sergeant in the Army; a daughter, Camilla A.; a sister, Mrs. Walter E. Edge of Princeton, N. J.; and a brother, Arthur Sewall II '20.

1921 CLIFFORD ROSE TUPPER, head of the Latin Department at Great Neck (N.Y.) High School for many years, died in Great Neck on April 13, 1958, after an illness of several months. Born in Princeton on June 25, 1897, he prepared at the local high school and entered Bowdoin in the fall of 1916. He stayed out of school the next year and was graduated with the Class of 1921. Following his graduation he taught for a year in Baltimore, Md., and for four years in Cranford, N. J., before joining the faculty of Great Neck High School in 1927. Since that time he had taught Latin there and served as head of the Latin Department. He did graduate work at Columbia University, the University of Wisconsin, and the University of Colorado and received a master of arts degree from Columbia in 1929. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Marion Johnson Tupper, whom he married on August 11, 1923, in Auburn; four brothers, and three sisters. His fraternity was Chi Psi.

A classmate has written of Mr. Tupper, "Both his colleagues and his pupils held him in high respect for his scholarly attainments and his lovable personality."

1922 EBEN GORDON TILESTON, for many years associated with the Treadway Inn chain, died on April 15, 1958, in Oakland, Calif. Born on July 12, 1898, in Dorchester, Mass., he prepared at Hebron Academy and following his graduation from Bowdoin joined a department store in Union Hill, N. J. He became associated with the Treadway Inns in 1929 and was at one time or another with the Williams Inn, the True Temper Inn in Wallingford, Vt., and the Dearborn Inn, Dearborn, Mich. About ten years ago he went to California, where he continued to be associated with the hotel business. During World War II he served for five years as a lieutenant with the Quartermaster Corps. Surviving is a brother, Arthur C. of Boston. He was a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity.

1950 WILLIAM JOSEPH REARDON, who was with the Group Insurance Department of the Aetna Insurance Company in Boston, died on April 4, 1958, in a Boston hospital. Born in Rumford on December 20, 1925, he prepared for college at Cony High School in Augusta and at Bowdoin was a top-flight football player, being chosen as center on the 1949 All-Maine team selected by the football coaches. He was president of Alpha Delta Phi fraternity, was chairman of the Ivy Day Committee and the Student Judiciary Committee, and served on the Student Council Disciplinary Committee. During World War II he served for more than two years in the Army Air Corps. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Carolyn Foley Reardon, whom he married in Bangor in August of 1953; two daughters, Jane 2, and Martha 1; his mother, Mrs. Anne Reardon of Augusta; two brothers, Joseph E. of Augusta and Henry '49; and two sisters, Mrs. Katherine Thompson of Litchfield, Conn., and Mrs. Rosemary Martinez of Marshfield, Mass.

Medical School

1889 ALLSTON FROST HUNT, M.D., died at his home in Portland on April 24, 1958, at the age of 94. Born in Stroudwater on December 17, 1863, he was the son of Dr. Henry Hunt of the Medical School Class of 1838 and was a direct descendant of Sir William Pepperrell of Kittery. He prepared at Phillips Exeter Academy and interned at the Maine General Hospital in Portland. He practiced medicine in Swampscott, Mass., for eleven years and returned to Portland in 1907. Interested in historical research and geology, he was a life member of the Maine Historical Society and was for years a daily visitor at its quarters on Congress Street in Portland. Surviving are a nephew, Charles R. Hunt of West Buxton, and five grand nephews.

1912 CLYDE HAROLD MERRILL, M.D., died on April 2, 1958, at his home in Altadena, Calif. Born on September 22, 1889, in Auburn, he prepared at Edward Little High School and attended the University of Maine for a year before entering the Maine Medical School at Bowdoin. Following his graduation in 1912, he interned at the Central Maine General Hospital in Lewiston and the Boston Floating Hospital before establishing his practice in Marlborough, Mass. He remained in Marlborough until 1950, when he moved to California. During World War I he served as a captain in the Army Medical Corps.

Former Faculty

COLIN BRUMMITT GOODYKOONTZ, Instructor in History at Bowdoin in 1918-19, died in Boulder, Colo., early this year. Born on December 14, 1885, in Atlanta, Ind., he was a graduate of the University of Colorado in 1912 and received a doctor of philosophy degree from Harvard in 1921. He taught at Yale and Harvard as well as Bowdoin and returned to the University of Colorado in 1924. He served as acting dean of arts and sciences in 1928-29 and retired in June of 1954. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

News Of The Classes

1825 The Soviet Union has issued a postage stamp in memory of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

1877 April 6 was the forty-ninth anniversary of the discovery of the North Pole. On that date in 1909 Admiral Robert E. Peary, four Eskimos, and a Negro reached the top of the world.

1884 The Reverend Ernest Smith, one of Bowdoin's senior alumni, wrote in January, "With the death of Charles Torrey, I became the last living member of my class.

"In the last five years, as health permitted, I have made an intensive study of the water oak, which I hope to complete."

"The influence of Ralph L. Thompson was felt beyond the functions he performed at his desk from day to day. The scope of his activities expanded to encompass the giving of a very special kind of direction to his association with others. Appreciation of others' talents, abilities, and personalities has led to firm professional associations and to lasting friendships. His innate personal qualities of graciousness, courtesy, and dignity, sparked with a rare sense of humor, enabled him to promote and maintain efficient staff and public relations with the greatest ease and naturalness.

The integrity of his mind and spirit and unswerving adherence to the ethics of 'librarianism' will continue to be reflected in the lives of those who have known him and worked with him.

"No one knowing Mr. Thompson can think of him as 'going into retirement.' He is still very much with us. He has only transferred the base of his operations to his home. It is still possible to enjoy his subtle humor, quick wit, and New England accent as he continues to live and mingle with us as a valued friend as well as an admired and respected former co-worker."

Assistant Professor of Military Science and Tactics Harvey Johns was promoted from first lieutenant to captain on March 11.

Professors Fritz Koelln, Edward Pols, and Walter Solmitz attended the annual meeting of the Maine Philosophical Institute on May 3 at Orono. Professor Koelln delivered a paper on the philosophical situation at the University of Hamburg during his student days.

Professor and Mrs. Eaton Leith announce the birth of their first grandchild, a boy, on May 14 in Boston. Parents are Mr. and Mrs. John E. P. Borden. Mrs. Borden is the former Mimi Leith.

Jack Magee, Director of Track and Field Athletics Emeritus, is seeking his first elective public office. He is running for State Representative for Brunswick on the Republican ticket.

Mr. Seward Marsh '12, Alumni Secretary, Mrs. Marsh, and Mr. Robert M. Cross '45 were at the Seignior Club in Montebello, Quebec, for the District 1 Conference of the American Alumni Council, January 12-14. Mr. Marsh is a past national president of the American Alumni Council.

Professor-Emeritus Thomas Means advised the members of the Latin III and Latin IV classes at Hebron Academy in the production of the Miles Gloriosus of Plautus during the winter term.

Mr. Claude Miquel, Fellow in French, was the guest speaker on February 24 of the French Club of Morse High School in Bath. He spoke about the French educational system.

Director of Athletics Malcolm Morrell '24 was elected President of the Maine Intercollegiate Athletic Association at the first of the year.

Dr. Merle Moskowitz, Assistant Professor of Psychology, will teach two courses during the summer session at the University of New Brunswick in Fredericton, N. B.

Professor Edward Pols was a commentator at a symposium entitled "Being in Current Metaphysics" at the annual meeting of the Metaphysical Society of America at Brown University on March 29.

Mr. and Mrs. John Robinson announce the birth of Jeanne, their second child, on November 2. Mr. Robinson is Instructor in Mathematics.

Professor David Russell, Assistant Professor of Psychology and Director of Student Counseling, will be Visiting Professor of Psychology at the University of New Hampshire's 1958 summer session.

Professor Walter Solmitz gave a talk on "Present Questions of Men" in the forum program of Temple Beth-El in Portland on February 11.

On January 21 Professor James Storer of the Economics Department participated in a forum and seminar on current trends in the economy of Maine and the nation. Sponsored by the Androscoggin Valley Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, the meeting was held in Lewiston.

Dr. Storer spoke to members of the Brunswick Chamber of Commerce at a breakfast meeting on February 18 at the Harriet Beecher Stowe House. His topic was "The National Economy As It Affects Maine."

Professor Frederic Tillotson joined the members of the Curtis String Quartet in playing Dvorak's "Piano Quintet in A Major, Opus 81." The public performance was given on April 21 as the Curtis String Quartet made its annual appearance at the College.

Professor Tillotson presented a concert of keyboard music on April 30 in the Pickard Theater. The selections for harpsichord and piano were drawn from a wide repertory, ranging from Bach to the Moderns.

Professor Leighton van Nort was a panel member in a discussion entitled "Faculty Morale — Problems and Prospects," which was held at the meeting of the Eastern Sociological Society in Philadelphia on April 19.

Professor and Mrs. David Walker announce the birth of their first child, Melissa Jeanne, on February 5.

Coach Adam Walsh is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Representative from the First Congressional District of Maine. Running against James Oliver '17 of Portland, he is seeking national elective office for the first time. He is on leave of absence until June 30.

History Professor William Whiteside spoke to the Brunswick Rotarians on February 24 on the topic "George Washington as an American Folk Hero."

Mr. Philip Wilder, Assistant to the President, served as chairman of one of the sessions at the tenth annual conference of the National Association of Foreign Student Advisers, held at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor from April 27 to 30. The theme of the conference was "International Education Exchange in the Next Decade."

Former Faculty

Mr. Peter King, formerly Assistant Professor of Military Science at Bowdoin, is engaged to Miss Nancy English of Lawton, Okla., a senior at Bryn Mawr College. Mr. King is studying for his master's degree in business administration at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Newton Stallknecht, formerly Professor of Philosophy at Bowdoin, and presently on a sabbatical leave from the University of Indiana, delivered a paper on Bergson at the annual meeting of the Maine Philosophical Institute at Orono on May 3. On May 6 he was at Bowdoin to lecture to the class in contemporary philosophy.

Medical School

1898 Dr. Fred Fernald, who has been a physician in Nottingham, N. H., for more than half a century, retired last January as Rockingham County Physician after more than twenty-five years in that office. He is eighty-one years old. Recently the new county nursing home was named in his honor.

Honorary

1907 Dr. Raymond Calkins, pastor-emeritus of the First Church (Congregational) in Cambridge, Mass., served as leader of the annual "quiet day" in Concord, N. H. on February 18. More than one hundred Congregational and Baptist ministers joined together for a day of retreat and meditation.

1926 Mr. Robert Frost, America's foremost living poet, presented a reading of his poetry on Sunday evening, March 23, in the Sanders Theater at Harvard University. The program was sponsored by a group of Harvard and Radcliffe students. Mr. Frost also gave a reading of his poetry in the Cotton Memorial Chapel at Lafayette College on March 19.

1939 Dr. Frederick Meek of the Old South Church, Boston, was the Chapel speaker at the College on February 23.

1944 Professor Mark Van Doren, member of the Columbia University faculty for 38 years, will be the speaker at the University of New Hampshire's Commencement on June 15.

1947 President-Emeritus Arthur Hauck of the University of Maine received a special message from President Eisenhower in February, shortly before Dr. Hauck's retirement became effective, commending him on his 23 years of service as president of the university. The message read, in part, "During your energetic administration, the university has grown in size and stature and in the hearts of the people of Maine. For twenty-three years your graduates have gone out to lives of usefulness inspired by your example."

"You have shown them that the demands of citizenship require a thorough education, plus a quickened interest in the civic, business, and charitable affairs of their neighbors."

Plans are going forward for the proposed Arthur Hauck Auditorium at the University of Maine. Alumni of the University are raising $1,500,000 to construct the building.

1952 President J. Seelye Bixler of Colby College delivered the annual Annie Talbot Cole lecture at Bowdoin on February 13. He spoke on "The Existentialists and William James."

President Charles Phillips of Bates College was one of the speakers at the 130th quarterly meeting of the New England Council in Providence, R. I., on March 19.

Senator Margaret Chase Smith was honored by George Washington University in February with an honorary degree of doctor of laws.

1957 In March Governor Edmund Muskie announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator from Maine in the June primaries.

In 1907 an enterprising gentleman named H. D. Nichols made an engraving of the Bowdoin campus from an architectural projection. The campus appears to be seen from a high vantage point. Prints appear to be aerial views. Picturing the Bowdoin campus as students from 1903 to 1912 knew it, the prints make a fine addition to those of 1821 and 1860.

The Alumni Office has acquired hand colored copies of these engravings, about 27 by 17 inches on large white vellum sheets. Ready for framing, the prints are priced at $20.00 (plus 3% sales tax to Maine residents).

Playpens And Education

In some ways the College has been busier than ever this summer, even with the undergraduates away from the campus. Playpens have appeared on the grass outside the dormitories; clotheslines have been strung from dormitory windows to trees, with garments somewhat unusual for a men's college drying thereon in the invigorating Maine breezes; there have been almost as many women as men on the campus during July and August, and one family included eight children.

Chronologically, the summer "invasion" began on June 15, the day after Commencement, when thirty mathematicians, including some of the top men in the country, assembled to study surface area theory for four weeks under a $30,000 grant made to the American Mathematical Society by the National Science Foundation.

From June 28 to August 9 seventy-five physics teachers from secondary schools all over the country attended a second institute, made possible by another grant from the National Science Foundation, this one for $47,900. Under the direction of Professor Noel C. Little '17, the teachers studied a completely new physics course, designed for students living in the age of space satellites and nuclear power.

The Maine Heart Association sponsored a course in the fundamentals of calculus from July 14 to 25. Intended primarily for research workers in the medical and biological sciences, the course was taught by Professor Richard L. Chittim '41. In future summers the Heart Association may provide courses in such subjects as hemodynamics, the principles of physics, and vector analysis.

Nearly forty people participated in the meetings of the Mine Advisory Committee of the National Research Council, held on the campus between August 2 and 16.

The College itself held a Conference on Development on August 15 and 16, with upwards of one hundred and twenty-five Bowdoin men and women in attendance. The October ALUMNUS will carry an account of this meeting, which was addressed by such outstanding speakers as Dr. Henry T. Heald, President of The Ford Foundation.

"Zorach Day" on July 23, attended by 500 people, signaled the beginning of still another aspect of summer education at Bowdoin. Continuing through August 31, the exhibit of work by William and Marguerite Zorach, Dahlov Ipcar, and Jason Schoener drew hundreds of summer visitors and townspeople to the Walker Art Building.

During the summer many Bowdoin men visited The Oakes Center at Bar Harbor, where Professor Albert R. Thayer '22 directed a six weeks' speech workshop from July 7 to August 15. In addition to the secondary school teachers enrolled in the workshop, many people from the Bar Harbor area benefited by this generous gift of Lady Eunice Oakes. They had a chance to attend four public lectures, including talks by Professors Philip C. Beam and Herbert R. Brown of the Bowdoin faculty. The Oakes Center offers exciting possibilities for the future.

As Bowdoin moves ever onward, the words of Kenneth Sills come frequently to mind — "Clearly the best days for the College are the days that lie ahead."

THE COVER

This picture was taken by Harry Shulman at the dedication of Coleman Hall on Friday afternoon, June 13, as part of the Commencement Weekend. Mrs. Frederick W. Pickard, donor of the building, has just pulled the cord unveiling the handsome black stone with the simple gold letters "Coleman Hall." Those in the picture are identified on page 5 under another shot of the dedication ceremony.

By Deeds Well Done—The 153rd Commencement

Peter C. Barnard '50

Saturday, June 14, was a beautiful day in Brunswick. The sun shone brightly, and it was comfortably warm but not too hot. The 153rd Commencement exercises were held, as usual, in the famous old First Parish Church (now painted a glowing white instead of its former dull gray).

ICE CONDITIONING

For the first time in history, Bowdoin had a truly "air-conditioned" Commencement Dinner, one that was in the best Polar Bear tradition. The refrigerating system had been turned on in the Arena at an early hour, so alumni and guests found it pleasantly cool inside, with temperatures such that no one minded wearing his coat and tie through the proceedings. The acoustics were greatly improved, too, and everyone heard what was said. The Reverend John Cummins '48 served as chaplain and offered the invocation. According to custom, after the singing of the "College Hymn," all those who had gathered for the dinner dined on cold lobster salad, cold chicken salad, and "all the fixin's."

President Coles opened the speeches with a general welcome to alumni and guests. He introduced the gentlemen seated at the head table, some of whom spoke a few words. Governor Edmund Muskie H'57 spoke for the State and delivered some pertinent and witty remarks about politics and education. President Coles presented the Haldane Cup, given annually to the senior who has shown "outstanding qualities of leadership and character," to William A. McWilliams jr. '57, one of the most outstanding competitors in the history of the Maine State Track Meet.

THEIR JUST DESERTS

Louis Bernstein '22, retiring President of the Alumni Council, was called upon to announce the recipient of the Alumni Service Award. To the surprise and delight of all, he read citations (which appear on the inside front cover) for two Bowdoin men — Seward J. Marsh '12, Alumni Secretary, and Malcolm E. Morrell '24, Director of Athletics, both of whom have given years of unstinting effort and loyal service in behalf of the College.

President Coles introduced William M. Martin, who spoke for the honorary graduates. Then Jotham D. Pierce '39, retiring Chairman of the Alumni Fund, gave a brief report on the state of the Fund and asked for all possible help in increasing the total figure to something much nearer the goal by the end of the Fund year on June 30.

Fund Chairman Joe Pierce '39 reports at the Dinner.

Following the singing of "Phi Chi," John H. Milliken jr., President of the Class of 1933, announced 1933's twenty-fifth year gift, a scholarship fund of more than $12,000. President Coles also announced that the Class of 1908, on the occasion of its Fiftieth Reunion, was making a gift of better than $6,000 for landscaping and other improvements near the Infirmary and around the Chapel.

STATE OF THE COLLEGE

In his traditional message on the state of the College, President Coles expressed Bowdoin's appreciation for the most recent Pickard gift, Coleman Hall, and for three recent bequests: that of the Chase and Johnson families ($375,000), that of the late Walter V. Wentworth '86 (initially, $350,000), and that of the late Guy P. Estes '09 ($100,000). The Governing Boards, it was announced, voted that the Chase House is to be the official residence of the Dean. The famous Barn Chamber, however, will be reserved for seminars and other similar educational purposes for which it is so admirably suited and for which it was so well used for many years. The Boards are making further study of the eventual use of the Wentworth benefaction. Part of the Estes gift will be used to support the Bureau of Municipal Research and the remainder will be used for scholarship purposes.

The President also discussed the complicated problems of admissions and the correlated matter of the size of the College. He went on to mention the problems of finances, some of which are eased by the annual giving by Bowdoin alumni to the Alumni Fund. Speaking about the last fifty years, he said, "It is perfectly obvious that had there been no Alumni Fund during this period, we would have accumulated a total deficit of more than $1,000,000." Tuition, raised to $1050 this year, will probably have to be raised again, and increased use of loan funds and broadened scholarship grants will enter the picture. As for Federal aid, President Coles said, "I know of no independent college or university which wants Government subsidy. Each recognizes that Government subsidy necessarily and inevitably means control, and control is not the essence of which freedom is made. Better than Government subsidy would be alteration of the Federal income tax laws to permit gifts made to colleges and universities to be deducted from the computed tax due rather than from income before taxes. Such a scheme could be devised so that the Government would forego no more funds than it might appropriate to private colleges and universities, and yet this would protect the diversity of interests of the individual donor and the freedom of the institutions."

Under the leadership of Precentor Geoffrey R. Stanwood '38, Chandler's Band and the alumni played and sang "Rise, Sons of Bowdoin," thus closing the Commencement dinner.

The regular Commencement Weekend was preceded by the Baccalaureate Service, held at four o'clock, Sunday afternoon, June 8, in the First Parish Church. Graduating seniors, parents, guests, faculty members, and townspeople gathered to hear an address by President Coles. Dr. William C. Root, Charles Weston Pickard Professor of Chemistry, read the scripture lesson, and the Reverend J. Arthur Samuelson, pastor of the First Parish Church, delivered the invocation and the prayer. The College Chapel Choir was under the direction of Professor Robert K. Beckwith, and William F. McCarthy '58 played the organ, closing the service with a toccata which he himself had composed.

Thursday, June 12, saw early-bird members of the reunion classes beginning to gather on campus. By the time the weekend drew to a close, 699 alumni had signed in at the Library, and many others came and went, unrecorded for the ages, but enjoying themselves nevertheless. Reunion classes started their activities at headquarters in the various "ends," and the weekend was well under way.

The Directors of the Alumni Fund held their annual meeting in Sills Hall at nine o'clock Friday morning, June 13. President Coles had confirmed the vote of the alumni, making Samuel A. Ladd jr. '29, E. Farrington Abbott jr. '31, and Philip Dana jr. '32 the newest Directors of the Alumni Fund, each to serve a three-year term. Vincent B. Welch '38 was named Chairman of the 1958-59 Fund, Richard S. Thayer '28 Vice Chairman, and Seward J. Marsh '12 Secretary.

BEAM LECTURE

At nine-thirty Friday morning, Professor Philip C. Beam delivered the first of the day's two Alumni Institute Lectures, continuing a Commencement Week feature inaugurated a year ago. Speaking at the Walker Art Building, the Chairman of the Art Department discussed "Architecture as an Art and as a Profession." His remarks were accompanied by color slides.

The annual meeting of the Alumni Council took place at ten-thirty in Sills Hall. Council President Louis Bernstein greeted thirty-five members-at-large, club representatives, and members of the College staff. Announcement was made of the three alumni who had been elected on the alumni ballot to four-year terms as members-at-large: Frederick P. Perkins '25, J. Philip Smith '29, and Jotham D. Pierce '39. W. Howard Niblock '35 was the nominee of the alumni for Overseer. Both he and Louis Bernstein were elected to the Board of Overseers at its Friday meeting.

The Alumni Council elected these officers for 1958-59: Leland W. Hovey '26, President; Carleton S. Connor '36, Vice President; Seward J. Marsh '12, Secretary; and Glenn R. McIntire '25, Treasurer.

FORTY-SIX COMMISSIONED

Meanwhile, a large crowd had assembled in front of the Walker Art Building. Once again the steps and the terrace formed the stage on which were enacted the impressive ROTC commissioning ceremonies. Forty-six seniors received commissions as second lieutenants in the United States Army Reserve. Major General Philip D. Ginder, Deputy Commanding General for Reserve Forces, First U. S. Army, delivered the address and awarded the commissions.

Friday noon was the hour for two luncheon meetings, that of the Alumni Association, held in the Arena, and that of the Society of Bowdoin Women, which took place in the Sargent Gymnasium. A new catering concern had been engaged to provide a delicious meal of barbecued chicken and tuna fish salad, which everyone acclaimed enthusiastically. Following the luncheons, each group held its annual meeting.

Association President Bernstein introduced President Coles, who said a few words, and Fund Chairman Jotham D. Pierce '39, who urged one and all to support the Fund vigorously in the remaining days before June 30. About $125,000 was reported as of June 13, and though the intended goal of $160,000 seemed impossible to achieve, Chairman Pierce hoped that alumni giving might reach $140,000 or $145,000. Alumni Secretary Marsh in his annual report mentioned the favorable reaction of alumni to the bimonthly issues of the ALUMNUS, as well as the new features being instituted by Managing Editor Robert M. Cross '45; increased club interest and activity; and the good job that alumni are doing in seeking out and entertaining qualified admissions candidates. Vale G. Marvin '36, former Bowdoin track star, presented to Track Coach-Emeritus John J. Magee a lifetime membership in the United States Amateur Athletic Union. At this point the redoubtable Jack was heard to say, "This is an hour I shall always cherish, and I want you to know that I am also appointing myself a lifetime member of the Bowdoin Alumni Association."

NEW DORMITORY DEDICATED

Following the luncheon meetings, alumni and guests formed a large semicircle in front of Coleman Hall to observe the one-thirty dedication ceremony. In August of 1957, Professor Wilmot B. Mitchell '90 had officiated at the groundbreaking exercises, and in November the donor, Mrs. Jane Coleman Pickard (widow of Frederick W. Pickard '94), had placed the cornerstone of the new dormitory. Widgery Thomas '22, Chairman of the Building Committee, presided. The Reverend Mr. Samuelson gave the invocation. Mrs. Pickard was introduced, as was her son, John C. Pickard '22, who spoke briefly and pulled the cord which unveiled the handsome black stone with the simple gold letters "Coleman Hall." President Coles expressed the gratitude of the College for this handsome new building, yet another manifestation of the generosity and devotion of the Pickard family to Bowdoin. He closed the ceremony by the formal and symbolic unlocking of one of the main doors, after which he escorted Mrs. Pickard on a short inspection tour of the interior. Many of the spectators and visitors followed along, and Coleman Hall was left open for much of the weekend so that all who were interested might see it. The dormitory will be completed, furnished, and ready for occupancy this September. It will house seventy-six students in the conventional manner of sitting room-bedroom suites for each pair of roommates.

SOUNDS OF THE SEA

Assistant Professor James M. Moulton of the biology department delivered the second 1958 Alumni Institute Lecture, entitled "Animal Sounds of the Sea," at two o'clock that afternoon in the Smith Auditorium. Professor Moulton is in the Caribbean area this summer, continuing his important, unusual studies.

As Friday progressed, other meetings took place. The Bowdoin (Alpha of Maine) Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa met in the Smith Auditorium at three-fifteen and elected John L. Baxter '16 President. Professor Richard L. Chittim '41 was re-elected Vice President, and Professor Nathan Dane '37 was re-elected Secretary-Treasurer. Dr. Horatio S. Card '88, who, at the age of 91, is one of Bowdoin's oldest living graduates, was elected Chairman of the Literary Committee, and Congressman Robert Hale '10, Professor Leland M. Goodrich '20, and Professor William Frost '38 were also named to the Committee. Reunion meetings were held at the various chapter houses around the campus, and fraternity alumni associations took advantage of the "get-togethers" for brief annual business sessions.

President and Mrs. Coles held their traditional annual reception at the Moulton Union from four until five-thirty o'clock, and shortly thereafter, reunion classes and their guests deployed to sundry spots, far and near, for their reunion dinners and outings. The Class of 1933 went to the Auburn Colony in South Harpswell, and 1908 gathered at Dr. Carl Robinson's home in Falmouth Foreside. By mid-evening, however, most of the wanderers had returned to the campus, and the "ends" were once more reverberating to the happy sounds of reunions.

VOLPONE

The Masque and Gown presented Ben Jonson's Volpone as the Commencement play. This was only the fourth instance since the Commencement plays were inaugurated in 1911 that a Shakespearean production had not been given. Two performances were available for the public: the dress rehearsal on Thursday evening and the regular performance on Friday evening at eight forty-five. Professor George H. Quinby '23 once again

THE PROCESSION

The morning of Saturday, June 14, was at first cloudy and overcast. It had rained during the night, and it appeared that Commencement Day might be spoiled by inclement weather; however, a wind sprang up which blew away the clouds and left a bright, sunny day, a clear, blue sky, and a moderately warm temperature. It was ideal weather. And so blessed, the Commencement Procession formed at nine-thirty and marched off to the First Parish Church.

William D. Hyde '38, grandson of Bowdoin's seventh President, William D. Hyde (1885-1917), led the parade as Commencement Marshal. Matthew E. Levine '58 led the seniors, Professor George H. Quinby '23 was Faculty Marshal, and Hartley C. Baxter II '48 served as Marshal for the Alumni. Hubert S. Shaw jr., son of Admissions Director Hubert S. Shaw '36, marched at the President's side as his page. Dr. Horatio S. Card and Mr. Albert W. Tolman, both of the Class of 1888, were representatives of the oldest class to return this June. Once again the historic First Parish Church was bulging with graduating seniors, parents, friends, trustees, overseers, members of the faculty and staff, honored dignitaries, and alumni.

Dr. Joseph C. MacDonald '15 served as Commencement Chaplain, delivering the prayer and benediction. In the customary manner, there were no outside speakers at the Commencement exercises. The four speeches or "parts" were delivered by seniors. David C. Young gave an address entitled "Walls and Snails," and "Pine Trees and Provincialism" was the topic taken by Edward L. Baxter. Paul Z. Lewis spoke on "Exit: the Editorial," and Allan D. Wooley jr. talked about "The Humanities and Inner Growth."

Commencement music was supplied by the College Chapel Choir, under the direction of Professor Beckwith, with William McCarthy '58 at the organ.

BOWDOIN HONORS TEN

Ten honorary degrees were conferred this June, whereby Bowdoin gained seven adopted sons and further honored three of her own. Made doctors of science were Rufus E. Stetson '08, surgeon in Damariscotta; Alan T. Waterman, Director of the National Science Foundation; and C. Lloyd Claff '18, President of the Single Cell Research Foundation. Those who were created doctors of laws were William M. Martin jr., Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board;

Harold A. Andrews '12, Justice of the Rhode Island Supreme Court; Hugh J. Chisholm, Chairman of the Board of the Oxford Paper Company; and David Rockefeller, Vice Chairman of the Board of the Chase Manhattan Bank. John J. Pullen, author of the celebrated book The Twentieth Maine, was made a doctor of letters. And Joseph B. Chaplin, Principal of Bangor High School, and William Zorach, sculptor and artist, became masters of arts.

The climax of the ceremonies occurred when President Coles, using the ancient and customary Latin phrases, asked and received the permission of the President of the Board of Overseers (Chester G. Abbott '13) to grant and confer upon the candidates all the rights, privileges, honors, and dignities of the first degree in Arts. "In witness whereof, receive these diplomas," he said. And then the names of the one hundred and seventy-three men were read aloud, and each man came forward to receive his rolled sheepskin from the hand of the President. Mortar-board tassels were shifted from right to left, and one hundred and seventy-three Bowdoin men had left the ivied halls and whispering pines. Ceasing to be undergraduates and beginning to be alumni, they joined "that proud company of poets, statesmen, and each son" who bring the College fame "by deeds well done."

HERE AND THERE AT THE 153RD

At the annual meeting of the Bowdoin Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa on June 13, nine seniors and two juniors were elected to membership. Those from the Class of 1958 were Alan W. Boone, Kenneth E. Carpenter, John P. Field, R. Andrews Kingsbury, Paul Z. Lewis, Peter D. Relic, Barry C. Waldorf, Ralph A. Westwig, and David C. Young. The juniors were G. Raymond Babineau and Christopher C. White.

The winner of the Goodwin Commencement Prize for 1958 was Allan D. Wooley jr., who graduated summa cum laude with Highest Honors in Classics.

In his usual and inimitable manner, Professor Herbert Ross Brown, Chairman of the Department of English, broadcast the running account of the Commencement Dinner proceedings in the Arena. His remarks were recorded and broadcast by Portland radio station WGAN at four o'clock, which allowed many alumni to get a "second helping" of the program as they left the campus and began driving home or to vacation spots.

The Society of Bowdoin Women held its annual election on Friday, with these results: President, Mrs. Sanford B. Cousins; Honorary President, Mrs. James S. Coles; First Vice President, Mrs. Marie Peary Stafford H'49; Vice President at Large, Mrs. Philip S. Wilder; Secretary, Mrs. John P. Vose; Treasurer, Mrs. Gilbert M. Elliott jr.; Assistant Treasurer, Mrs. F. Webster Browne; Chairman of the Nominating Committee, Mrs. Horace A. Hildreth; Chairman of the Friday Luncheon, Mrs. Bernard Lucas; and Chairman of the Saturday Luncheon, Mrs. Perley S. Turner.

This year three men were graduated summa cum laude, three more magna cum laude, and twenty received their degrees cum laude. Four graduates received Highest Honors, five others took High Honors, and another twenty-two received Honors in their major fields.

Graduate scholarships were awarded by Bowdoin to two seniors and five alumni: Cameron D. Bailey '58, David L. Berube '58, Raymond G. Biggar '52, David H. Dott '57, J. Steward LaCasce '56, Paul J. Morin '54, and W. Pattangall Nicolet '53.

Elections 1958

Bowdoin men continue generally to let their representatives be chosen by the other fellow. Of 7726 ballots mailed last spring, only 1776 were returned. The results of the voting were as follows.

Two vacancies existed on the Board of Overseers. Nominated by the alumni to fill one of them was W. Howard Niblock '35 of Winchester, Mass. He was duly elected an Overseer at the June meeting. The other vacancy was filled when the Overseers elected Louis Bernstein '22 a member of the Board.

To serve as Members at Large of the Alumni Council for four-year terms, the alumni elected Frederick P. Perkins '25 of Hartford, Conn., J. Philip Smith '29 of Melrose, Mass., and Jotham D. Pierce '39 of Portland. Because of Mr. Bernstein's election to the Board of Overseers he resigned as a member of the Council, and Donald N. Lukens '46 of Newton, Mass., was elected to fill the vacancy.

After canvassing the alumni vote, President Coles appointed as Directors of the Alumni Fund for three years Samuel A. Ladd jr. '29 of Brunswick, E. Farrington Abbott jr. '31 of Auburn, and Philip Dana jr. '32 of Portland.

New officers of the Alumni Fund for 1958-59 are as follows: Chairman, Vincent B. Welch '38 of Washington D. C.; Vice-Chairman, Richard S. Thayer '28 of Marblehead Neck, Mass.; Secretary, Seward J. Marsh '12 of Brunswick.

The Alumni Council has organized for 1958-59 with these officers: President, Leland W. Hovey '26 of Cynwyd, Pa.; Vice-President, Carleton S. Connor '36 of Stamford, Conn.; Secretary, Seward J. Marsh '12 of Brunswick; Treasurer, Glenn R. McIntire '25 of Brunswick.

Honorary Degrees To These Ten Men

JOHN J. PULLEN — Keeping faith with the highest ideal of the liberally educated man, with the memory of his Maine forebears, and with his experience as Private and Captain in the United States Army, his remarkably able history of a famous regiment has made "The Twentieth Maine" live once again.

WILLIAM ZORACH — Despite the accolade of success, he has never lost his inherent humility before the awesome nature of art as a "universal and cosmic expression of the soul of man."

JOSEPH B. CHAPLIN — Principal of the Bangor High School, outstanding exemplar of the sturdy fibre of Maine stock, the quality of Maine schooling, and the opportunities Maine offers her able sons.

WILLIAM M. MARTIN, JR. — His sound training and breadth of knowledge, the flexibility of his keen mind, his equanimity and consistent courage in making decisions whether popular or not, and above all his passionate belief in a free market economy with the government in the role of regulator rather than controller, typify all that independent liberal education would do, and make today's honor to him equally an honor to us.

Chisholm

HUGH J. CHISHOLM — Despite the heavy demands made upon his time and energy by far-reaching enterprises, his un-failing devotion to his native State and its progress has helped in many ways with the trying problems Maine faces today, and contributed to its industrial development as well as enriching the lives of its people.

RUFUS E. STETSON — We do him honor today, on the fiftieth anniversary of his graduation, for his distinguished humanitarian career, for his fealty to his College, and for his illustration of the true sense of the word "gentle-man" — courteous, chivalrous, cultivated, and kind.

C. LLOYD CLAFF — This combination of successful business man and brilliant scientific worker, this lively and conscientious community citizen has turned an intellectual curiosity to the study of biology, and an inventive mind to the creation of instruments which not only let us better understand life, but save it.

ALAN T. WATERMAN — As a qualified Maine Guide, he skillfully threads his way down the trails and turbulent streams of the Allagash Region; so does he forthrightly guide the complex course of our nation's many-faceted scientific program.

HAROLD A. ANDREWS — His fearlessness has proved his mettle to the people of Rhode Island, who, as we, hold him in high regard. Proudly we hail him, a son of Bowdoin who has more than fulfilled his "peculiar obligations to exert his talents for the public good."

DAVID ROCKEFELLER — Concerned with the fuller utilization of economic exchange through the enhanced contribution of a notable banking institution, the obligations he has assumed as a trustee and director affirm him a true patron of art, of science, of international understanding, and of education.

A PROFESSOR'S GARDEN OF VERSES

By Richard Armour, Ph.D., Harvard '33

I. Faculty Meeting

Convened, except for those who make it a point of honor
To be late and thus thought busy,
At four;
Adjourned, after dispatching half an hour's business,
At six.

Scholars, dispassionate and logical in articles for the learned journals,
Become passionate and illogical on departmental budgets,
On promotion and tenure,
And on a change in the wording of section five, paragraph three, subparagraph two
Of regulations regarding class attendance;
Patient searchers after truth by means of Bunsen burners, microfilms, and the interlibrary loan—
Honest men, modest men, fearless men—open their coats
(Why double-breasted?)
To bare their Phi Beta Kappa keys,
Clear their throats importantly, move, second the motion, and with a faint remembrance of Roberts' Rules of Order
Call for the question after a furtive look at their watches.

Faculty members individually
Are people.
Faculty members collectively
Are faculty members.

II. The Dean

When he considers how his days are spent
(More than professor, not quite president, Though toward the latter tentatively reaching),
He wonders if he should have left his teaching.
Of course—he rubs his high, impressive brow—
He has a private secretary now
And sits upon the platform in the spring,
Crown prince and heir apparent, though not king.
And while some whisper that it must be four,
He really makes a good two thousand more,
From what is called the administrative racket,
Than any in the full professor bracket.

And yet, with summer just ahead, he dreams
Of bygone days—how one month hardly seems
A third of three for resting, going places.
He sees the row on row of student faces,
More cheerful than committeemen. (You know,
The Dean is always ex officio.)
He notices the dust that thickens on
The box of three-by-fives. He has not gone
Inside to add a note on Chaucer's—
Last chapter of his book, since '33.

So he considers how his days are spent,
More than professor, not quite president.

III. Lines Long After Pope, By a Reader of Freshman Themes

Small wit is theirs, in shopworn phrases dressed;
What oft was thought, and twice as well expressed.

Richard Armour's poems, "A Professor's Garden of Verses," were reprinted in the Claremont Quarterly and appeared originally in The Pacific Spectator, The New Yorker, The Georgia Review, The Saturday Evening Post, and the New York Herald Tribune. They appear in the ALUMNUS with the kind permission of the Claremont Quarterly.

IV. Librarian

Behind the desk, beside the shelf,
She seems the shyest sort of elf,
Or, mingled in with cabinets
And catalogues and books in sets
And paste and shears and rubber bands,
A small machine with human hands.
Her tread is light as down or feather.
Her shoes can hardly be of leather.
She speaks a muted sort of speech;
Her words, half whispered, barely reach.
But out of hours, who knows? Perhaps
She stamps her feet and shouts and claps
Her hands and goes on quite a buzz—
At least, one rather hopes she does.

V. The Split Infinitive

The split infinitive not only splits
Infinitives but people. Plainly it's Responsible for making a division
Into three sorts: he who, with fine derision,
Looks down his nose at vulgar splitters; he
Who, knowing better, splits defiantly
And scorns the pedant and perfectionist;
And he, the very bottom of the list,
And yet by far the happiest, who lives
In ignorance of split infinitives.

VI. Professor's Progress

Each article he wrote, though paper thin (And thinner still, if truth be known, within),
He placed upon the one he wrote before,
A slowly rising pile upon the floor,
Each minuscule addendum, near ethereal,
Dredged out of desiccated source material,
Each book (one was a full two inches thick)
He measured with his shrewd arithmetic
And placed upon the others there below
And proudly watched the paper pillar grow.
Then mounting quickly with expectant smile
And careful step the scholar's precious pile,
He stood at last triumphant on its tip
And reached, and plucked a full professorship.

VII. Academic Procession

Unplucked, untended, late and soon,
Unornamental, June to June,
Professors, in their special way,
Are plants that bloom a single day.

Burst suddenly in blazing flower,
They for a brief exciting hour
Enchant and awe the lookers on
Who witness the phenomenon.

And then, as suddenly, they shed
Their brilliant petals, go quite dead,
And stay inexplicably sere
Until Commencement comes next year.

1948 Takes A Good Look Ten Years Later

1948 Class Secretary C. Cabot Easton of Brunswick conducted a class survey this past year in connection with 1948's Tenth Reunion, held June 12 to 14. Of the 172 questionnaires mailed out, 95 were returned. Some of the results were about as expected; others were somewhat startling.

Copies of a three-page summary of the survey have been mailed to all members of 1948. In the thought that other Bowdoin men will also be interested in the results, we are printing here excerpts from this summary.

A third of us are in insurance, sales, or teaching; 10% are lawyers and 6% are doctors. We have four clergymen; others are in pharmacy, research, architecture, publishing, and politics. We spend an average of 46 hours a week on the job, though 11% put in more than 60 hours.

Our average income is $9000 (we guessed it to be $7269); 6% of us earn $3500 or less a year; 13% make from $3500 to $5000; 43% earn $5000 to $8000; 25% earn $8000 to $12,000, and a fortunate 13% are in the "more than $12,000" category. Men located in Maine average almost $9000, those in other parts of New England make about $11,000, and classmates located outside New England come up with a little less than $7500.

As far as occupations go, the doctors are making the most cash ($16,000), followed closely by advertising men ($15,000). Then come lawyers ($12,000), engineers ($10,000), insurance men ($9800), salesmen ($8700), and manufacturers ($8600). Then military ($7900), ministers ($5900) and teachers ($5300). Financiers ($4766) are at the bottom of the heap. Generally, we're satisfied with our progress and we don't encourage our wives to work. In fact, 15% of us don't even have a wife.

At the age of 50 we expect to be at the top of our occupations and earning $20,000 a year.

We were married at age 24; seven have been married more than ten years. Most of our wives have been exposed to college and 20% have done graduate work. It takes us from 5 to 25 minutes to get to work, waving good-bye to two children whose average age is 3½. Twenty men have one child; 24 have two; 17 have three; and 9 men have four children. One brave man has five children and one has six. There are two sets of twins in the class.

More than half of us have visited the campus from two to eight times since graduation. 14% have been back 9 to 15 times and 12% more than that. About two-thirds of us attend Bowdoin Club meetings or reunions and feel that these activities are worthwhile in renewing friendships and keeping posted on current information about the College. And we see from one to six Bowdoin men regularly.

On The Campus

An unusual gift from a reunion class five years ago has resulted in scholarly contributions by Bowdoin faculty members in such areas as clastic rocks, thermodynamics, the effects of sounds on the behavior of fish, and the relation of activity in rats to certain schedules of food deprivation.

At its 25th reunion in 1953, the Class of 1928 set up the Bowdoin College Faculty Research Fund with a gift of some $11,000. At its final meeting last spring the faculty voted to thank members of the Class of 1928 for their generosity and to tell them what has happened as a result of that generosity.

They learned, for example, that one member of the faculty received a grant to defray part of the expense in experiments in animal motivation, work which will indirectly aid in understanding human psychological reactions.

Bowdoin's geologist received a grant to help him pay the expenses of a pamphlet on "hydrothermal alteration of clastic rocks." Another grant helped illustrate a physicist's article on thermodynamics. The costs of a questionnaire and digest of results which constitute data for a paper invited by the National Speech Association were met by a grant.

The Faculty Research Fund has paid for photographic reproductions of pictures by Winslow Homer, later to appear in a biography of that artist. Typing, editing, transcribing, and microfilming expenses have been paid in various combinations for a literary manuscript, a book on the language of the visual arts, a paper on British attitudes toward India, and a comparative study of French and English stylistics.

In making its gift five years ago, the Class of 1928 left the fund open to contributions from other classes as well as from individuals and outside institutions.

Meddies in Europe Again

On June 16 the Meddiebempsters flew out of McGuire Air Force Base in New Jersey for Frankfurt, Germany, and their seventh tour of European military bases under USO sponsorship since the end of World War II. They were gone for nine weeks.

The editors of the ALUMNUS plan to carry an account of the tour, written by Dick Kruger '59 of Concord, N. H., in the October or December issue. Alumni may recall reading several years ago an account of a similar Meddie tour by Terry Stenberg '56.

Besides Kruger those making the trip were Pete Potter '58 and Olie Sawyer '58, both of Portland, John Lunt '61 of Barrington, R. I., Jack Lingley '60 of Weymouth, Mass., Jim Cohen '61 of Lewiston, Dave Fischer '60 of Cincinnati, Ohio, Pete Hanson '61 of Weston, Mass., and Clayt Bennett '59 of Dexter.

Bill Cunningham devoted most of his Boston Herald column for June 18 to a letter from Kruger, who told about the background of the Meddies and octet singing in general and concluded, "I would like to take this opportunity to extend to you, on behalf of the Meddies, an invitation to our Homecoming Weekend, November 7 and 8. Saturday, after the football game, we hold our annual Meddiebempster reunion. This is a gala gathering of Old Meddies straining their rusty vocal chords trying to recreate the melodic ring of 'Mood Indigo' and 'My Merry Oldsmobile.' Barbecued chicken served up by the best caterer this side of Damariscotta. The current undergraduate Meddies make an appearance and come forth with some really modern sounds to show the alumni that we keep up with the times."

Bill Cunningham commented in his column, "... you hear a lot about youth running wild, and the sick fringe of it seems to get most of the publicity. Nobody seems to say much about the healthy majority that has good, clean enthusiasms such as the above. Because of them, there's still hope for us all. In fact, it's up to them, and, from here, they look good."

Sabbaticals

Four members of the faculty have been granted sabbatical leave for all or part of the academic year 1958-59. They are Professors Eaton Leith, Edward Pols, William C. Root, and Frederic E. T. Tillotson.

Professor Leith, who is chairman of the Department of Romance Languages, will be on leave during the spring semester. He plans to study in Europe and at Harvard University.

Professor Pols, chairman of the Philosophy Department, sailed in July with his wife and their four children for England, where they will remain for a year. He will work at the Warburg Institute of the University of London, where he hopes to complete a book in which he is developing a general theory of the relation between reason and experience. He expects to spend some time studying recent developments at various philosophical centers in France, England, and Germany.

Professor Root plans to spend the winter in London writing up the results of the experimental work that he has done at Bowdoin in the past few years. He will also start the first draft of a monograph on "The Use of Metals in Pre-Columbian America." In the fall and spring he will examine the collections of Aztec and Inca metal work (gold, silver, and copper) to be found in the museums of Madrid, Paris, London, Brussels, Vienna, and Rome. He is Charles Weston Pickard Professor of Chemistry at Bowdoin.

Professor Tillotson, who is chairman of the Music Department, will be on leave during the spring semester. He hopes to spend some time in California and some in Brunswick and plans to write a history of the Bowdoin Glee

THE 1957-58 FUND

Despite the fact that neither objective was reached, this year's Alumni Fund is a notable performance. The leadership of Chairman Jotham D. Pierce '39 and the diligent labors of Directors and Agents were able to overcome many of the obstacles of a relatively difficult year.

Our gift to Bowdoin is $147,670.42 from 3931 contributors. The small increase in the number of contributors provides little satisfaction since our alumni participation dropped in both numbers and percentage, the latter figure going again below the half-way mark.

The complete report will appear in the October issue of the ALUMNUS.

Club, to make a start on a Bowdoin songbook, and to write a history of music at the College since 1946.

Quinby to Afghanistan

Professor of Dramatics George H. Quinby '23 left New York by plane on July 23 to serve for six weeks as adviser-consultant to the Government of Afghanistan in establishing a dramatic academy in the capital city of Kabul. He will be in Kabul until September 15 advising officials on the problems of forming an academy, constructing a theatre with a professional stage, and training young Afghan students in dramatics. His trip was made possible by a Specialist grant from the United States State Department under the International Educational Exchange Program.

Professor Quinby has traveled extensively and is familiar with the theatres of leading cities in the Far East, Europe, and South America. His survey of forty academic theatres in this country, completed in 1945, has been useful to prospective theatre builders both here and abroad. He spent his last sabbatical leave studying the ancient Greek and Roman theatres around the Mediterranean and taught as a visiting professor at Queen's University in Kingston, Ontario.

Professor Quinby was sent as a Smith-Mundt grantee by the State Department to lecture and produce plays in Tehran, Iran, from September, 1956, to August, 1957. While there he offered two courses at the University of Tehran and two at the Department of Fine Arts, in one of which twenty original plays were written. Seven of these were produced by his students of theatre organization at the University. He also directed Billy Budd and The Second Man for the University of Tehran Drama Club, which he organized.

Zorach Day

A special exhibit of paintings and sculpture by William Zorach, Marguerite Zorach, Dahlov Ipcar, and Jason Schoener is being shown at the Walker Art Building through August 31. Approximately 500 people were guests of the College at "Zorach Day" on July 23, when Bartlett H. Hayes jr., Director of the Addison Gallery of American Art at Phillips Andover Academy, spoke on "Artistic Ties of Western Europe and America."

Speaking of the exhibit, Dr. Carl N. Schmalz jr., Curator of the Art Collections, said, "Oblivious to men's earnest deliberations over the primacy of heredity or environment in the formation of human beings, nature continues to produce families characterized by special talents. The Zorachs are such a family.

Alumni Interest And Effort

By Peter C. Barnard '50

Over fifty per cent of the Class of 1962 will come to Bowdoin this fall as the result of continued alumni interest and effort. Here are some of the dividends which are being "declared."

As of the end of July, the Class of 1962 comprised 229 freshmen. They represent a little over a fifth of the nearly one thousand boys who applied for admission. One hundred and fifty-three (66.7%) of them come from public schools, and seventy-six (33.3%) are from private schools. One hundred and sixty-three (71.1%) come from New England, and the remaining sixty-six (28.9%) are from outside the area. Fifteen of the new freshmen were valedictorians of their secondary school classes. Twenty-eight served as class presidents. Thirty-six members of the group participated in Boys' State activities, twenty-five were in musical activities, and seven have had school experience in dramatics. There are also eight winners of Harvard Book Prizes in the group. A large majority of the entering freshmen belong to either the National Honor Society or the Cum Laude Society.

Numerous alumni were instrumental in talking to many of these boys while they were still only prospects, in an effort to interest them in Bowdoin. These same alumni have been very helpful in telling the Admissions Office and the Athletic Department about good prospects who live in their particular areas.

It is interesting to note the number of entering freshmen who were lettermen in one or more of six major sports: forty-six in football, thirty-nine in baseball, thirty-three in basketball, thirty in track, sixteen in hockey, and eleven in swimming. Members of the Athletic Department and the Admissions Office worked closely together discovering and attracting these good, qualified students who have also shown marked athletic interest and ability.

Once again Bowdoin's scholarship program has expanded so that this year about sixty thousand dollars is being spent on prematriculation awards. Almost one-half of this sum is derived from proceeds of the Alumni Fund. Eighty-two scholarships were tendered, and sixty-one have been accepted. Therefore, twenty-seven per cent of the freshman class will begin Bowdoin careers with grants ranging from four hundred to fifteen hundred dollars. The average award is about equal to tuition ($1050). Our scholarship figures were compared this year with those of Harvard, Dartmouth, Brown, Williams, Amherst, Wesleyan, Middlebury, Colby, and Bates, and we were competitive in our offers.

With fall just around the corner and the start of another academic year imminent, the admissions "race" is beginning again. Alumni are encouraged to keep the Admissions Office informed about qualified candidates; their help in guiding these superior boys to Bowdoin continues to be invaluable and immeasurable. We do know, for certain, that over fifty per cent of this fall's entering class will be here because of direct or indirect alumni interest and effort.

William Witherle Lawrence, Trustee Emeritus of the College, died at his home in Portland on Friday, July 25, 1958, at the age of 82. There remain few men like him.

Dr. Lawrence was Professor of English at Columbia University for more than thirty years, until his retirement in 1936. A distinguished medievalist, he was the author of Beowulf and the Epic Tradition (1928), Shakespeare's Problem Comedies (1931), and Chaucer and His Canterbury Tales (1950).

He was elected to the Board of Overseers in 1921 and two years later became a Trustee, a position which he held for twenty-nine years, until his election as Trustee Emeritus in 1952. He served gladly and unstintingly on many committees, including particularly those on the Art Interests of the College, the Library, Honorary Degrees, and Educational Policy.

Anyone who knew William Lawrence and Kenneth Sills found it the most natural thing in the world that the two men should be the firmest of friends. And they were. When President Sills died, it remained for his lifelong friend and counselor to pay to him the loveliest tribute of all. Although William Lawrence would have been quick and vigorous to deny the appropriateness of repeating here the sonnet which he wrote at that time in memory of Kenneth Sills, his own friends would be equally quick and vigorous to defend its exact appropriateness at this time. In his friend's own phrase, "By and large and in the main," we shall not see his like again.

*His voice was kindly and his brow serene,
And such a friendliness shone in his face
We felt that, as it were by special grace,
A finer spirit in our midst had been.
No more beneath the elms will he be seen,
The hearth-fire sinks in its accustomed place,
And only memories remain to trace
What his devotion through the years can mean.
We should not wholly grieve, but think of him
As of a traveller, his journey done,
Sturdy of sinew and of sight not dim,
Who comes to port with setting of the sun,
And lies asleep in well-earned rest at last,
All wandering over, and all striving past.*

"William and Marguerite Zorach have been active artists for over fifty years; each has contributed importantly to the main stream of American art. Their daughter, Dahlov Ipcar, is a nationally known painter, and their nephew, Jason Schoener, has also won renown for his pictures across the country. It is an honor for the Bowdoin Museum to present this exhibit recognizing the high quality of the work of these individuals as well as appreciating the wide variety and broad scope of their beneficent influence upon American culture."

Considered the finest American sculptor of his time, Mr. Zorach received an honorary master of arts degree at the Commencement exercises on June 14.

Hupper Gift

Roscoe H. Hupper '07 of New York City and Tenants Harbor has given the College two more valuable letters written by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow of the Class of 1825. One, dated May 15, 1847, is addressed to Ashbel Green, who became the eighth president of Princeton University in 1812. The other, dated August 30, 1877, was written to Mrs. Caroline Carson of New York City. The stamped envelope in which this second letter was mailed was also included in the gift.

Mr. Hupper has for some years been a collector of Longfellow items, which he has shared most generously with Bowdoin. Among his gifts was a letter written by Longfellow to his sister Elizabeth in Portland early in his junior year. A second was a letter which Longfellow wrote, when he was Professor of Modern Languages and Librarian at Bowdoin, to a friend, probably Mr. George Barrel, in Malaga, Spain.

New Professorships

Two new professorships were established by vote of the Governing Boards at their June meetings. Both honor Bowdoin graduates, George L. Skolfield jr. '13 and Henry Johnson '74.

The George Lincoln Skolfield, Jr., Professorship, paying tribute to a native of Brunswick, was established from part of the Solon E. and Lida Skolfield Turner Fund, amounting to more than $732,000, which came to the College from the Lida S. Turner estate in 1949. The department in which the professorship is held will change and will be determined from time to time. The first appointment has yet to be made.

Dr. Philip C. Beam was named the first Henry Johnson Professor of Art and Archaeology. His appointment was made possible by a gift of some $275,000 from the Henry Johnson Trust, established by the late Professor Johnson, a member of the faculty for forty-one years, from 1877 until 1918. The Johnson Trust came to Bowdoin at the death of his daughter, Mrs. Stanley P. Chase of Brunswick, last November. Mrs. Chase also left to the College more than $100,000, part of it for the support of the Museum of Fine Arts and the remainder without restriction.

Locke Award

At the traditional seniors' last supper at the Zeta Psi house in May Olin M. Sawyer '58 of Portland received the Herbert E. Locke Award of $50, given each year to the Zeta senior who has "contributed most to the fraternity and to the College." The award was inaugurated in 1938 by Herbert E. Locke '12 of Augusta.

Sawyer, the son of Alden H. Sawyer '27, is the second member of his family to win the Locke Award. His brother, Alden H. Sawyer jr. '53, was chosen as the recipient five years ago. Their father joined Alpha Delta Phi in the fall of 1923 but spent most of the past decade with the Zetes on College Street when back in Brunswick.

A Splendid Record

Ten seniors received straight A's in their courses for the spring semester. All ten are going on to graduate school, an unusual and interesting sidelight on education in 1958.

Edward Baxter and Norman Block will both attend Harvard Law School, Alan Boone will enter McGill Medical School, and John Towne, Boston University Medical School. Allan Wooley will study at Princeton Graduate School, Cameron Smith at Harvard Graduate School of Music, and Gordon Weil at the College of Europe in Bruges, Belgium.

Roger Howell will be a Rhodes Scholar at St. John's College at Oxford University, Nicholas Kostis will be enrolled at the University of Nancy in France with a Fulbright grant, and Klaus Klimmeck will continue the study of international law in his native Germany.

A Busy Year Ahead

Before leaving for the summer, the Masque and Gown executive committee planned its tentative schedule for the coming year. It is as follows:

November 13 and 14 — A Streetcar Named Desire by Tennessee Williams, to be designed and directed by undergraduates.

December 11 and 12 — A reading of John Brown's Body by Stephen Vincent Benét, in association with Robert Montgomery.

February 12, 14, and 16 — Tom

University of New Brunswick President Colin B. Mackay presents an honorary doctor of science degree to Bowdoin President James S. Coles at Fredericton on May 15.

Thumb the Great by Henry Fielding. Last performed in 1935, this will be the Winter Houseparty presentation.

March 13 — Twenty-fourth annual student-written one-act play contest.

March 19 and 20 — The Misanthrope by Molière, to be produced and acted by the faculty.

April 11 — Twenty-seventh annual high school one-act play contest.

April 30 and May 16 and 18 — The Threepenny Opera, Marc Blitzstein's adaptation of the musical play by Kurt Weill and Bertold Brecht, if released by the Theatre de Lys, where it has run for three years. The Beggar's Opera, from which it originated, was a popular Ivy Houseparty offering in 1957. As was the case with that production, this will be staged in association with the Bowdoin Music Club.

June 12 — The forty-sixth Commencement Play, Shakespeare's Henry IV, Part I, last shown in 1948.

In the 1957-58 season the Masque and Gown used the services of eighty-nine different students, some of whom worked on several productions. Twelve plays were submitted for the one-act play contest, and four were produced. Forty-three men acted during the season, five of them in three plays and eight in two. Thirty-six men worked on production — designing, building, painting, or shifting scenery or handling properties. Eight others worked on lighting, two on music, and thirteen on box office, publicity, or ushering.

During the coming year the Masque and Gown will have the services of a part-time technician to supervise the production work and care for the stage and shop equipment. William H. Moody '56 will fill this position.

Benjamin G. M. Priest '56 won the Alice Merrill Mitchell Award for acting this past year. He was Masque and Gown President for 1957, wrote two of the one-act plays accepted for production last March, won the prize for directing them, and played important parts in Tea and Sympathy, Volpone, and one of his own plays. He plans to continue his work in the theatre at graduate school.

Musical Fare

The world premiere of an opera by Fred Wilkins '56 and Rob Wilson '52 was presented by the Bowdoin Music Club at the Pickard Theater on May 16 and 17. Entitled "Age of Ice," it tells of love and courage and a bitter man's willfulness that brings destruction upon himself and upon his daughter's lover. For Karl, the old mountaineer, the past is "an age of ice," a waste of sorrow and loss. To face both past and present a man must have courage, and the way to courage lies on the Mountain.

Wilkins composed the music for "Age of Ice," and Wilson wrote the libretto.

Also presented at the same time was "The Play of Robin and Marion" by Darius Milhaud. Perhaps the first comic opera, this is essentially a pastoral play with music by Adam de la Halle, a famous French troubadour of the thirteenth century.

The 1957-58 musical season ended with a rush, including in April a concert by the Curtis String Quartet, the Interfraternity Sing, won by the Zetes; and a piano-harpsichord recital by Professor Frederic E. T. Tillotson.

In May the Glee Club presented its annual campus concert and also sang at the Boston Pops. G. Cameron Smith, Peter E. Potter, and William F. McCarthy, all members of the senior class, presented graduation recitals late that month. Smith received honors for a paper written on 13th century music.

Four concerts have already been scheduled for 1958-59. Julian Bream, English guitarist and lutenist, will be heard on October 15. The Curtis String Quartet and Professor Tillotson will join to present Schumann's "Piano Quintet" on November 17. Next spring Portland soprano Barbara Hardy and pianist Theodore Ullman will both make appearances on the campus.

Lasting Gifts

Through the generosity of Donald K. Clifford of the Class of 1921, the College has been able to purchase the library of the late Professor M. Phillips Mason, who taught philosophy to Bowdoin undergraduates from 1920 until his retirement in 1946. Professor Mason died in July of 1957.

Members of the family of the late Cedric R. Crowell of the Class of 1913 have made a gift to the College to provide for the bookcases in the Green Room in Memorial Hall for the special collection of books on the theatre. This collection, already a rich one through books which have been given by the Crowell family, will be further enriched by purchases from the Crowell Theatre Book Fund.

Bookstore Change

Miss Almoza C. Leclerc of Brunswick is the new Manager of the Moulton Union Bookstore, succeeding Walter J. Szumowski, who has accepted the same position at Tufts University, effective September 1.

Miss Leclerc, who has worked at the Store for some years, is a member of the Brunswick Board of Selectmen.

Mr. Szumowski came to Bowdoin in January of 1950 after serving for two years as manager of the Suffolk University bookstore. He has been active in the National Association of College Stores and the Brunswick Kiwanis Club.

A Slow Leak in the Pink Cloud

"Industry is confident concerning the future economy of our country, and all signs point to a continuing demand for college graduates in the year ahead," Placement Director Samuel A. Ladd jr. '29 said in his annual report to President Coles on May 2.

"It seems apparent now," Mr. Ladd continued, "that the general demand for good candidates will rise in 1958-59 to equal that of the year 1956-57, beginning another accelerated curve with the 1957-58 plateau considered a brief resting point. Bowdoin's and most other placement bureaus report that the recruiting reservation calendar for 1959 forecasts a busy year ahead, with the 1957-58 situation a normal readjustment."

Mr. Ladd's report shows that more than 120 business and industrial officers visited the Bowdoin campus this year to interview seniors. The interview schedule averaged 15 to 18 interviews

Dr. Asa S. Knowles '30, President of the University of Toledo, has been named President of Northeastern University in Boston. He will assume office July 1, 1959, succeeding Dr. Carl S. Ell.

Dr. Knowles previously served as a member of the Northeastern faculty for eleven years, from 1931 to 1942.

Knowles '30

He was founding President of the Associated Colleges of Upper New York (Champlain, Mohawk, and Sampson Colleges) from 1946 to 1948, when he was appointed Vice President of Development for Cornell University. He became President of Toledo in 1951.

As the new President of Northeastern, Dr. Knowles will head the largest university in the country operating under the Cooperative Plan of Education. Under this system, students alternate ten weeks' periods of classroom study with equal periods working on paying jobs in business and industry.

Northeastern has a current enrollment of more than 18,000 students, with approximately 6,000 in the four Day Colleges of Liberal Arts, Education, Engineering, and Business Administration, and 12,000 in the Evening Division.

per company and reached a high of 46 for one firm. During the season more than 1500 individual appointments were made and conducted in the office of the Placement Bureau. In addition, more than 200 off-campus interviews were scheduled for both undergraduates and alumni. The average senior experienced an average of 14 interviews.

"The spotty nature of the current economic trend," Mr. Ladd stated, "is indicated by the fact that although the number of job offers was curtailed notably in the heavy durable goods industries, there was little reduction in the number of opportunities in the consumer or soft goods field.

"The automobile firms, the metal industry, some manufacturing concerns, and certain research organizations are not hiring as many college trainees as in the past. Over-hiring in the last few years in certain electronics and technical fields has resulted in fewer job offers to candidates seeking opportunities. Considerable confidence is being expressed in the demand for candidates in the fields of banking, insurance, retailing, accounting, and sales. Service companies and light industry seem to be seeking the same or in some cases a slightly higher number of graduates."

Starting salary offers to Bowdoin seniors, 130 of whom registered with the Placement Bureau, ranged from $4000 to $5400 a year, a slight increase over the 1957 figures.

"During the fall of 1957," according to Mr. Ladd, "it became evident that a change in the recruiting practices of the past would prevail. . . . Seniors suddenly became aware that the pink cloud on which they had been floating had developed a slow leak. The change is definitely healthy.

"The period of indiscriminately making and accepting employment offers is over. Better counselling, more efficient recruiting, new and improved placement techniques with an ever-increasing demand for well-trained college candidates will result. Graduates will obtain employment, but for the most part they will have fewer opportunities from which to choose. Adjustments are being made in terms of fewer jobs offered rather than reduced starting salaries."

Mr. Ladd pointed out that recruiters may find in the average Bowdoin senior class a higher percentage of science-trained majors than in many other New England colleges and universities. "Business needs the specialist," he declared, "but industry is also aware that this specialist must have the broad knowledge, adaptability, and background to think and to exercise good judgment.

"Management considers the ability to write as important as the ability to read, for much of business today depends upon the art of communication."

Mr. Ladd estimates that approximately 20% of the alumni body, not including the Medical School and honorary graduates, have been aided to a career choice by the Placement Bureau. "Young alumni," he concludes, "are appreciative of this interest given them by the College over and beyond the awarding of a degree. They like to think the College has an interest in their career. Many of our registrants consider the placement process one of the most valuable experiences of their college career, and certainly the investment we have in the program may be considered a career scholarship for our registrants."

Two Standouts

Hammer thrower Bill McWilliams was second to Boston University's John Lawlor of Ireland in the IC4A track and field meet held at Villanova, Pa., on May 31. Lawlor threw 198 feet 8 inches to break McWilliams' record of 196 feet 2½ inches, set two years ago, in 1956. McWilliams threw 188 feet 4½ inches at Villanova, his best mark during the year.

Bill Linscott '58 of Farmington was signed to a contract with the Boston Red Sox late in the spring and reported to Allentown, Pa., of the Class A Eastern League following his graduation on June 14. Linscott played an outfield position with the Polar Bears for three years and averaged about .330. He bats and throws righthanded.

Football Season Again

Forty-three varsity football candidates have been invited back for early practice by Coach Adam Walsh. Most of the candidates will report in time for the first practice session on Labor Day, September 1. Walsh and his staff will have nearly four weeks to size up the squad, which includes fourteen lettermen, before the first game against Tufts in Brunswick on September 27.

The squad includes eight seniors, nineteen juniors, and sixteen sophomores. Of the returning lettermen eight are backs and six are linemen. There will probably be a certain amount of shifting of men among positions.

Backs who are lettermen include Captain Gene Waters of Westbrook, Jack Condon of Brockton, Mass., George Entin of New York City, Bob Hawkes of Danvers, Mass., Terry Sheehan of Gardiner, Ken Judson of Auburn, Mike Karavetsos of Lynn, Mass., and Bob Kennedy of Reading, Mass.

Sophomore backs who may provide help include Jack Cummings of Ithaca, N. Y., Bob Corvi of East Boston, Charlie Prinn of Rumford, Don Reid of Needham, Mass., and Dick Seavey of Canton, Mass.

In the line the six returning lettermen are ends Jim Carnathan of Braintree, Mass., Phil Very of Warwick, R. I., and Al Merritt of Searsmont, center Rick Hurl of Eaton Center, N. H., guard Joe Carven of Weymouth, Mass., and tackle Dick Adams of Braintree, Mass.

Four other men earned varsity letters a year ago. They are Bob Blair of Portland, Ross Hawkins of Valois, Quebec, and Peter Brown of Wellesley, Mass., all at guard, and Carl Smith of Melrose, Mass., at center.

Sophomores counted on for help in the line are ends Bill Widmer of Philadelphia and Charlie Finlayson of North Weymouth, Mass., guards Jack Frost of Brunswick and Don Prince of Framingham, Mass., tackles Dave Cole of Lexington, Mass., Gerry Haviland of Weymouth, Mass., and Bob Needham of Needham, Mass., and center George Del Prete of Framingham, Mass.

Following the opener against Tufts, Bowdoin will face Wesleyan on October 4, Amherst on October 11, Williams on October 18, Colby on October 25, Bates on November 1, and Maine on November 8. The Tufts, Amherst, Williams, and Maine games will be in Brunswick, and the other three away.

Packard Wins Award

Robert W. Packard '58 received one of three $1,000 scholarships awarded at the 111th convention of Theta Delta Chi fraternity, held in Spring Lake, N. J., from September 3 to 6. The other awards went to Hobart and Williams graduates.

Packard, the son of Ned W. Packard '32 of Jefferson, will do graduate work in the sciences and mathematics at Lehigh University during the coming year. At Bowdoin he majored in chemistry and mathematics, was elected to Phi Beta Kappa last February, and was the recipient of the James Bowdoin Cup as a junior.

He entered Bowdoin as the winner of a State of Maine Scholarship and was also the recipient of a Stetson Scholarship. For three years he was a stand-out runner on both the cross-country and the track squads. At the interfraternity track meet last March he was awarded the Elmer L. Hutchinson Cup, given each year to a member of the varsity track squad for "high conduct both on and off the field of sport."

Letters To The Editor

Bees In Britches

An ALUMNUS just reached me and it is good to know that Professor Larry Hall is still dropping bees in britches. I missed the article in which he is supposed to have defiled Great Men and the English language, and I would appreciate your sending me a copy of it.

Bowdoin Coeds?

In glancing through the College Catalogue recently, I was surprised to note that it fails to contain any mention, however brief, of the fact that Bowdoin is a college for men and for men only. It may be argued that Bowdoin as a men's college warrants no discussion since each year the College receives more applications for admission than it can possibly accept; hence it follows that the College is filling a need, and so no further explanation is necessary. Nevertheless, most will agree that a men's college is not better in every way and for every person than a coeducational college, and that some persons might benefit more from the former type of institution, some from the latter. The high-school senior who has decided to attend a small college may choose, in this modern age, among men's colleges, coed colleges, and even brother-sister colleges; could he not obtain the education he wants at Reed, Oberlin, or Swarthmore? The College Catalogue, rather than ignoring the question as it does now, should contain a discussion of Bowdoin as a college for men, and should include an outline of the distinctive features and advantages of the all-male environment.

I note also that the College is continuing to maintain an all-male faculty. The Bowdoin policy which prevents even women with superior qualifications from being considered eligible for faculty positions is difficult to understand in this era of the equality of the sexes, and is difficult to rationalize in the face of the current teacher shortage. This policy deserves a careful reconsideration.

When Bowdoin was founded, it was natural and normal that it be an all-male college. Since then, times have changed, although Bowdoin in this respect has not.

The Days Of The Temple

By Warren R. Smith '90

More than a year ago Dr. Warren R. Smith of the Class of 1890 set down some of his impressions of the Bowdoin life of his time. For many years a professor of chemistry at Lewis Institute in Chicago, Dr. Smith long ago picked up the nickname of "Cosine." He now spends his summers in East Leland, Mich., and his winters in Florida.

Mr. Clement F. Robinson '03 of Brunswick, author of the "Looking Backward" column, has graciously agreed to have this feature replaced this month by "Cosine" Smith's recollections. "Looking Backward" will next appear in the December ALUMNUS.

Mr. Robinson has also added some of his own memories of the late 19th century at Bowdoin. They appear following Professor Smith's article.

THE MAIN REASONS for the changes between the Bowdoin College life of the eighteen eighties and that of today are the increased number of buildings, their modernization, the increase in the student body, and the establishment of the fraternity chapter houses.

The buildings were the Chapel; Memorial, Massachusetts, and Adams Halls; Winthrop, Maine, and Appleton Dormitories; and the Sargent Gymnasium, now the powerhouse. This was the latest addition, built in the middle eighties. Classical, English, and Psychology recitation rooms were in lower Memorial. Biology and the business office shared lower Massachusetts. History and Economics were in South Winthrop, Modern Languages in North Maine, and Mathematics in South Maine. Physics and Chemistry Lecture Room and Laboratories were on the two lower floors of Adams, the upper floors of which were occupied by the Medical School of Maine. The Library was in one wing of the Chapel. There was a newspaper and periodical reading room in South Winthrop.

Modern conveniences were lacking. Memorial and the other general buildings had individual heating plants, but the dormitory rooms were heated by coal stoves. Coal could be ordered at the business office and it would be dumped in front of the dormitory end. The student had to see that it was transferred to his coal closet, which was an adjunct to each room. Memorial and probably some other buildings were lighted by gas from the town supply, but the dormitory rooms had only kerosene lamps. There was one at the head of each flight of stairs in each end, known as an endlamp.

In each end some student had the job of looking after and lighting these endlamps, for which he received free kerosene.

Sanitary arrangements were primitive. Each student had a washbowl and pitcher, which could be filled from a hydrant across the road from each dormitory. Running water was brought to the campus in the eighties but had not reached the dormitories. The only bathtubs and showers were on the lower floor of the gym. There was a Chick Sale affair with eight or ten cells known as "The Temple," located somewhere across the road back of the Chapel. This was burned regularly every Commencement week until it was replaced by a similar affair with flush toilets. Until the middle eighties there were board screens across the road back of each dormitory known as declamation boards. If a lady visitor asked "why," she would be told that it was because the boys went there to spout.

Opening week was marked by three contests between the sophomores and the incoming freshmen. On coming out of Chapel one morning a long rope would be stretched across the entrance for a tug of war between the classes. If either class showed an early superiority, enough upperclassmen would help the weaker to bring them to balance. This might go on until most of the College was on one or the other end of the rope.

The football game was a curious affair. One class would be lined up on the north side, the other on the south side of the southwest quarter of the campus. This was then an open field with no buildings. It was played with a round ball under something like soccer rules. No carrying the ball. The game ended when the ball was forced over the north or south boundary of the field. There was a judge for each class from the juniors and a referee from the seniors. They usually carried clubs and their main duties seemed to be to take a swipe at the ball if it ever came within reach. There was a conventional baseball game between nines from the two classes on Saturday.

A feature of the opening week was the Sophomore football rush. One morning the upperclassmen would hold the sophomores inside the Chapel until the freshmen could toss a football into their midst. This became the property of any sophomore who could carry it to his room. The struggle for it usually lasted one or more hours before some man could break away with it. Some evening in the early fall the freshmen were supposed to stage a "peanut drunk." This consisted of littering the Chapel steps with peanut shells and rushing away, yelling "peanut drunk." The sophomores were supposed to prevent this or break it up.

By the middle of the eighties systematic hazing had practically disappeared. Occasionally an obstreperous freshman would be visited in his room and requested to climb over his coal closet door. Ducking was common and the freshman who did not receive this attention felt he was not living up to his privileges. It usually consisted of his climbing the flights of stairs leading to his room under deluges of water from the pails of sophomores lined up at the head and side of each flight. Freshmen were subjected to not too serious discipline by the upperclassmen. Mistreatment of initiates at fraternity initiations was unknown. There were reports of paddlings, but it was always some other fraternity.

With one or two exceptions each student belonged to a fraternity and lived in a dormitory throughout his course. Each fraternity maintained a hall for meetings and initiations, usually over a store near the campus. Each fraternity had an eating club near the College run by the cooperation of the lady of the house and a steward from the fraternity. There being no chapter houses, each fraternity tended to occupy, not exclusively, one end of one of the dormitories.

Chapel was compulsory, also church. A man could register preference for some other denomination, but if not, he attended the Congregational Church, where the balconies were reserved for the classes. A walk to Topsham would serve for being out of town Sunday and non-attendance at church.

Social life in Brunswick was like that in any other small town and students were welcomed at church and similar social affairs. A dancing class was sponsored by the juniors each winter. There being no chapter houses, there were no house parties. The only occasions when dates were brought from out of town were the Ivy Hop of the Juniors and the Class Day dance of the Seniors.

The only athletic field was the Delta, which served for baseball and for football for a few years. The only regular intercollegiate sport was baseball. The nine usually took a training trip in the early spring, playing New England colleges, and then settled down to a series with the Maine colleges. A professional baseball coach might be employed for a few weeks in the spring, but there was no other athletic coaching except that given by Dr. Whittier. Modern football was not started at Bowdoin till the fall of 1889. A field day with rivalry between the classes was held at the Topsham Fair Grounds track during Ivy weekend. If a man showed sufficient promise, he might be sent to the New England Intercollegiate meet, but this did not often happen. Tennis was played generally but without intercollegiate matches. A gymnastic exhibition was given on the stage of the Town Hall near the end of the winter term.

The College had a boathouse down by the lower railroad bridge. During the early eighties there was four-oared racing by class crews on the Androscoggin and the College had a successful record in four-oared intercollegiate rowing. But when it settled down to eight-oared racing exclusively, it proved too expensive for a college the size of Bowdoin and was discontinued. Perhaps it proved harder to find eight good men than it had been to find four.

The various class activities and the fact that each class was small enough to attend all required courses in a body served to bind the class into a more closely knit body than is the case today.

Mr. Robinson's reminiscences begin here

The kindling wood that the boys derived from the attic floors; the Ivy Day girl who after attending seniors' last chapel said that she thought the temple was beautiful but the seats too hard; the hogsheads of drinking water horsed up by the "ends" which had a gentle flavor of something extra-neous (some thought it was alcohol but there were not so many experienced experts on that subject then as now); the paper bags filled with water which were dropped from the dormitory windows occasionally and on fateful occasions broke on the heads of president or faculty; the unbelievably sour and virgin end-women; the "class cuts" which became such a nuisance that authority had to intervene and prohibit them; the athletic contests on the Delta where (until, after Cosine's time, a wooden grandstand was built) the spectators watched from roped-off sidelines; and canvas walls along the Bath and Harpswell Street sides were supposed to keep out the non-paying spectators but didn't prevent free entrance from the college pines; the "hoarding" on the Harpswell Street side of the medical building only ten or a dozen feet from the sidewalk. Thirteen years later as an alumnus than Cosine I remember the College in the 90's not only as a "faculty son" who followed college affairs with intense interest but also as a boy who sold papers through the dormitories in the early 90's.

I wonder if anyone has ever made a list of the places where the fraternities met and also the places where they ate? As I remember them, Alpha Delta Phi met on the third floor of the wooden grocery store building where the First Parish Pilgrim House now stands at the corner of Maine and Cleaveland and ate at Mrs. Kaler's. DKE met at the top story of Boardman's store next to the post office, where Senter's now is, and ate at Mrs. Hill's on Noble Street. Theta Delta Chi met in the upper floors of the building where my office is now located. The room hasn't been occupied since and still shows signs of their occupancy. They ate at Mrs. Rogers' on Page Street. Psi U met in the top story of Whitehouse's grocery store, which adjoined the grocery store where the AD's met, and, of course, ate for uncounted years at Fan Pennell's next to their present chapter house. Zeta Psi met in the third story of the building which is now Gill-man's piano store on the corner of Maine and Cleaveland Streets and ate at Mrs. Getchell's, which is now Bowdoin's Getchell House. This comprised fraternities at the time of Cosine's recollection, and their locations are, as I remember them, in the middle and late 90's.

There were times when the students in the transept galleries at the Church on the Hill were respectful parts of the audience, but I am sorry to say that my closest recollection is of seeing students sprawled on the seats and reading the Sunday papers — physically present in church as required but mentally and spiritually protesting.

In writing up my "Looking Backward" I am impressed, as Cosine was, with the scarcity of attractions and entertainments outside the curriculum and the students' few activities. Times were indeed primitive.

Bowdoin Browsing

This "Bowdoin Browsing" column has been written by Dr. William B. Whiteside, Assistant Professor of History at Bowdoin. A magna cum laude graduate of Amherst College, he taught at Amherst for two years before coming to Bowdoin in 1953. He teaches courses in the political history of the United States and the social and intellectual history of the United States.

What role is history destined to play in the future? Although no man can answer it with certainty, this question fascinates the writers of history, and not infrequently the readers as well. The range of answers is wide. At one extreme, members of the history-as-heritage school take time out from erecting roadside markers and starting new history book clubs to boast about the waxing interest of Americans in the national past. For them history has a bright future, and there are no problems more serious than the discovery of competent story-tellers who can make history "come alive" — and sell books. At the other extreme, some partisans of the behavioral sciences accuse the historians of being unable — or, even worse, unwilling — to understand the questions and employ the research methods of the sociologists and psychologists and economists. In their indifference, bordering on contempt, these critics seem to compare the historians with the purveyors of antiques in New England villages; their wares are charming enough if you go for that sort of thing, but their ideas are hardly to be included among the main concerns of our time.

The underlying assumption of both of these views is that history is essentially antiquarianism; the historian handles the materials of the past and spreads knowledge about the episodes and the personalities of yesteryear, but his role as interpreter is secondary and unimportant. It must be admitted that much of today's historical writing tends to confirm this view. The astonishing current interest in the Civil War, for example, seems to be largely antiquarianism. Professor Wendell Stephenson, in a presidential address last spring before a national society of American historians, observed that less literature about the English Civil War has appeared in the three centuries since the 1640's than about the American Civil War, which is only now approaching its centennial. Much of the new

Civil War history is interesting and significant, but too much of it, Stephenson laments, either has the "humdrum monotony of thrice-told tales" or elevates anti-quarianism to the absurd heights of a recent scholarly article entitled "Discovered: An Authentic Lincoln Fingerprint."

Surely the historian's role in modern intellectual life is more vital than the preservation of relics and the re-spinning of old yarns. Historians disagree as to whether it is their proper function to derive from the past "lessons" useful in the present. But they are in general agreement that a good historian must have some familiarity with current developments in a number of related fields, and that he must be sufficiently alert and adaptable to ask fruitful new questions about the past. Moreover, he must master unfamiliar techniques without disregarding the literary skills of such classic historians of earlier ages as Thucydides, Gibbon, and Parkman.

The record until now encourages me to believe that the field of history will in the future, as it has in the past, preserve its identity even while growing and changing. Nineteenth-century history dealt for the most part with wars and politics. For two generations historians have been expanding the scope of their field to embrace economic forces, religion, ideas, literary and artistic expression, and social change. The most fruitful pioneering by American historians during the first quarter of the twentieth century was their venture into the field of social history; the most exciting writers of the second quarter of the century, beginning perhaps with Parrington, have explored the long-neglected field of intellectual history. Textbooks of American history may still be pedestrian, but at least they no longer plod wearily from presidential election to presidential election. Rather, they make an effort to present a total view of a developing civilization.

So far, so good, noted William L. Langer of Harvard in another of this year's crop of presidential addresses before scholarly societies. Professor Langer announced that the "next assignment" for the members of the American Historical Association will not be a further enlargement of the scope of history, since the field has reached its natural limits, but rather the achievement of greater depth in the study of the materials of history. Interpretations must be less impressionistic. The historian must make unprecedented efforts to master the methods of other specialists. Special training may be necessary. In biographical studies, for example, the historian must develop competence in the field of psychoanalysis. Langer's plea for breaking down the barriers between disciplines is not entirely new, and he exaggerates in speaking of an "iron curtain" between history and psychology. But it is significant that one of the most eminent living historians chides his fellow craftsmen for resisting the trend toward the integration of the various branches of intellectual inquiry.

Unfortunately the historian, however brilliant and learned, cannot develop professional competence in all of the fields which touch upon human behavior. We are not likely to produce historians who are equally at home in psychology and in economics and in sociology and in literary criticism. It is tempting to conclude in despair that the task is too great, that history cannot survive, and that the historians must sign over to more competent social scientists the task of gaining historical understanding.

No such conclusion is in order. The unattainable ideal in intellectual inquiry is not new to our enlightened age, but is as old as Socrates. The recognition that historians must draw upon the insights of others is a cause for hope rather than despair. It is perhaps frustrating to want to know more about many fields than can be mastered in a lifetime, but the historian's reward for making the effort is a better sense of history. Moreover, it is important for someone to synthesize the findings of many fields into a comprehensive and coherent view of the past. This has always been the role of the historian, and the trend toward increasing specialization in the social sciences makes it more necessary that the function be performed. Good history transcends antiquarianism, and good history leads us to a deeper understanding of our civilization than can be gained through the methods of any other branch of learning. For this reason, I am confident that the search for historical understanding will go on, always imperfectly but often with surprisingly good results.

Books

KATHRYN GALLANT, Mountains in the Sea: Japan's Crowded Islands: Coward-McCann, Inc., New York, 1957; pp. 96; $1.95.

This fascinating book is one of the Challenge Series, the general subject of which is the effect of geography on people and the modifications people have made on geographical features.

Mountains in the Sea follows the general pattern of the Series by showing how the mountains under the sea, and the mountains on the land — which are Japan — have influenced the Japanese way of life. These mountains cover 85 per cent of the country and make farming land precious for the more than 90 million people who live in an area no larger than the state of California. The mountains determine the climate, the crops, and even the sites of cities. They also drive the people to rely heavily on the surrounding sea.

Despite the fact that every possible inch of arable ground is utilized for food, there is still not enough food for the millions of people. To make up for this shortage, the Japanese depend on industry. By selling manufactured goods abroad, they earn money with which they can buy food from other countries. With few natural resources, but with a great deal of determination, they have made their country the only major manufacturing center in the Orient.

Mrs. Gallant is really telling the story of how the Japanese, against great odds, are building a strong and influential nation. She tells the story in simple terms which would be interesting and comprehensible to a junior high school reader, and yet she has written a book which is extremely interesting to older readers as well. Here is the story of what causes an earthquake and a volcano and how these geological conditions affect life in Japan. The average Japanese is quite philosophical about the dangers of earthquakes; as for volcanoes, the hot springs which they produce have been developed by the utilitarian Japanese as health and resort centers which feature hot mineral baths.

Here is the story of how a people use every scrap of land, from the lines where waves break on the beach to the tops of terraced mountainsides. Here is the story of rice growing, from small green shoot to the harvested crop, which is used for rugs, raincoats and roofs, as well as for food. And here is the story of why the Japanese turned to the sea for food and became the greatest fishing nation in the world, with five times as many fishing boats as the United States.

As important as agriculture and fishing are to the Japanese economy, it is in the field of industry that this nation is rapidly taking its place as one of the greatest in the world. Mrs. Gallant explains how the arrival of U. S. Commodore Matthew C. Perry in 1853 opened up Japan to trade with the United States and with the world. In just over 100 years, a great merchant fleet has been built (the busy shipyards have replaced more than half of the ships lost or damaged during the war), and Japan's trade is improving rapidly. The iron and steel industry is also expanding: in 1954, a record total of more than two million tons was exported to all parts of the world. We should remember that, with the exception of India, Japan is the only iron-and-steel manufacturing country east of the Suez Canal. In addition, let's not forget the bicycles, sewing machines, optical instruments, watches, clocks, cameras, and binoculars which have become highly successful export items, particularly to the United States. At the present time, Japan is the only Asian country producing machinery for the Far East. Its textile industry accounts for 40 per cent of Japan's exports.

Mrs. Gallant keeps the spotlight focused on the major problem which continually confronts the Japanese — too many people on too little land. How the Japanese people and their government will go about solving this problem may determine their future as one of the powerful "small" nations of the world.

C. CABOT EASTON

PHILIP C. BEAM, The Language of Art: Ronald Press, 1958; pp. 948; $7.50.

Professor Beam has given us what will almost certainly become a standard introduction to the study of the fine arts, a book which expresses perfectly the Bowdoin tradition as it was set forth by President Hyde in "The Offer of the College."

"To be at home in all lands and all ages;

To count Nature a familiar acquaintance.
And Art an intimate friend;

To gain a standard for the appreciation of other men's work

And the criticism of one's own. . . ."

The book will reassure anyone concerned with the apparent inroads of those who would claim that education must be "practical" or utilitarian. The author vigorously and lucidly reaffirms the outlook which emphasizes that understanding of the past is essential to assessment of the present and preparation for the future. The book is evidence that the Humanistic Tradition, at least at Bowdoin, is very much alive.

Although 900 pages and years of thought and labor cannot be summarized in detail here, I think that in the widest sense Professor Beam is making a plea that understanding and toleration precede, and temper, judgment and criticism. He asks us to study more carefully than we are wont to do just what the great artists have tried to say. He asks that we try to gain some comprehension of the many forces which can cause a Picasso, a Goya, and a Holbein to treat a given problem in three radically different ways. Only when we are aware of the artist's milieu can we comprehend why he chose to create as he did. This is not to imply that understanding will make critical judgment impossible, that there is no such thing as "good" art or "bad" art. There are generally acceptable standards of criticism, but they are seldom what the layman thinks they are:

"Still, those without . . . previous training in the language of the visual arts fail to understand what (the artist) is trying to say . . . expression and communication are by no means synonymous and automatic . . . (The artist) may seem to be speaking an unknown tongue, but that does not mean that he is saying nothing. It merely means that we have not yet learned his language."

"'Art begins where the artist departs from strict imitation of nature, imposing upon her a rhythm (or order) of his own creation, according to his own sense of fitness.'"

This statement is the cornerstone for the text, which is designed to bring out the many ramifications of the definition. The author, after years of experience with first-year art students, has taken the questions which most bother this group and in a logical and consistent manner has rephrased them so they can be discussed with reference to the problems which are of importance to the artist. The hotly debated field of modern (or abstract) art, for example, is dealt with at length, and any reasonable person who has heretofore dismissed such work as the demented daubing of charlatans or madmen will look again after reading the discussion which begins:

"Every teacher of beginners in the subject knows the initial depth of their bias in favor of photographic realism in all artistic representation. Nor can any reader of our major journals miss the numerous letters to the editors which ridicule contemporary art on the premise that art should not only be beautiful but should portray 'the beautiful,' whatever that may be."

It should be kept in mind that the author's purpose was to write an introductory text. Perhaps he has simplified some of the highly complicated problems which are inherent in a field which deals primarily with human emotions and intangibles in general. Possibly some of the author's colleagues will question his treatment of certain advanced and controversial aspects of his subject, but I cannot see that these things are of importance to the audience for which the book was designed. A teacher's first job is to eliminate misconceptions, to give tentative answers to major questions, and, most important of all, to arouse curiosity and a desire to pursue a field of study beyond the elementary level. Professor Beam has done these things.

Physically the book is more carefully arranged than many of its type. The number and quality of the illustrations are impressive and they are grouped so that they effectively point up the text. The chapters are so arranged that each follows the preceding one in a logical fashion which is almost uncanny in its anticipation of the reader's questions.

In conclusion, let it be clear that this is not an "easy" book to read, but to those who are not afraid of mental exercise, Professor Beam's book will offer a valuable opportunity to become acquainted with the language of art.

CARLTON L. APOLLONIO

WILLIAM D. GEOGHEGAN, Platonism in Recent Religious Thought; Columbia University Press, 1958; pp. 175; $4.00.

This is an interesting, critical, and revealing study of the work of six recent philosophers: W. R. Inge, Paul Elmer More, A. E. Taylor, William Temple, Alfred North Whitehead, and George Santayana. Each of these writers has used Plato as much more than a starting point. For each the most significant problems of philosophy are those that loomed largest in Plato's mind, and though he may have reacted at times against Socrates' pupil, each has been greatly influenced in his own constructive thought by what Plato had to say.

It seems to me that the book gains in power as it goes on. Perhaps this is because the author found the material increasingly congenial and more and more stimulating as he progressed. Professor Geoghegan is a little sharp with the first two writers, Inge and More. Inge's "contribution to our knowledge of Plato is both superficial and negligible because it is uncritical and unoriginal." Inge's widely used book on Plotinus is also dismissed as "inadequate." Paul Elmer More is "thoroughly unreliable. He obtrudes his own preconceptions upon Plato not to illuminate him but to distort him almost beyond recognition."

Taylor and Temple are presented as having more to offer, especially to the person who wants to know how far Christianity's debt to Plato extends. Taylor has suggestive things to say about the relation of the events of religious history to the eternal truths of philosophy. Temple's emphasis on the need for a practical response to the demanding social problems of our day is massive. And Whitehead and Santayana, although less able to bring Platonism into line with a recognizable Christianity, do show how permanent its influence on the western mind has been. If, as Plato is supposed to have remarked, no one can philosophize without philosophizing about death, it is striking to note that today, more than two thousand years after his own death, no one seems really able to philosophize without philosophizing about Plato, so essential to any discussion of primary issues are the problems he treated and so fruitful the answers he gave.

One of the chief merits of this book is, indeed, the clear case it makes for the power of the master. Wasn't it Coleridge who said that everyone is born either a Platonist or an Aristotelian? To read these pages is to realize again how dependent on Plato are Aristotle and the Aristotelians themselves. Nature, matter, history, purpose, form are fighting words to a philosopher, and an Aristotelian will hardly be able to defend his own use of them unless his grounding in Plato is secure. Our own philosophical tradition may be more than the set of footnotes to Plato which Whitehead once called it, but, as this book makes plain, much that passes for originality today is found upon analysis to be merely a new approach to themes which Plato had considered and on which in many cases he still has the last word. "Newton would have been surprised at the modern quantum theory," Professor Geoghegan quotes from Whitehead, "and at the dissolution of quanta into vibrations; Plato would have expected it."

It should be said in conclusion that this is a book for philosophers and that the layman who has not himself wrestled with the issues it raises can hardly be expected to see how searching the analysis is. But he will be stimulated if he takes it up and the student will find it a valuable commentary on what is certainly a fascinating theme.

KATHRYN DALE GALLANT is the talented wife of Roy A. Gallant '50, four of whose books have been reviewed in the ALUMNUS within the past year. He met her during the Korean War, when he was in charge of leaflet propaganda dropped to Communist troops and she broadcast to soldiers in foxholes from Tokyo Rose's old studio. The Gallants live in Cresskill, New Jersey, where they work on their science books. They have one young science reader — a two-year-old son.

PHILIP C. BEAM, A.M., Ph.D. (Harvard), Director of the Museum of Fine Arts at Bowdoin, was recently named the first Henry Johnson Professor of Art and Archaeology. Dr. Beam is a member of the Maine Art Commission and a frequent contributor to magazines, including Coronet and The Art Journal.

WILLIAM D. GEOGHEGAN, B.D., Ph.D. (Columbia-Union Theological Seminary), was formerly Chaplain of the College of Arts and Sciences and Assistant Professor of Religion at the University of Rochester. In 1954 Dr. Geoghegan was appointed Assistant Professor of Religion at Bowdoin.

Last February President Bixler delivered the Annie Talbot Cole Lecture at Bowdoin.

Notes

Dramatic Providence in "Macbeth" by George Roy Elliott H'25, published this summer by the Princeton University Press, will be reviewed in a later issue of the ALUMNUS.

From the N.R.F. Essays from the Nouvelle Revue Française, edited, selected, and introduced by Justin O'Brien, was published this year by Farrar, Straus, and Cudahy. Ten of the selected forty-five essays from this famous French monthly were translated by Jeffrey J. Carre '40, Associate Professor of French at Bowdoin.

Hungary, edited by Ernst C. Helmreich, Professor of History and Government at Bowdoin, has been published by Frederick A. Praeger, New York, for the Mid-European Studies Center of the Free Europe Committee, Inc. Professor Helmreich is the author of the preface and an introduction, "Hungary in History."

George B. Welch '22 is the author of Wave Propagation and Antennas, published this year by Van Nostrand. Dr. Welch has been teaching physics at Northeastern University since 1933.

Edward S. C. Smith '18, Chairman of the Department of Geology at Union College, is the author of an article entitled "Ferdinand Rudolph Hassler," published as part of the 1958 number in the "Union Worthies" series.

A rare first edition of Nathaniel Hawthorne's Fanshawe was discovered recently among the books about to be discarded by a North Carolina library. A rare-book dealer made the discovery and arranged for the sale of the volume at New York's Parke-Bernet auction galleries. The $2,600 sale price set a new record for Fanshawe, topping its last appearance by $800.

Fanshawe is important because it was Hawthorne's first book, published while he was still an undergraduate at Bowdoin. It is rare today because Hawthorne paid for its publication and could afford only a few copies.

Alumni Clubs

AROOSTOOK

About thirty-five alumni and guests gathered for the annual dinner meeting of the Aroostook County Bowdoin Club on May 16 at the Northland Hotel in Houlton. President Samuel Fraser '16 conducted the meeting and introduced President Coles, who gave an informal talk on the state of the College. Six students from local high schools, special guests of the group, were introduced. Peter Barnard '50 showed color slides of the campus.

The following new officers were elected: Nathaniel Barker '29, President and Council Member; and James Bishop '38, Secretary-Treasurer. Retiring Secretary Kenneth Bonenfant '42 gave a brief report. Plans were discussed for the visit of the Bowdoin Glee Club to Houlton in 1959, and tentative plans were announced for a fall meeting in Caribou, possibly in October.

The meeting was adjourned at an early hour, and some of the alumni and guests returned to the Fraser home in Houlton, where Bowdoin ladies had gathered.

BOSTON

At a recent meeting of the officers of the Bowdoin Club of Boston, committees were named to make arrangements for club activities during the 1958-59 season. The chairmen are as follows: Jack Gazlay '34, Sports Night; Bob Bell '42, Annual Dinner; Earle Cook '17, Alumni Day (with possible trek to Brunswick via a special railroad car or two); and Bob Forsberg '53, Bowdoin Night at the Pops.

BRUNSWICK

The Stowe House, recently renovated and re-opened under the management of Don Strong '48, was the site of the annual spring meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Brunswick on May 27. About fifty alumni and guests gathered for a social hour and dinner.

President Herb Gillman '48 opened the meeting by calling for reports from Treasurer Gus Leclair '36 and Council Member Phil Ross '43.

Bill Shaw '36, Director of Admissions, was the speaker of the evening. In about thirty minutes of informal remarks, he covered some major aspects of Bowdoin admissions: general problems, the make-up of the Class of 1962, the scholarship program, and what alumni can do locally to increase the interest of good candidates from the area. A general question and answer period followed.

The following officers were elected: President, Paul Niven '16; Vice President, Donald Parks '28; Secretary-Treasurer, Wolcott Hokanson jr. '50; Council Member, Philmore Ross '43. New directors elected were Emerson Zeitler '20, Gustave Leclair '36, Dr. Robert Stuart '44, David Weatherell '45, Robert Morrell '47, and Russell Douglas '49, who was also appointed Chairman of the Prospective Students Committee. Those directors who continue in office are Gen. Wallace Philoon '05, Clyde Congdon '22, Paul Tiemer '28, Thomas Riley '39, and Mario Tonon '42.

President Niven outlined briefly some projects which the group is considering — a picnic for new faculty members early in the fall; a late summer gathering of local alumni and their families; the entertainment of qualified local subfreshmen; and ways to help publicize the College at the local level.

KENNEBEC VALLEY

The Kennebec Valley Bowdoin Club met at the Augusta Country Club in Manchester on May 14. After a social hour and an excellent dinner, President Robert Martin '41 greeted about thirty alumni and guests.

Director of Athletics Malcolm Morrell '24 presented a lucid account of the athletic situation at Bowdoin. He stressed the point that winning teams will come when alumni and others make it their business to sell Bowdoin to outstanding boys in the secondary schools.

Robert Donham, the new basketball coach, outlined the basketball picture at Bowdoin and gave a short account of his professional basketball experiences and observations, derived from his years with the Boston Celtics.

KNOX-LINCOLN-WALDO

The annual ladies' night was held at the Knox Hotel in Thomaston on May 16. The social hour was followed by a seven o'clock dinner. President Jasper Stahl '09 introduced Professor Nathan Dane '37, the special guest from the campus, who gave an informal talk on the current state of the College.

LOS ANGELES

Secretary Dave Smith '46 and five others held their first monthly luncheon at the Statler Hotel on June 25. Also present were Spinney '13, Dunning '49, Hedges '44, Spurr '46, and Sullivan '35. The group will continue to meet at twelve noon, on the fourth Tuesday of every month, at the Statler. All Bowdoin men in the area are welcome to attend.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

On June 6 at the Arlberg Inn in Gilford, near Laconia, the Bowdoin Club of New Hampshire held its spring meeting. About twenty-five alumni gathered for a social hour and dinner. Guests of the group were two new freshmen and a prospective sub-freshman candidate.

The following officers were elected: President and Council Member, Mayland Morse jr. '42; Vice President, Donald Bryant '37; and Secretary-Treasurer, Ezra Rounds '20.

Hubert Shaw '36, Director of Admissions, was the speaker of the evening. In a short, informal talk, he discussed some current admissions problems, paying particular attention to the make-up of the new freshman class and to the College Scholarship Service and Bowdoin's scholarship program. The interest of the audience was reflected in a question and answer period for the next forty or fifty minutes. Peter Barnard '50 showed color slides of the College and undergraduate activity, and the meeting was adjourned at 10:30.

NORTHERN NEW JERSEY

Members of the Bowdoin Club of Northern New Jersey gathered at the Suburban Hotel in East Orange for a social hour and dinner on May 27. Dean Nathaniel Kendrick gave an informal report on recent campus happenings and the current state of the College.

PENOBSCOT

About forty alumni and their ladies gathered for a social hour and dinner at the Tarratine Club in Bangor on May 14.

President Frederic Newman '38 presided at a short business meeting. Secretary Malcolm Morrell jr. '49 gave a report on the mid-winter meetings of the Alumni Council. Matters concerning athletics and admissions were discussed. The following officers were elected: President, Dr. John Woodcock '44; Vice President, Franklin Eaton '42; Secretary-Treasurer, Malcolm Morrell jr. '49; and Council Member, David Means '33. Plans for the 1959 Bowdoin Glee Club concert in Bangor were discussed.

President Newman introduced his son, Fred jr., and Rod Stevenson, younger brother of Mal Stevenson '50, both juniors at Bangor High School.

Assistant Professor of Education Paul Hazelton '42 sparked a lively session of questions and answers that lasted well over an hour. Every topic pertaining to the College was "fair game," and Mr. Hazelton did an admirable job of answering some difficult questions and analyzing some highly complex situations. The meeting was a vital and informative one which provided a two-way exchange of facts, ideas, and opinions. Mr. Hazelton was applauded for his straightforward, good-humored remarks.

PHILADELPHIA

On the evening of May 22, twenty-four members of the Bowdoin Club of Philadelphia gathered at the Engineers' Club. President Eb Ellis '44 presided at the informal meeting which followed dinner, and members were brought up to date by brief talks from Art Orne '30 and Rip Hovey '26, recent visitors to the campus.

PORTLAND

About seventy-five members attended the annual meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Portland at Valle's in Scarborough on May 23. Following a social hour, a steak dinner was served.

President Marcus Chandler '23 conducted a brief business session. Davison Osgood jr. '53 presented a petition of twenty members for a monthly luncheon in Portland. On his motion, it was voted to instruct the club officers to arrange these luncheons as a fixed feature of the club's activities. Bruce McGorrill '53 reported on the efforts made last year to stage a varsity basketball game in Portland. Schedules and lack of an available hall were some of the difficulties faced. He thinks a game can be arranged next winter. By vote of the club, Mr. McGorrill and his committee were asked to carry on and make the necessary arrangements.

The following officers were elected: Presi- dent, Jotham Pierce '39; First Vice President, Edward Fox '26; Second Vice President, William Ireland jr. '49; Secretary-Treasurer, William Kirkpatrick '49; Council Member, Dr. George Sager '44.

Using as his topic "Faculty, Funds, Freshmen, and Football," President Coles gave an interesting and informative talk on several of today's educational problems as they affect Bowdoin.

RHODE ISLAND

The Bowdoin Club of Rhode Island met on May 13 at the Agawam Hunt Club for a social hour and dinner. The stag affair was attended by about thirty alumni, six entering freshmen, and one subfreshman.

Coach Nels Corey '39 and Director of Admissions Bill Shaw '36 discussed the current state of the College and talked informally with alumni and their guests.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN

On May 24 alumni and their ladies gathered at the Denver home of Fred Malone '50 for a social hour and then adjourned to the Valley Country Club for dinner.

Necrology

1896 JOHN BUDD THOMPSON, M.D., for many years chief surgeon at the Eastern Maine General Hospital, died on June 25, 1958, in Bangor. Born in New York City on November 5, 1874, he prepared at Brunswick High School and following his graduation from Bowdoin entered the Maine Medical School. Ever since he received his M.D. degree in 1899, he had practiced in Bangor.

During World War I, he was a captain in the Army Medical Corps and served for a year in France with the 38th Division. A 32nd degree Mason, he was a member of the American Legion and a Shriner. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Edna Chandler Thompson, whom he married in Brunswick on November 16, 1907; two daughters, Mrs. Danforth Hayes of Worcester, Mass., and Mrs. Richard E. Elliott of Bridgewater, Va.; a son, Robert of Prairie Village, Kan.; and nine grandchildren. His fraternity was Psi Upsilon.

1898 WILLIAM WITHERLE LAWRENCE, Trustee Emeritus of the College and Professor of English at Columbia University for many years, died at his home in Portland on July 25, 1958. Born in Bangor on May 29, 1876, he prepared at Portland High School and was graduated from Bowdoin summa cum laude in 1898. He then studied for a year at the University of Leipzig in Germany and returned to Harvard to do further graduate work. For three years he was an instructor in German at Harvard and received a master of arts degree in 1900 and a doctor of philosophy degree in 1903. He taught for two years at the University of Kansas before joining the faculty at Columbia, where he became a distinguished medievalist with an international reputation. He retired in 1936 and made his home in Portland.

Professor Lawrence was elected to the Board of Overseers in 1921, became a Trustee of the College two years later, and was named Trustee Emeritus in 1952. Bowdoin conferred an honorary degree of doctor of letters upon him in 1917. A trustee of the Portland Public Library and the Portland Society of Art, he was also for many years a trustee of the American-Scandinavian Foundation. In 1930 he was decorated with the Royal Order of Vasa, First Class, in Sweden. He was a fellow of the Medieval Academy of America and a member of the Modern Language Association of America.

Surviving are a sister-in-law, Mrs. Franklin Lawrence of Portland, and two nephews, Richard Lawrence of Cape Elizabeth and Donald Lawrence of South Portland. He was a member of Psi Upsilon and Phi Beta Kappa. (See page 12.)

1901 EDWARD TROWBRIDGE FENLEY, a retired attorney of the Title Division of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, died at his home in West Orange, N. J., on July 23, 1958. Born in Portland on September 21, 1877, he prepared at Portland High School and was graduated from Bowdoin cum laude. He studied for a year at Harvard Law School, practiced law for a time in Portland, and lived in New York City for several years before moving to West Orange in 1919. Following twenty-five years with Metropolitan's home office in New York, he retired in 1948.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Kitty Johnston Fenley; a son, Allan E. '35; and three grandchildren. His fraternity was Kappa Sigma.

1907 CHARLES PENNEY KINSMAN died on June 9, 1958, in Augusta. Born in that city on April 28, 1883, he prepared at Cony High School and at Bowdoin was a standout in football, baseball, and track. He was employed for a short time by a Boston stock and bond firm, then returned to Augusta to enter business with his father, who operated the Capitol Drug Company. He served for five years on the Augusta Board of Aldermen and was elected to two terms in the Maine Legislature. He was also for some years chairman of the Advisory Council of the Maine Fish and Game Department.

Surviving are a son, Charles P. jr. of Augusta; a daughter, Mrs. Frances McAllister of East Williston, L. I., N. Y.; and eleven grandchildren. His fraternity was Delta Kappa Epsilon.

1909 ROBERT KING ATWELL, for many years a translator with the United States War Department, died on February 16, 1958. Born on July 26, 1884, in Portsmouth, N. H., he prepared at the local high school and transferred to Bowdoin as a senior following three years at New Hampshire State College. Following his graduation he taught mathematics at Syracuse University, Cooper Union, the University of Puerto Rico, the Army and Navy College in Marion, Ala., and Texas State College for Women. In 1934 he became a translator in Newark, N. J., with the War Department and retired as Chief Translator in 1951. Since that time he had lived in Oregon.

1911 HAROLD SEWALL WHITE, prominent Maine dairyman, died suddenly at his home in Auburn on June 8, 1958. Born on April 27, 1889, in Lewiston, he prepared at the local high school and following his graduation from Bowdoin entered Harvard Law School. He practiced law for only a few years before entering the dairy business. He was a past president of the Auburn Chamber of Commerce, the Maine State Fair Association, Maine Livestock Breeders, and the Maine Dairymen's Association. At one time he served as swimming coach at Bates College and Edward Little High School in Auburn and was also active in the Auburn Y.M.C.A.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Marion Wellman White, whom he married in Lewiston on June 1, 1915; three sons, John W., Wallace H. III, and Harold S. jr. '39; two daughters, Mrs. Samuel Stoddard jr. of Easton, Pa., and Mrs. Edmund Byrkit of Waukesha, Wis.; a sister, Mrs. Horace P. Stevens of Boothbay Harbor; two brothers, Thomas C. '03 and Donald C. '05; and sixteen grandchildren. His fraternity was Alpha Delta Phi.

1913 WILLIS ELDEN DODGE, retired educator and minister of the Federated Church in Pittsfield, Vt., since 1954, died suddenly while visiting friends in Auburn on June 10, 1958. Born on September 8, 1889, in Calais, he prepared at Hebron Academy and was graduated from Bowdoin cum laude. He taught at Princeton High School, Worcester (Mass.) Academy, and Bransford (Conn.) High School before becoming superintendent of schools in Great Neck, N. Y. He left that position in 1940 and taught Latin and Greek at Western Reserve Academy in Hudson, Ohio, until his retirement in 1954, when he became pastor of the Federated Church. He did graduate work at New York University, Yale, and Columbia and in 1925 received a master of arts degree at Bates.

A veteran of Army service in World War I, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Florence Dunn Dodge, whom he married in St. Stephen, New Brunswick, on August 27, 1918. He was a member of Delta Upsilon and Phi Beta Kappa.

1918 CHARLES HOWARD GORDON, M.D., Portland ear, nose, and throat specialist, died at his home in that city on July 28, 1958. Born on July 11, 1894, in Ashland, N.H., he prepared at the local high school and attended Bowdoin for one year before transferring to the Maine Medical School, from which he received his M.D. degree in 1919. For the next two years he was a teaching fellow and studied at the University of Minnesota, specializing in otolaryngology. In 1921 he continued his studies at Washington University's Sluder Clinic in St. Louis and the following year joined an associate in his specialty in St. Paul, Minn. He opened an office in Portland in 1923.

He was head of the ear, nose, and throat department of Children's Hospital in Portland from 1928 until it became part of the Maine General Hospital. For many years he also served as chief of the otolaryngology department of the Maine Eye and Ear Infirmary. A 32nd degree Mason, he was a member of the American College of Surgeons and the American Academy of Otolaryngology, a trustee of the former Maine Eye and Ear Infirmary, and a diplomate of the American Board of Otolaryngology. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Pauline Drew Gordon, whom he married in Portland on June 16, 1924; a daughter, Mrs. Ruth Anne Eborn of Portland; a brother, Richard S. of Holderness, N. H.; two grandsons, and two nieces.

1925 ENGINE DAVIS ELLIOTT died on July 4, 1958. Born on November 2, 1902, in Winchester, Mass., he prepared at Winchester High School and Wilbraham Academy. He attended Bowdoin for less than one semester and had been ill for many years. Surviving is a brother, Theodore, of Winchester.

1926 GEORGE MERCER STARK, for fifteen years New England representative of the American Mutual Liability Insurance Company, died on June 25, 1958, in Boston. Born on May 10, 1902, in Belfast, Ireland, he prepared at Brookline, Mass., High School and attended Bowdoin for one year before transferring to Tufts. He was graduated from Boston University in 1926 and since that time had been in the insurance business in Baltimore, Md., Philadelphia, and Boston. A member of the Appalachian Mountain Club, he served in the Army during World War II. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mary Miller Stark, whom he married on October 19, 1946, in Newton, Mass.; and a brother, William J. jr. of Wollaston, Mass. His fraternity was Delta Kappa Epsilon.

1929 HUNTINGTON BLATCHFORD, Vice President and Director of the Rockland-Atlas National Bank of Boston, died at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston on July 12, 1958. Born on November 18, 1907, he prepared at Phillips Exeter Academy and following his graduation from Bowdoin entered Harvard Business School, from which he received an M.B.A. degree in 1931. He held various banking jobs in Portland, where he was also manager of a cold storage warehouse and a bond salesman before joining the National Rockland Bank of Boston in 1938. He was a trustee and member of the board of investment of the Wildey Savings Bank and treasurer and director of the Webster and Atlas Building Corporation. Class Agent of 1929 for six years, he was a Director of the Alumni Fund from 1942 to 1945 and also served as secretary of the Bowdoin Club of Boston in 1943.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Evelyn Parker

Blatchford, whom he married in Cape Elizabeth on August 17, 1935; three sons, Huntington jr., Mitchell Parker, and Edward W. II; two brothers, Lawrence '24 and C. Hammond jr.; and a sister, Mrs. John S. Van Etten. He was a member of Alpha Delta Phi fraternity.

1948 FREDERIC RICHARD WOODRUFF, JR. died on May 29, 1958, in Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston following heart surgery. Born on June 20, 1926, in Potsdam, N. Y., he prepared at the local high school. At Bowdoin he was a James Bowdoin Scholar and was named the second recipient of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Cup. Following his graduation cum laude, he entered Cornell Law School, where he was elected to the Board of Governors of the American Law Student Association. In 1952 he was appointed clerk of St. Lawrence County Surrogate Court. Always interested in politics, he served as a political science instructor in summer sessions at Hamilton College and was employed by the New York State Republican Committee during the 1950 gubernatorial campaign.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Lorraine Stratton Woodruff, whom he married in Hamilton, N. Y., on January 17, 1954; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic R. Woodruff of Potsdam; and a brother, David H. '52. His fraternity was Chi Psi.

Medical School

1900 CLARENCE PREBLE DOTEN died in Winter Park, Fla., on June 7, 1958, after a long illness. Born in Portland on February 19, 1877, he prepared at Westbrook Seminary and attended the Maine Medical School at Bowdoin during 1898 and 1902. For many years he was associated with his brother in the Doten Grain Company in Portland. He moved to Winter Park in 1945. Surviving are a step-daughter, Mrs. Grover B. Todd of South Portland, a niece, and a nephew.

1911 ALBERT KILBURN BALDWIN, M.D., for many years an anesthetist in Long Beach, Calif., died there on May 12, 1958. Born on March 25, 1878, in Taunton, Mass., he prepared at New Hampton School and was graduated from Bates College in 1905. Before entering the Maine Medical School at Bowdoin he was a Congregational clergyman. For twelve years he practiced in Portland, then went to Long Beach in 1923. He returned to his native Taunton in 1938 and remained there for four years before returning to Long Beach. A member of the American Society of Anesthesiologists, he was also a Fellow of the International College of Anesthesia. He is survived by a son, Marshall A. '24.

1914 JOHN HENRY MOULTON, M.D., for more than thirty years a physician in Rangeley, died at his home there on July 31, 1958, while playing chess. Born in Limington on October 25, 1889, he prepared at Limington Academy and graduated from Bates College in 1910. Following his graduation from the Maine Medical School in 1914, he practiced in Litchfield, Jonesport, and Stratton before settling in Rangeley in 1925. He was a Mason and a member of the Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias. Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Martha Kirby of Coastamesa, Calif., and Mrs. Barbara Eastwood of Rangeley; two sons, John jr. of Rangeley and Robert G. of Portland; and ten grandchildren.

News Of The Classes

1823 "Greatness of William Pitt Fessenden Cited at Historical Society Meeting" was the title of an article which appeared in the June 12 issue of the Portland Press Herald. Largely a report on a talk by Professor Charles A. Jellison of the University of New Hampshire, the article traced the high points of Fessenden's career. "In a day when integrity and ability were rare in Washington," Dr. Jellison said, "Fessenden stood out like a pheasant among crows. Maine should be proud of him."

The speech was given at the annual meeting of the Maine Historical Society on June 11.

1888 Horatio Card and Albert Tolman returned for their Seventieth Reunion in June. Theirs was the senior class represented both in the Commencement parade and at the Commencement Dinner.

1890 Secretary, Wilmot B. Mitchell
6 College Street
Brunswick

Wilmot Mitchell and Oliver Turner were on hand to represent 1890 at Commencement.

George Sears, retired Judge of the First District Court of Essex County (Mass.), celebrated his ninety-third birthday on June 5.

Oliver Turner reports that he has had a central blindness since July of 1957, which makes it impossible for him to read — or to see what he writes. He voluntarily surrendered his driving license last August — after driving since 1902.

1891 Secretary, Dr. Charles S. F. Lincoln
38 College Street
Brunswick

Two members of 1891, Tom Burr and Charles Lincoln, were at Commencement in June.

1894 Secretary, Francis W. Dana
8 Bramhall Street
Portland

Arthur Chapman and Francis Dana held a two-man Sixty-fourth Reunion in June.

1896 Secretary, Francis S. Dane
43 Highland Avenue
Lexington 73, Mass.

The Secretary was the only member of the class to return for Commencement in June. Regular attendee Carleton Merrill was forced to stay home in Skowhegan, where he is recovering from injuries sustained in a fall earlier in the year.

1897 Secretary, George E. Carmichael
Wolfeboro, N. H.

Carmichael, Cook, and Gilman were back in June for Commencement.

As an individual alumnus and, in recent years, through the Davenport-Hatch Foundation, the late Augustus T. Hatch was a generous supporter of the College. His daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Hatch Hildebrandt and Mrs. Helen Hatch Taylor, together with other members of the Davenport-Hatch Foundation, have given the College $5,000 to establish the Augustus T. Hatch Loan Fund. The gift is not only a timely and welcome one; it is also a fitting memorial to a man who financed his own course at Bowdoin.

Admiral Donald MacMillan spent some time at the Army base at the Sondre Strom fiord on the west coast of Greenland this summer. He instructed Army enlisted men in the technique of Arctic travel and methods of survival under extreme conditions.

1899 Secretary, Edward R. Godfrey
172 Kenduskeag Avenue
Bangor

The Class Secretary enjoyed Commencement this year but was disappointed not to find any classmates there to enjoy it with him. During their trip to the Canary Islands in the spring, the Godfreys met Paul Eames '21 and his wife. Previously, Ed had met Gorham Wood '95, by chance, in Madrid.

The Win Smiths spent the winter in Florida and are now in East Hebron, N. H., for their forty-second summer there.

1900 Secretary, Robert S. Edwards
202 Reedsdale Road
Milton 86, Mass.

Three stalwarts from 1900 were on hand in June: Bass, Chapman, and Williams.

1901 Secretary, Roland E. Clark
c/o First Portland National Bank
400 Congress Street
Portland 3

Berry, Clark, and Gardner represented the Class at Commencement in June.

1902 Secretary, Hudson Sinkinson
North Waterboro

Barker and Sinkinson were back for Commencement.

Dr. Fred Stanwood, who was named General Practitioner of the Year 1957 by the Charles River District Medical Society, was one of 26 physicians presented with 50-year membership badges at the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Medical Society on May 20.

1903 Secretary, Clement F. Robinson
P.O. Box 438
Brunswick

Returning for Commencement in June, on the occasion of their Fifty-fifth Reunion, were Clifford, Dana, Evans, Gray, Merrill, Munro, Perkins, Ridlon, Robinson, and White.

Edward Dunlap reports the arrival of a grandson, Edward IV, on March 21.

1904 Secretary, Wallace M. Powers
37-28 80th Street
Jackson Heights
New York, N. Y.

The nine members of 1904 who returned for Commencement were Beane, Burpee, Coan, Emerson, Frost, Packard, Powers, Putnam, and Shorey.

1905 Secretary, Stanley Williams
2220 Waverley Street
Palo Alto, Calif.

Cushing, Donnell, Philoon, Pierce, and White were back for Commencement.

Classmates and friends will be happy to know that Frank Day has made a good recovery from a fall earlier this year. A smashed elbow has mended well.

At the Colby College Commencement on June 9 Leonard Pierce received an honorary doctor of laws degree. The citation read in part, "... an outstanding leader of your profession, universally respected and honored by your fellow citizens, you have become a symbol of integrity and fair play, and to you your embattled fellow citizens have turned when injustice appears about to prevail. When devastation threatened Mayflower Hill and its possibility of expansion to the east was about to be cut off, you took your place at the forefront of its defenders, putting all your resources of courage, intelligence, finesse, and skill at its disposal. Future generations of Colby men and women will have reason to be thankful for the success of your efforts and the College today applauds your victory with gratitude and pride."

Edward Newton, author of the historical novel The Rogue and the Witch, was awarded a bachelor of divinity degree by Bangor Theological Seminary in June.

1906 Secretary, Fred E. Smith
9 Oak Avenue
Norway

Three members of the Class, Copeland, Johnson, and Smith, attended Commencement.

Thaddeus Roberts' son, John, a design engineer employed by the General Electric Company in Lynn, Mass., recently received the R. A. Warner Award for the "best invention in 1957." The device, an instrument for detecting very small leaks of FREON gas (used in refrigerating and air-conditioning systems), has been adopted by the government for use in the Nautilus and other atomic submarines.

1907 Secretary, John W. Leydon
3120 West Penn Street
Philadelphia, Pa.

For a fine Fifty-first, the following classmates returned in June: Adams, Allen, Drummond, Halford, Leydon, Mincher, Pike, Roberts, and Winchell.

The Neal Allens' daughter, Miss Barbara Wingate Allen, was married on June 29 to Robert D. Atwood.

Roscoe Hupper has presented two more valuable Longfellow letters to the College. One was written in 1847 and the other in 1877.

Mrs. John B. Henry, Star Route Box 75, Ashland, Oregon, widow of Dwight Robinson, has been a loyal supporter of the Class and never fails to contribute each year to the Alumni Fund in his memory.

Ralph Small is bed-ridden now in Fall River, Mass. The people of Fall River honored Ralph by naming a school for him, which is appropriate in view of his many years of service there at the B.M.C. Durfee High School.

1908 Secretary, Edward T. Sanborn
503 North Lionel Street
Goldsboro, N. C.

The Class of 1908 celebrated its Fiftieth Reunion in June. Highlight of the occasion was the dinner and outing at the Falmouth Foreside home of Dr. and Mrs. Carl Robinson. Campus headquarters were 20 Hyde Hall and Conference Room B of the Moulton Union.

Those returning were Crowley, Davis, Garcelon, Kilborn, Leavitt, Parker, Pullen, Putnam, Robinson, Sanborn, Scates, Stetson, Timberlake, Toole, and Weston. The Phil Timberlakes, who came all the way from Riverside, Calif., made the long-distance record. Runners-up were Bill Crowley (from Miami, Fla.), Karl Kilborn (from Akron, Ohio), and two classmates from North Carolina, Sturgis Leavitt and Tal Sanborn.

Rufus Stetson received an honorary Doctor of Science degree at Commencement. Present to see him receive it were his three sons.

The Phil Timberlakes took advantage of their June trip from California to Maine to visit his nephew, Vice President Richard Nixon, in Washington, D. C.

1909 Secretary, Irving L. Rich
11 Mellen Street
Portland 4

The eleven members of 1909 who returned to the College for Commencement this June were Brewster, H. Hinckley, W. Hinckley, Moulton, Rich, Richardson, Smith, Stahl, Stanley, Stone, and Timberlake.

Dan McDade was honored in June for his 22 years of service to Beaver Boys' State in Oregon when he received a handsome, engraved copper cigarette lighter. Dan prepared this year's Boys' State Handbook, given to all those in attendance. He still selects jury panels in the county and serves as public relations man for the American Legion. Somehow Dan doesn't find time to get as much done around the yard as in the past. Classmates will be sorry to learn that Mrs. McDade continues to be in poor health.

1910 Secretary, E. Curtis Matthews
Piscataqua Savings Bank
Portsmouth, N. H.

The following were back in June for Commencement: Atwood, Bailey, Brown, Cary, Chapman, Crosby, Evans, Matthews, Peters, Tuttle, Warren, S. Webster, and Wing. On Friday members and their wives gathered at the Wiscasset Inn for dinner.

Edgar Fisher is recovering from a heart attack and a subsequent serious operation. His wife reported in May that he was "holding his own."

Incumbent Robert Hale has again won the Republican nomination to run this fall for the House of Representatives from the First Maine District.

1911 Secretary, Ernest G. Fifield
30 East 42nd Street
New York, N. Y.

Representing 1911 at Commencement were Bailey, Black, Emerson, Hansen, Hussey, Oxnard, Sanborn, Weatherill, and Weeks.

114 Atlantic Avenue
Boothbay Harbor

The Class of 1912 was represented by eleven members at the June Commencement: Andrews, Bragdon, Briggs, Bryant, Cousins, Greenleaf, Locke, McKenney, Marsh, Purington, and Woodcock.

Harold Andrews, Justice of the Rhode Island Supreme Court, was made a Bowdoin doctor of laws at Commencement.

Fred Hart's retirement address is now 115 Maron Street, St. Petersburg, Fla. "So far we like it here very much," he says.

Rann Henry has retired, but five grandchildren keep him "busy."

The Class Secretary was the keynote speaker at the opening session of the 75th annual YMCA state convention at Waterville on April 25.

A surprised alumnus at Commencement was Seward Marsh, when the Alumni Service Award was given to him.

Carl Timberlake, mathematics instructor at the Crosby High School since 1921, retired in June. He plans to continue living in Waterbury, Conn., and devoting much of his time to his hobby, painting.

Dr. Allan Woodcock is the new President-Elect of the Maine Medical Association. He will assume the presidency in 1959.

1913 Secretary, Luther G. Whittier
R.F.D. 2
Farmington

Our Forty-fifth Reunion, with headquarters in 19 Hyde Hall and Conference Room A of the Moulton Union, attracted twenty-nine classmates: C. Abbott, Buck, Conant, Cummings, Cushman, L. Dodge, Dole, Dunphy, Holt, Jones, Kennedy, Lunt, McMurtrie, McNeally, Moulton, Norton, Page, Parkhurst, Philoon, Pike, Savage, Sewall, Shackford, Tuttle, Twombly, Walker, Whittier, Wish, and Wood. "Honorary member" Professor-Emeritus Orren Hormell was also present. Our Friday outing was held at the Lookout Point House in Harpswell.

At the Friday banquet during Commencement weekend, Fletcher Twombly was elected Class President to succeed the late Ced Crowell.

Chester Abbott, President of the First Portland National Bank, was pictured in the June 12 issue of the Portland Press Herald as he presented a check for the first student loan guaranteed by the New England Higher Education Assistance Foundation to the Foundation's president. The loan guarantee fund was raised by contributions from Maine industries to help worthy students meet college expenses.

Senator and Mrs. Paul Douglas have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Jean Taft Douglas, to Daniel Brisker of Israel. Miss Douglas is a graduate of Swarthmore College and the New York School of Social Welfare. Mr. Brisker is a director of a Youth Village in Israel.

Sumner Pike has been nominated as the Republican candidate for a seat in the Maine House of Representatives.

The George Lincoln Skolfield jr. Professorship has been established at Bowdoin. The department in which the professorship is held will change and will be determined from time to time. The Skolfield Professorship has been established from part of the Solon E. and Lida Skolfield Turner Fund which came to the College from the Lida S. Turner estate in 1949. It honors our classmate, who died in 1941.

1914 Secretary, Alfred E. Gray
Francestown, N. H.

In June eight members of the Class returned for Commencement: Cole, Farrar, Gray, LaCasce, Loeffler, Merrill, Pratt, and E. Thompson.

Members of the Class who were back for Commencement held an informal meeting on Saturday morning, June 14. Plans were discussed for our Forty-fifth, which comes up next year, and a committee has been named to make the arrangements. Chairman Warren Eddy is being assisted by Bill Farrar and Arthur Merrill.

General Willard G. Wyman '20, who retired this summer as Commanding General of the U.S. Continental Army Command at Fort Monroe, Va., is shown here following through on a tradition at the War Memorial Museum in Warwick, Va., as he presents personal mementos denoting phases of his forty years of military service. One of his gifts was a plaque bearing the insignia of Republic of Korea Army units who fought in General Wyman's 9th U.S. Army Corps in 1951-52.

A second gift was a rifle and chest, presented to him by the General Staff of the Turkish Army while he was NATO Commander of Allied Land Forces Southeast Europe.

Lew Brown attended the Northeast Conference on Masonic Education in Boston on June 12-14. He was the delegate representing the Grand Lodge of Maine.

Dr. Henry Dixon has been ill since January of 1957. In December he entered the hospital in Norwich, Conn. His classmates hope to hear that there's been an improvement so that he can go back home soon.

Alfred Newcombe, Professor of History at Knox College in Illinois, received a doctor of laws degree at the Knox commencement in June. A most heartwarming and moving tribute occurred when, spontaneously and unrehearsed, the graduating seniors rose to their feet in his honor. Again next year he will be teaching half time, about six hours a week.

1915 Secretary, Harold E. Verrill
436 Exchange Street
Portland

Returning for Commencement were Dow, Fish, J. Lewis, MacDonald, Smith, Stowell, Talbot, Van Keegan, and Verrill.

1916 Secretary, Dwight Sayward
415 Congress Street
Portland

Baxter, Cronin, Fitzgerald, Garland, Ginty, Har- graves, Hart, Hodgkins, Ireland, Moulton, Niven, and Sayward returned in June for Commencement.

John Baxter has been re-appointed to the Industrial Advisory Committee of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston for a one-year term.

John was elected President of the Bowdoin College Chapter (Alpha of Maine) of Phi Beta Kappa at the June meeting.

Paul Niven's Brunswick Record is getting a new home. Last June construction was begun on a new structure on Industry Drive in Brunswick which will have 7,750 square feet of floor space and will house the Brunswick Publishing Company, which publishes The Brunswick Record and does other general printing. It is expected that the new plant will be ready in the fall, at which time the company will move from its present location on the ground floor of the Dunlap Block, where it has been located for nearly half a century.

The trustees of Bangor Theological Seminary have honored Dr. Harry Trust, President-Emeritus, by naming a professorship for him.

Leigh Webber has resigned as Town Manager of Oakland to assume a similar office in Wells. He left Oakland in June after serving there for two years.

Charles Wyman is Vice President of North American Warranty Corporation. This concern warranties used cars after inspection for one full year to cover major parts replacement and labor, anywhere in the United States, with no mileage restrictions.

Hamlin, Hanson, Haskell, Hildreth, Johnson, MacCormick, Matthews, Nevens, Norton, Ripley, Sloggett, Stanley, Stearns, Stetson, J. Thomas, Warren, Woodman, and H. Young. Headquarters were in 3 South Appleton, and we held our Friday outing at Sebasco Estates.

Bob Albion, Professor of Oceanic History at Harvard University, wrote a review of Victory: The Life of Lord Nelson, which appeared in a recent issue of the New York Times Book Review Section. It was entitled "Master Tactician, Great Sea Captain, and Romantic Centerpiece of Scandal."

Lloyd Claff, awarded an honorary Doctor of Science degree by Bowdoin in June, was the subject of an interesting article in the Boston Sunday Herald of May 25 which traced his interesting dual careers in the worlds of business and industry and of science. An accompanying photograph showed Lloyd and Leland Wyman, Professor of Biology at Boston University, as they worked with several students in the University's laboratory.

John Matthews, Headmaster of Malden (Mass.) High School, and also a trustee of the Malden library for the past eight years, was the subject of much of a column entitled "This Week at the Library" in the Malden News for June 3.

Alphabet Smith has recently made a splendid gift to Bowdoin's Department of Geology.

1919 Secretary, Donald S. Higgins
78 Royal Road

The Class was represented at Commencement by Farrar, Finn, Foulke, Hersum, McCarthy, McDonald, and Paul.

Portland's newest elementary school, the Fred P. Hall jr. School, was dedicated on June 4.

Dr. Milton McGorrell was one of the leading churchmen who participated in the 130th annual convention of the Universalist Church of Maine, of which he is superintendent.

Benjamin Smethurst was married on May 17 to Mrs. Beryl S. Richardson of Lowell, Mass. Ben's new address is 134 Sixth Street, Lowell.

1920 Secretary, Sanford B. Cousins
200 East 66th Street
New York 21, N. Y.

Back in June were Cleaves, Cousins, Curtis, Rounds, Small, Waltz, and Zeitler.

Pike Rounds has been re-elected Secretary-Treasurer of the Bowdoin Club of New Hampshire.

Just 14 years after their participation in the D-Day assault on Normandy, General Willard Wyman was guest of honor at the birthday celebration of the First Infantry Division at Fort Riley, Kan., on June 6. Bill has since retired as Commanding General of the Continental Army.

1921 Secretary, Norman W. Haines
Savings Bank Building
Reading, Mass.

Members of the Class who returned for Commencement were Benton, Claff, Cole, Holmes, Laughlin, Milliken, Pennell, and Schonland.

Kenneth Boardman retired on June 30, 1957, after more than 26 years in the federal service, including work with the Federal Trade Commission, Securities and Exchange Commission, Lend-Lease Administration, Foreign Economic Administration, and the Forest Products Division of the U. S. Department of Commerce.

1922 Secretary, Albert R. Thayer
40 Longfellow Avenue
Brunswick

In June these members of 1922 returned for Commencement: Bernstein, Congdon, W. Hall, Morrell, Pickard, Sleeper, Thayer, Thomas, B. White, Wilson, Woodbury, and M. Young.

Louis Bernstein, retiring President of the Alumni Council, has been elected an Overseer of the College.

Bruce White's son, Houghton '58, graduated in June from Bowdoin and will begin medical studies in the fall.

Robley Wilson reports the arrival of a grandson, Stephen Eastman Wilson, on April 21. The father, Robley C. Wilson jr., is a member of the Class of 1952.

1923 Secretary, Richard Small
59 Orland Street
Portland

The Class held its Thirty-fifth Reunion in June. Room 3, South Moore, was our headquarters, and we held our outing at the Seguin Lodge in Georgetown. Those who returned were Allen, Bates, Berman, Bramson, M. Chandler, H. Crawford, G. Davis, Healy, Hill, Hussey, Kimball, MacDonald, McLaughlin, Mason, Miller, Parcher, Parsons, E. P. Perkins, Philbrick, Quinby, Reed, Schwind, R. Small, D. Smith, J. Smith, Walker, Webb, Wilder, and Willis.

King Turgeon, Byron Brown, and Steve Palmer were all sorry to be unable to return for Reunion. They had to change their plans at the last minute. At the Class Dinner, Frank MacDonald was recognized for his able assistance to Class Agent Fat Hill. Fat and Frank were presented with miniature porcelain polar bears as tokens of esteem by classmates. And our special guest was Jack Magee, Track Coach Emeritus, who is an honorary member of 1923.

Stephen Palmer's son Park is at the University of Pennsylvania; son Stephen jr. (11) is at the Fay School; and son Jonathan (5) is in kindergarten.

Frank Pierce was nominated in the June primary as a Republican candidate for Hancock County State Senator.

Bus Webb returned for our Thirty-fifth, the first time he's been back in many years. He drove across country, all the way from Los Angeles. The members of the Alumni Council were mighty surprised on June 13 when Bus popped up as Club Representative from that distant Bowdoin group more than 3,500 transcontinental miles away.

1924 Secretary, Clarence D. Rouillard
124 Roxborough Drive
Toronto 5, Ontario
Canada

Sixteen members of 1924 signed in at Commencement: Burnell, Cousins, Dow, Fowler, Gilpatrick, Grenfell, Hamilton, Jardine, J. Johnson, R. Johnson, McMennamin, Merrill, Morrell, Ross, Simon, and Weymouth.

Mal Morrell was tremendously surprised when his name was read as the recipient of the Alumni Service Award at the Commencement Dinner.

Dave Needleman has ended six years of semi-retirement and is now on a full-time schedule as office and sales manager for the Albert R. Jacobson Company in Portland.

Perhaps it's later than you think!

Your son. His eager young mind is on football now. But soon, in high school, he'll be grappling with Science, and English and History. Then, almost before you know it, you and he will be trying to decide on where he'll go to college.

Will you be too late?

At this very moment our colleges and universities are facing a crisis. Despite all their efforts to meet the challenge of growing pressure for applications, they are hampered by lack of funds. That pressure will continue and increase. The number of boys and girls who want to go to college—and will be qualified to go to college—is expected to double in 10 years.

Meanwhile the needed expansion is far more than a matter of adding classrooms, laboratories and dormitory space. There must be a corresponding increase in faculty strength. The profession of college teaching must attract and hold more first-rate minds.

This problem vitally affects not only students and their parents but business and industry as well. There is a pressing need for scientists—for teachers and civic leaders—for business administrators and home-makers—who have learned to think well and choose wisely. They are and will continue to be the backbone of our strength as a nation.

Freedom needs educated people. In this country, those who lead are those who know. Help the colleges or universities of your choice—now!

If you want to know what the college crisis means to you, send for the free booklet, "The Closing College Door," to: Box 36, Times Square Station, New York 36, New York.
